PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 100th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

SENATE—Wednesday, September 7, 1988

The Senate met at 10 a.m., and was called to order by the Honorable QUENTIN N. BURDICK, a Senator from the State of North Dakota.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Richard C. Halverson, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Let us pray:

Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. But his delight is in the law of the Lord; and in his law doth he meditate day and night. And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.—Psalm 1:1-3.

Gracious God, our loving Father in heaven, thank Thee for the profound assurance of Psalm 1. In the fleeting hope upon which human optimism feeds at election time—and in the inevitable disappointment by which human failure stokes the fires of discontent—help us to apprehend the transcendent, unfailing reality which the psalmist guarantees the one who takes seriously the absolute and immutable law and love of God.

In Jesus' name. Amen.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore [Mr. STENNIS].

The assistant legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, September 7, 1988.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, section 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable QUENTIN N. BURDICK, a Senator from the State of North Dakota, to perform the duties of the Chair.

JOHN C. STENNIS,
President pro tempore.

Mr. BURDICK thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia.

THE JOURNAL

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Journal of the proceedings be approved to date.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE CHAPLAIN'S PRAYER

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I am grateful for the Chaplain's prayer, coming on this morning of our return from the August recess. It reminds us of the need to maintain touch with the spiritual side of life.

The Scriptures he quoted were beautiful, and it was one of the most inspiring prayers that I have heard, telling us to keep in mind that in all of the mad rush of life we can draw strength from the great God of the Universe if we walk in spirit with Him and are obedient to His will.

Edwin Markham penned some lines which I think, perhaps, are somewhat the same in thought as that of the beautiful prayer by the Chaplain.

The builder who first bridged Niagara's gorge,
Before he swung his cable, shore to shore,
Sent out across the gulf his venturing kite
Bearing a slender cord for unseen hands
To grasp upon the further cliff and draw
A greater cord, and then a greater yet;
Till at the last across the chasm swung
The cable—then the mighty bridge in air!
So we may send our little timid thought
Across the void, out to God's reaching hands—
Send out our love and faith to thread the deep—
Thought after thought until the little cord
Has greatened to a chain no chance can break,
And—we are anchored to the Infinite!

Mr. President, I am delighted to see, again, my good friend the Republican leader, fresh from the convention, fresh from the recess. I look forward to working with him during these remaining days as we mold and put together the schedule of work that must be done before the sine die adjournment. And I want to say that I am pleased to see him in such good health and smiling as always, and I look forward to our working together.

I also look forward to working with our friend BILL PROXMIRE. He is going to voluntarily retire at the end of the session. I shall miss him when he does retire, but during these remaining 4 or 5 weeks we have much work to do and I shall cherish the moments in which we may be able to meet together and talk together and work together as always, here on the floor when the Senate opens each day. If I am not here to open the Senate, he is here to open the Senate for me. And if I am here to open the Senate, he is here to be recognized and to speak.

I think it is time now that I yield the floor and let the Republican leader make his comments and then Senator PROXMIRE will seek recognition.

Mr. DOLE. I will yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I want to thank my good friend the majority leader for his very, very gracious and generous statement. He is a wonderful leader and it is a great pleasure to work with him and that outstanding Republican leader, Senator DOLE.

RECOGNITION OF THE REPUBLICAN LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I yield briefly to the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin.

A SURPRISINGLY NONPOLITICAL FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, last month the Federal Reserve Board increased the discount rate from 6 to 6½ percent. Many persons viewed that as a signal that interest rates would rise across the board. Would the higher discount rate mean higher interest rates on housing loans and auto loans? Would that slow down activity and increase unemployment in those two critical industries? Could this begin to trigger a recession? Or would it simply slow an economy that might be beginning to overheat? Would the Federal Reserve action ease inflation? In view of the timing of the Federal Reserve's action, the political community was specially concerned with the prospect that higher interest rates less than 3 months before the Presidential election might shift a few million votes from Republican BUSH to Democratic Dukakis. Since the coming election is expected to be very close and since bread-and-butter economic issues could be a critical factor, was this discount rate shift a political coup for the Democratic Party?

● This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by the Member on the floor.

After all, the last increase in the discount rate was September 1987, a month after Chairman Alan Greenspan took office. At that time, the Fed raised the discount rate from 5½ to 6 percent. Why should a board consisting of six members all appointed for the first time in memory by the same President, the incumbent Republican President Ronald Reagan, take an action that could conceivably in a close election defeat the Reagan Vice President, the very man whom President Reagan is so anxious to have succeed him?

The answer is that the increase in the discount rate was necessary and logical, No. 1. No. 2, the effect of this discount rate increase—in the judgment of most professional economists—would not affect the economy for between 6 and 18 months. So the political fallout from the action will be nil.

Why was the increase in the discount rate necessary and logical? In the nearly 1 year since the Fed last raised the discount rate by one-half of 1 percent, interest rates generally have risen. The 3-month Treasury bill rate was 5.9 percent last January. By the time the discount rate was raised, the 3 month T-bill rate had risen to 6.89 percent. Longer term interest rates had also risen. The 10-year Treasury bond rate, for example, climbed from 8.67 to 9.12 percent since last January. The prime rate climbed even faster. In September of 1987 when the Fed lifted the discount rate from 5½ to 6 percent, the prime was 8¼ percent. By last July, it had climbed to 9½ percent. It is now 10 percent.

Many economists contend that the Fed simply adjusts the discount rate to keep it in rough relation to other market interest rates. Based on this theory, the Fed action in raising the discount rate was overdue and was simply a reaction to the pace already established by the market. If the Fed had failed to raise the discount rate, the Fed would be providing the banking system with a substantial subsidized profit. The discount rate is the rate paid by banks to the Federal Reserve Board when they borrow from the Fed to comply with Reserve requirements. At the level of the discount rate before the Fed raised it last August, the banks were enjoying an unearned windfall.

What evidence is there that the increase in the discount rate will not increase interest rates generally? First, there is the general conviction on the part of those who have observed the course of interest rates over the years that both open market operations, that is the Federal Reserve's trading in Treasury securities, and changes in the discount rate take time to work their way through the market. One striking example is in the performance of the interest rate changes on adjustable rate mortgages. An article in the New York Times on August 11 reports that nearly 60 percent of new home mortgages made by our financial institutions have mortgages with adjustable rates. And about 95 percent of all home equity loans have variable rates. In view of the colossal size of the mortgage market and the fact that home mortgages constitute far and away the lion's share of household borrowing, a rise in this mortgage rate would obviously have a profound effect on literally millions of American families.

So what effect could the rise in the discount rate have on the interest rate paid by millions of Americans? The answer is in two parts. First, because the discount rate increase is primarily a catch-up with the rise in market interest rates generally, the effect would be slight. Second, adjustable mortgage rates are only changed between once a year and once every 3 years. So it is obvious that the effect of the increase in the discount rate on home mortgages will come, if at all, long after the November election.

Nevertheless, in spite of the fact that the Fed's action will have little or no effect on interest rates and even less on the economy between the time the action was taken in early August and the election, it is reassuring to see a Federal Reserve Board entirely appointed by President Reagan taking action on interest rates that may help in the long run to stem inflation. It is just possible that the psychological effect of this Fed action on the stock market which fell more than 100 points on the Dow Jones index in the week following the Fed's move might have had some very minor political effect.

AIR FORCE WINS GOLDEN FLEECE FOR AUGUST

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, due to the length of the recent recess, I rise today to award my Golden Fleece of the Month Award for August to the Department of the Air Force for taking off with over $22,000 in taxpayer money, the cost of ferrying two Air Force officials to and from a quail breakfast in Washington, DC. By using this military aircraft for a social engagement, the Air Force has played the American taxpayer for a pigeon.

According to the Air Force, a KC-135 air refueling jet was authorized to fly the round trip from Oklahoma to Washington because it was scheduled to conduct two refueling training missions during the flight. Neither of these refueling events took place. However, the flight was not canceled. This is the classic example of military officials feathering their own nest and then expecting the American public to be too chicken to squawk about it.

This plane can carry 60 troops, but on this flight it contained only two officers. It costs $2,334 per hour to fly the KC-135 and the round trip was nearly 6 hours long. Even in this era of rising airfares, it would have been considerably cheaper for these officials to fly on a commercial airline. Twenty-two thousand dollars may seem like bird feed to the Air Force, but the huge Federal deficit continues to soar because some officials like to fly high. I do not think that the taxpayer should have to swallow such ridiculous expenditures.

To make matters worse, after the plane returned to its base, most of the crew were then sent out on a refueling mission on another plane. This resulted in further flight and crew costs. The Air Force would like us to believe that this flight of fancy was beneficial because the crew was allowed to land at an unfamiliar airfield, but I think that the taxpayers realize that they have been winged in the pocketbook by this bird-brained flight.

How can we expect to navigate through the present economic turbulence if efforts to reduce the budget overruns are shot out of the sky like clay pigeons? I hope that the officials who traveled on this flight were just odd ducks, but I fear that others are preying on the U.S. Treasury.

I will continue to bird-dog these types of abuses, but this situation does prove one thing—"the dodo is not yet extinct."

SENATOR JOHN WILLIAMS, A MONUMENT TO INTEGRITY

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, Senator John Williams, of Delaware, served in this body from 1946 through 1970. He was a Senator of absolute, unquestioned honesty. He was more.

John Williams took on the most powerful people in our Government, including three Presidents of the United States, two in his own party. With monumental persistence, he succeeded in exposing and eliminating top officials in two administrations. If ever there was a scourge of corruption, it was John Williams. John Barron has written an extraordinarily moving article in the Readers Digest about this modest, self-effacing fighter for good government.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNFORGETTABLE JOHN WILLIAMS

(By John Barron)

When John J. Williams first ran for the U.S. Senate in 1946, political experts regarded his candidacy as a joke.

At 42, he looked presentable enough—tall and lanky, with thinning brown hair, steel-gray eyes and a pleasant face brightened by a hesitant smile. But outside Millsboro, Del. (pop. 470), where he sold chicken feed, few had heard of him. Williams had no political experience, no organization, and he refused campaign contributions.

Yet the obscure Republican unseated popular Democratic Senator James Tunnell. During the next 24 years Williams saved taxpayers billions of dollars, drove hundreds of dishonest people from government and inspired enduring reforms. Said Sen. Sam Ervin (D., N.C.), who later directed the Watergate investigation, "John Williams did more to expose mismanagement and corruption in government than any other Senator in history."

I was a young Washington newspaper reporter when I first met Williams in 1963. Professional contacts evolved into a lifelong personal friendship. The longer I knew him, the more I saw personified in him the true spirit of America.

John Williams was born in 1904, the ninth of 11 children. His father was a farmer, and life on Delaware's Eastern Shore was austere. Though chores took up much of his time, John was an outstanding student. He solved complicated math problems in his head, and could race through a Zane Grey novel in two hours. Given his family's finances, however, he never thought about college.

After 11th grade, he dropped out of high school to work as a grocery clerk. Later he opened a tiny feed dealership with borrowed money. At 19, Williams married Elsie Steele and built a house. Elsie took care of their daughter and raised chickens. Williams devoted himself to business and, despite the Great Depression, attained financial independence by the late 1930s.

World War II brought wage and price controls, rationing and a labyrinth of regulations dictating what farmers and small businessmen could and could not do. When Washington proposed to perpetuate these controls after the war, Williams rebelled. "The government is meddling in our business," he told voters as he announced his candidacy for the Senate. "It's time we got into the business of government."

Williams spoke not one unkind word about the incumbent; indeed, he and Tunnell became friends as they traveled the state, debating issues. Though a colorless orator, Williams proved exceptional in face-to-face talk with voters.

After the election, Williams hired Eleanor Lenhart, his daughter's good friend, as his secretary. He wanted someone he trusted totally, and he'd known her all her life. Williams laid down strict rules for himself and his staff: Accept no gifts. Befriend any constituent unjustly treated by government, but never try to intercede to procure preferential treatment for anyone.

Williams often shunned Washington social life. Instead, he sequestered himself in his office or small apartment, reading legislation and arcane government reports.

One afternoon Lenhart saw the Senator turn ashen. The Wilmington office of the Federal Internal Revenue Bureau had listed him among income-tax delinquents. "Could I really have forgotten to mail the money?" he asked. When canceled checks proved he hadn't, Williams smelled corruption.

He ferreted out the complete list of citizens the Wilmington office alleged were delinquent. On it were people Williams knew always paid their taxes. He pressed for an investigation, and a solitary Wilmington tax collector was convicted of embezzlement. Still, Williams wondered, Could such fraud occur without Washington's knowledge?

For two years Williams carried on a tireless investigation, aided by honest revenue workers who slipped him secret documents. On February 5, 1951, he rose on the Senate floor. "Our tax system is shot full of cheap political manipulation," he declared. In the following months Williams exposed case after case of bribery, extortion and tax fixing. Grand juries investigated, and 125 government employees were convicted, including the chief of the Justice Department's Tax Division and President Truman's appointments secretary.

As a result of the Williams disclosures, Congress created the modern Internal Revenue Service, staffed by civil servants instead of political appointees.

LOSING SIDE

Williams always emphasized that neither party had a monopoly on corruption. In 1958 it was learned that President Eisenhower's chief-of-staff, Sherman Adams, had accepted lavish entertainment and expensive gifts from businessman Bernard Goldfine. Adams had then permitted Goldfine to use his name and office in attempts to obtain favorable treatment from government agencies.

On the Senate floor Williams pointed out that his party had won the Presidency in part by pledging to restore integrity to government. "There can be but one code for public officials," Williams said. "Mr. Adams's resignation is in order." Adams soon resigned.

Williams documented numerous cases of bungling and fraud in the foreign-aid program. In 1966 he denounced the shipment of subsidized tobacco to poor nations under the Food for Peace program, saying it was hypocritical to peddle an injurious substance under the guise of alleviating hunger. But in the vote to exclude tobacco from the program, Williams lost 60 to 15. Conscience frequently put him on the losing side.

SHOWDOWN IN THE SENATE

Williams's loneliest case began in 1963. Ralph Hill, owner of a vending-machine company, filed suit against Bobby Baker, the Senate's majority secretary. Hill claimed he had paid Baker to secure government contracts for him. When Hill refused to increase his payments, the suit charged, Baker established his own vending-machine company to take over the contracts. Confidentially interviewed by Williams, Hill also provided leads to other illegal schemes and large sums of cash winding up in Baker's office.

The implications were far-reaching. Baker, a former Senate page, was a protégé of Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson. LBJ publicly termed Baker "my strong right arm, the last man I see at night, the first one I see in the morning." In 1956 Baker listed his net worth as $11,000. Seven years later it was $2.1 million. How did he amass such a fortune so quickly?

Williams offered Baker a private opportunity to explain. Instead, Baker resigned. The Senate unanimously ordered its Rules Committee to investigate him.

Within weeks after the assassination of John F. Kennedy and the elevation of Johnson to the Presidency, Administration sources warned Williams that his mail was being monitored and his telephones were being tapped. Williams did not believe it, until one evening when he was engaged in a lengthy telephone conversation about the commodities market. He had cradled the phone on his shoulder in order to take some notes. Continuing to write for a few seconds after the other party hung up, Williams heard another voice on the line say, "We don't give a (obscenity) about any (obscenity) wheat."

When the Democrat-controlled Rules Committee called Baker as a witness, he invoked the Fifth Amendment more than 100 times. In July 1964, with a Presidential election approaching, the committee issued a report chastising Baker and congratulating itself on a job well done. Leads pointing to the White House and Senate were buried.

Still Johnson was furious. "I want to get Williams for what he did to Baker," he told an aide. Williams was campaigning for a fourth term, and three days before the election, Johnson went to Delaware to call for Williams's ouster. But despite a Johnson landslide, Williams was narrowly re-elected.

After a second investigation by the Rules Committee, the majority counsel drafted a report implying that Williams had obstructed the committee by withholding evidence. In a showdown on the Senate floor, Williams demanded that committee Democrats either substantiate or repudiate their report. Only Sen. Claiborne Pell (D., R.I.) disavowed it. Williams accused the others of lacking the "guts" to face him "man to man." Then he warned: "I shall not be intimidated. There are more interesting developments to follow."

Williams had long struggled to verify a rumor that Baker had received a $100,000 bribe. By 1967 he finally proved it: the cash flowed to Baker after passage of a 1962 tax bill that greatly profited three large West Coast savings-and-loan associations. Williams delivered the evidence to a federal grand jury, and eventually Baker was sentenced to one to three years in prison.

WE COUNTRY BOYS

Williams was as tough on Nixon as on LBJ. He contributed decisively to defeating Nixon's proposed "Family Assistance Plan," an audacious scheme for a guaranteed annual income. Williams showed that the plan would add 14 million people to welfare and provide incentives not to work.

In 1970 Williams announced his decision to retire. Back in Millsboro, he devoted himself to his family, which now included great-grandchildren. Mornings, he enjoyed coffee at Floyd's Restaurant where he traded jokes with townspeople.

Once, my family spent a weekend at his ocean-front house in Rehoboth. He took my two small daughters crabbing, delighted them on Sunday by flipping pancakes and told them about the Baker case. "Whitewash won't stick on dirt," he said. "We country boys know that."

After publication of each book I wrote, the Senator extended kind and encouraging words. I last spoke with him in early 1987. "You know, I've never been one to tell another man how to live his life," he said. "But if you quit smoking, I'll bet you could write a lot more books."

Last January John Williams died peacefully at 83. Elsie, his wife of 64 years, wrote to me: "I cannot believe John is no longer with us." But, as former Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield said, he leaves "a monument to integrity."

I yield the floor. I thank my good friend, the Republican leader, for being so gracious in letting me go ahead.

ONE MONTH OR LESS TO GO

Mr. DOLE. First, I welcome back the Presiding Officer. He looks great. Good to see Senator BURDICK back.

Let me also welcome back all my other colleagues. The distinguished majority leader has indicated we have all had a recess. Some of us have had a lot of excitement. We are ready to go back to work, and I understand the majority leader, in what we call the dugout, in visiting with some of the news people, indicated maybe mid-October adjournment. I am hopeful at least we might beat that by a few days.

I think the 100th Congress is really in an enviable position. For the first time in many years, both Chambers have approved all of the appropriations bills. So there is every expectation we can begin the fiscal year without the kind of trauma that has faced us in the recent past.

The budget is in good shape, and it appears to me we might be able to wrap up the must list of legislation very quickly. I indicate to the majority leader at this point, I think I can speak for my colleagues—as far as I know I can—we are ready to cooperate in every possible way, and we hope we might even complete our work by September 30.

I know there are a number of issues, including the omnibus drug legislation, the Canada free trade agreement, conference reports, maybe the Defense authorization bill, technical corrections, the tax bill that has not yet been reported, and others that the majority leader may have on a must list.

I find myself agreeing with the Washington Post editorial of I believe yesterday where they indicated that we ought to do the appropriations bills and a few others and maybe some of these issues, like child care, environmental issues, and maybe some of those ought to await the outcome of the national debate now taking place between the Presidential candidates, and we can prepare to move to that legislation some time next year.

So I just say that we are back, and we are ready to go to work. We are hitting the ground running. There will be a number of important votes today. I believe that under the leadership of the majority leader, we are going to have an outstanding wrapup here in the next, hopefully, 30 days or less.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the distinguished Republican leader yield at that point?

Mr. DOLE. Yes.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the Republican leader, as has been the case throughout the 100th Congress, strikes a good note, an optimistic note, and a very much appreciated note of cooperation. I share the feeling with him that there is considerable work to be done, but that we ought to be able to do it within a reasonable length of time.

The appropriations bills remain in conference; 11 of them. I think that three of them are ready to go in the House and should be over here shortly. Welfare reform is in conference. The Endangered Species Act is in conference. There are other important measures in conference. The work having been done on them—long weeks and months of hard work—it seems to me that it is important that the final work be completed before the Congress adjourns.

The drug bill will be coming along. That will be a bipartisan bill, I hope and believe. That is an extremely important measure.

The United States-Canada trade agreement is covered by a statute, insofar as time for debate and action is concerned. No amendments are in order. But that will be brought up.

I do not know what to expect by way of Presidential vetos. I do not know what to expect by way of Presidential veto in particular on the defense appropriations bill and authorization bill.

There are unforeseen events that could occur that we cannot speculate right now. I do not know how many filibuster situations the Senate will face. We have the textile bill up today. We will have a cloture vote on that bill. Retail maintenance is still around, and there was something that appeared to be a filibuster on that bill.

I do not know what will happen on clean air. The pressure is very great on clean air legislation. From what I have read in the newspapers, both Presidential aspirants are making some pretty strong statements with reference to how they will deal with that situation next year.

So I do not know just precisely what the absolute, well-defined, clearly delineated picture is, but it would seem to me, may I say to the distinguished Republican leader, considering the fact these measures go to conference, conferences can be long and drawn out. There can be filibuster situations. Senators may call up amendments to a bill, which will be filibustered. There are certain bills that some Senators want to call up. I am not supposed to call them up because I know they will run into filibuster. And yet those same Senators under the Senate rules can call up those bills as amendments to other measures, and the filibuster can result.

So I would say, having said all that, there it seems to me that a realistic picture of when the Senate and House may adjourn sine die will be somewhere between October 8 and October 15.

Let me just add this. I touched upon the Defense authorization bill and the appropriations bill a moment ago. If that is vetoed, then we could have a CR situation, continuing resolution situation. That would not mean that we would have the omnibus continuing resolution as we have had the last 2 years because appropriations bills are already going to the President's desk. Others will soon be on their way. So most, if not all, of the appropriations bills will be sent to the President's desk separately and individually. I join with the Republican leader; we have said many times we both want to see all the appropriations bills, the 13 appropriations bills go to the President's desk individually and separately, and we are moving toward that end. But there could be a situation, if we run into a problem on the defense appropriations bill, in which there would have to be a CR in the final analysis which would at least deal with defense, if nothing else. And there might be one or two other bills wrapped into that. I am not for that at this point. But if that arises and we get down to, say, October 1 when the new fiscal year begins and have to have at least a short-term continuing resolution—say that is a week and you get to the end of that week and you have the long-term continuing resolution—then we are looking at something like October 10, 12, or 15.

So I think our colleagues ought to share these feelings of ours as we attempt to look down the road at the future and try to be as realistic as we can about this.

I would still like very much to finish by September 30. I do not think that will happen. I would like to finish by October 8. That is possible. But I think we ought to be prepared, considering the conferences, possible filibusters, possible vetoes, unforeseen eventualities, for a possible mid-October windup.

Mr. DOLE. Will the majority leader yield?

Mr. BYRD. Yes. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the minority leader not be consumed by my remarks.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. If I may pose one question. I think that is a realistic assessment. We always hope for the earliest departure but sometimes it does not happen. One thing that would be helpful I think to all Members—and I think probably the majority leader has already thought about it—if it may be necessary to have a Saturday session between now and that time, if there could be some advance warning. I think probably every Senator is making plans—we are in the reelection stage now for many Senators plus the Presidential election—and if we did have some advance warning on Saturday sessions, it would be very helpful in making our schedules.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the leader is correct, and I will talk with him and advise with him as to the scheduling of any Saturday sessions well in advance.

Mr. President, will the distinguished Republican leader yield to me for comment on another subject?

Mr. DOLE. I am pleased to yield.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Republican leader.

JOE BIDEN'S RETURN

Mr. BYRD. I know that I speak on behalf of all of my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, Mr. President, in welcoming back to the Senate today our distinguished colleague, Senator JOE BIDEN. As Senator ROTH has indicated, Senator BIDEN has been fighting a very serious health condition for the past 6 months and as we all know we have greatly missed his leadership, counsel, and warm sense of humor over these past months. But you can always depend on Senator BIDEN to overcome any adversity with his usual perseverance, good humor, and equanimity. We are delighted to have him with us, back in the saddle managing the important work of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary.

I will close by bending, ever so slightly, the procedures of the Senate by saying "welcome back, JOE."

I thank the distinguished Republican leader for his yielding to me for this purpose.

WELCOME BACK, JOE BIDEN

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I join with the distinguished majority leader in welcoming back our friend and our colleague, JOE BIDEN. He has been gone far too long, but he had had some serious health problems. He has had a tough time the past 7 months, but as the majority leader has indicated, no one is surprised because he is tough, he has the spirit, he has the tenacity, he has triumphed, and he is going to be back with us. In fact, all of us hope to see him, I assume, on the first vote or shortly thereafter.

As the majority leader has already indicated, we are all Senators; we are Republicans and we are Democrats, but we are also friends in this body. We go out and do our best trying to become the majority or others try to keep us in the minority, but that is the way the system works. When it is all over and we are on this floor representing our States, sometimes representing our party views, above all we are friends. We have one thing on which we base our credibility, and that is our word. Once we give our word, that is it. I can say for JOE BIDEN, that is the way he has operated. He is tough. He is very able and very articulate. I know he is anxious to get back to work. As chairman of the Judiciary Committee, he is going to have the drug bill to manage, maybe some judicial nominations, at least on this side we hope he will have some, and he is already in hearings as a member of the Foreign Relations Committee on the War Powers Act.

It seems to me that JOE BIDEN comes back at a very auspicious time to help us in this homestretch. As his friend, I speak for all Republicans and welcome him back to the Senate.

ANOTHER VICE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE FROM THE SENATE: DAN QUAYLE

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, more than a few things have happened since we went into recess on August 11. One event that seemed to make some news came from our little Republican gathering down in New Orleans.

And guess what. Another Member of this distinguished body has been picked to be a Vice Presidential candidate.

I am speaking about my good friend from Indiana, DAN QUAYLE, who was asked by GEORGE BUSH to join him on my party's 1988 ticket.

It is, of course, one of the highest honors a public servant will ever receive and it speaks volumes about not only the credentials of the junior Senator from Indiana, but also the kind of talent you will find in this Chamber—on both sides of the aisle.

The Senate is justifiably proud of LLOYD BENTSEN and DAN QUAYLE. As Vice Presidential candidates, they have demonstrated, not only to their parties but to all of America, that even though they may have broad policy disagreements—and they do—they are both quality individuals.

I have known DAN QUAYLE for a long time. I have been his leader here for 4 years. And I was honored to nominate him at the Republican Convention in New Orleans on the night of August 18.

No doubt about it, he is a bright, young talent who has a very promising future. Indeed, it might even take from this Chamber to new surroundings come November.

Whatever the case, I want to publicly congratulate him and his family, his wife Marilyn and his three children, and wish him all the best.

I have a little experience myself on the Vice Presidential campaign trail: DAN, let me tell you, there are some pretty big potholes out there, as you may have already discovered.

But I know you are up to it. Whether it was fighting for Indiana concerns, debating the INF Treaty, pushing for aid to freedom fighters, or insisting again and again on a stronger America, you have been a forceful and respected voice in this Chamber.

As I told our convention 3 weeks ago, "whenever I needed him, DAN was always there, ready and willing to make the tough choices." So I say to my good friend, Senator QUAYLE, thanks for your past support and good luck in the future.

I think we will have an opportunity to welcome him sometime later today in this Chamber as he casts his first vote since being nominated on our ticket as Vice President.

Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of my time.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I regret to inform the Senate that my lovely wife Jody's mother, Ann Elizabeth Fox, recently died, after a long illness, in Kansas City.

She was a wonderful and fine lady who was a kind to me and as decent to me as my own mother, from the time of the marriage of my wife and me in a little town called Barry, MO, on January 17, 1954, until her death on Labor Day.

So, Mr. President, I regret to inform the Senate that it will be necessary for me to be absent, effective this afternoon, approximately 3:45 p.m., to attend the wake at the funeral parlor in a little town near Kansas City. The funeral, and so forth, will require me to be absent tomorrow, September 8, and Friday, September 9.

I ask unanimous consent that my absence from the Senate be excused through this coming Friday, September 9, due to the wake and the funeral of my mother-in-law, Ann Elizabeth Fox.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Under the previous order, the following morning business was transacted.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAHAM). The majority leader.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I think some of our colleagues wish to delay the vote that was otherwise scheduled to occur at 11 o'clock. Some of them are returning from overseas.

Let me inquire of staff if it was the request that the vote be delayed by an hour or longer.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be 1 hour and 30 minutes of debate on the motion to invoke cloture on the textile bill; that the time be equally divided and controlled by the two leaders or their designees; that at 12:30 the Senate return to executive session; and that the vote occur on the three treaties. That will be one rollcall vote. It will last 30 minutes. It will count for three rollcall votes. Following which, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate return to legislative session; and, that the vote then immediately begin on the motion to invoke cloture on the textile bill which vote will be a 15-minute rollcall.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

CONVENTIONS ON EARLY NOTIFICATION OF A NUCLEAR ACCIDENT AND ON ASSISTANCE IN THE CASE OF A NUCLEAR ACCIDENT OR RADIOLOGICAL EMERGENCY, WITH DECLARATIONS ON THE PART OF THE UNITED STATES—TREATY DOCUMENT NO. 100-4

AMENDMENT TO THE STATUTE OF THE INTERNATIONAL ATOMIC ENERGY AGENCY—TREATY DOCUMENT NO. 99-7

INTERNATIONAL NATURAL RUBBER AGREEMENT—TREATY DOCUMENT NO. 100-9

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate go into executive session at this time; that debate on the treaties to be equally divided between the two leaders or their designees begin running; and that it expire at 11 a.m., at which time the Senate return to legislative session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senate will now go into executive session to consider Executive Calendar Nos. 11, 12, and 13, on which there shall be not to exceed 20 minutes of debate, equally divided and controlled between the two leaders or their designees .

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I designate Mr. PELL as my designee to control the time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Rhode Island controls half the time from now until 11 o'clock, or 10 minutes.

Mr. PELL addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, the Conventions on Early Notification of a Nuclear Accident and on Assistance in the Case of a Nuclear Accident or Radiological Emergency are positive international achievements. In the event of a nuclear accident, they could be invaluable in limiting the damage and in assuring that assistance is provided in a timely and effective way.

The Committee on Foreign Relations held a hearing on the two conventions on June 28 and reported them favorably, by unanimous voice vote, on July 28.

The conventions were developed under the auspices of the International Atomic Energy Agency [IAEA]. In the aftermath of the Chernobyl accident, participants in the May 1986, Tokyo economic summit agreed that it was urgent to draft a convention dealing with notification of nuclear accidents with potential transboundary consequences. The IAEA convened a meeting in Vienna to draft the conventions. From July 21 to August 15, 1986, representatives from 62 countries negotiated the conventions. The U.S. delegation, which was headed by the Department of State and included participants from the Departments of Energy and Defense, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, played a central role in the drafting work.

The conventions were adopted by consensus at a special session of the general conference held by the IAEA in Vienna from September 24-26, 1986, attended by 94 member states. On September 26, the conventions were opened for signature, at which time the United States and 50 other countries signed both conventions.

As a prompt response by the international community to the Chernobyl accident, the conventions are politically important in themselves. They also contain important legal commitments. By creating obligations requiring notification and the provision of information relevant to minimizing radiological consequences of an accident, the notification convention provides a means of ensuring accountability of state parties with regard to nuclear accidents involving a wide range of civil and military facilities and activities; these obligations do not, however, relate to nuclear weapons-related activities. As a party to this convention, the United States will have the legal status to seek compliance of other states parties with this accountability regime.

The assistance convention encourages assistance by establishing in advance a legal framework under which assistance in the event of a nuclear accident or radiological emergency can be obtained and conducted. It does not obligate a country to provide assistance. The assisting party is provided appropriate legal protection. When the United States is an assisting party, the convention will thus protect U.S. interests by providing for functional privileges and immunities, certain immunities from claims and legal proceedings, and assistance on a reimbursable basis.

Also on July 28, the committee reported favorably, by unanimous voice vote, an amendment to the statute of the IAEA relating to the composition of the Board of Governors. The amendment will increase, from 9 to 10, the members of the IAEA designated for a seat on its Board of Governors by virtue of their status as most advanced in the technology of atomic energy without regard to geographical distribution. This amendment will ensure that another country represented on the Board will not lose its seat in view of the People's Republic of China's occupancy of its seat.

Mr. President, I urge the Senate to advise and consent to acceptance of the two conventions and the amendment.

INTERNATIONAL RUBBER AGREEMENT

Mr. CHILES. Mr. President, in 1980, the Senate ratified a 5-year International Natural Rubber Agreement of 1979. The agreement, put together under U.N. auspices, created an International Natural Rubber Organization, which operates a buffer stock in natural rubber.

Under the agreement, the United States committed to purchase some 12.5 percent of a 550,000 metric ton buffer stock which could be used to dampen price fluctuations in the international rubber market.

Immediately following ratification of the treaty, implementing legislation, Public Law 96-271, was enacted and $88 million was appropriated in order to fulfill our obligations under the treaty.

Since 1981, $53 million has been disbursed to purchase natural rubber for use by the buffer stock manager. Under the terms of the 1979 treaty, the United States is entitled to a refund of its share of the buffer stock or it can carry its investment into a buffer stock created by a new agreement.

The original treaty covered 5 years, was extended for an additional 2 years, and expired in October 1987.

The new International Rubber Agreement, covering the next 5 years, with an optional 2-year extension, has just been ratified by the Senate. The U.S. financial obligation under the new agreement is estimated to run $65 million. However, implementing legislation and a budget request has not been transmitted.

The new treaty calls for transferring the $53 million existing buffer stock asset to partially satisfy the financial liabilities which exist under the new agreement. Since the 1979 agreement specifically contemplated transfer of buffer stock already accumulated under the 1979 agreement to subsequent agreements, I see no problem with this course of action and the Budget Committee will not score such a transfer against any implementing legislation.

However, it should be clear that without additional authorizing legislation and an additional appropriation, the administration does not have the legal authority to satisfy the full liability of the United States under the new treaty.

Mr. President, the administration should seek such legislation immediately and be warned that ratification of this treaty does not carry with it any kind of implicit appropriation.

THE INTERNATIONAL NATURAL RUBBER AGREEMENT, 1987

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I am pleased that the Senate will vote on the International Natural Rubber Agreement today. The previous agreement played an important role in stabilizing world natural rubber prices to the benefit of both producer and consumer nations. Many of our allies, including members of the Association of South East Asian Nations as well as our friends in Europe, have been awaiting U.S. action on the new agreement. Favorable Senate action today will help pave the way for the new agreement to take effect.

For the Senate's information, I am submitting a statement from the administration regarding funding for U.S. obligations under the International Natural Rubber Agreement, 1987. I would reiterate that according to the administration's calculations, this agreement will not require additional funding.

Mr. President, the International Natural Rubber Agreement enjoys broad support, from the administration, from my colleagues on the Foreign Relations and from industry. I would urge my colleagues to vote in favor of granting the Senate's advice and consent to the ratifications of this agreement and ask that the administration's statement, be inserted in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FUNDING FOR U.S. OBLIGATIONS UNDER INRA-1987

The Administration has concluded that if the Senate recommends affirmatively that this treaty be ratified and the President acts on that advice and consent, the funds contributed by the United States Government to the Buffer Stock established under INRA 1979 (or the assets obtained by INRO with the funds and which are currently with and which shall remain in its custody) remain available without further legislation to meet the United States' INRA II obligations to the buffer stock account.

For the Committee's information, of the $88,000,000 authorized and appropriated, approximately $53,000,000 were disbursed between 1981 and October 23, 1987 and, combined with other members' funds, were used to purchase 369,000 MT of rubber and to pay related storage and incidental costs. The undisbursed portion of the $88,000,000 has been returned to the Treasury. Since September 1987 the price of natural rubber has been above the "may sell" level. As of early June 1988 an estimated 300,000 MT has either been sold or is under a commitment to purchase, with the balance expected to be sold within the next 30-90 days. The value of the U.S. share of the income from these sales is estimated at $57,000,000, an amount currently estimated (due in large part to the recent sharp rise in the price of rubber) as sufficient to meet foreseeable U.S. obligations for INRA-II. Should estimates of the U.S. obligations change and should additional U.S. funds be required to meet our obligations to INRA II, additional authorization and appropriations will be sought through the normal budget process.

BACKGROUND

PL 96-271 authorized the appropriation of $88,000,000 during FY 1981 for the payment of contributions by the United States to the buffer stock account established by INRA 1979. Funds appropriated were to remain available during the period in which the agreement remains in effect with respect to the United States.

The funds authorized by PL 96-271 were appropriated by PL 96-536 which reads in part "for the United States Contribution pursuant to the International Natural Rubber Agreement, 1979, for the acquisition of natural rubber for the buffer stock, $88,000,000 remain available until expended."

The terms of the International Natural Rubber Agreement, 1979, as ratified by the President upon affirmative, unqualified, advice and consent of the Senate of the U.S. state: (Article 41(3)) "if this agreement is to be immediately replaced with a new international natural rubber agreement, the Council shall, by special vote, adopt procedures to ensure efficient transfer to the new agreement, as required by that agreement, of shares in the Buffer Stock Account of members which intend to participate in the new agreement."

Article 27(1) of INRA-1987 states: " . . . it being understood that shares in the Buffer Stock Account of the International Natural Rubber Agreement, 1979, of those members of the International Natural Rubber Agreement, 1979, which become members of this agreement shall, with the consent of each member, be carried over to the Buffer Stock Account under this Agreement in accordance with Paragraph 3 of Article 41 of the International Natural Rubber Agreement, 1979."

Article 3 of the International Natural Rubber Agreement, 1987, states: "The International Natural Rubber Organization, established by the International Natural Rubber Agreement, 1979 shall continue in being for the purpose of administering the provisions and supervising operations of this Agreement."

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS UNTIL 11 A.M.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess until 11 a.m.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 10:55 a.m., recessed until 11 a.m.; whereupon, the Senate reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer [Mr. GRAHAM].

TEXTILE AND APPAREL TRADE ACT

CLOTURE MOTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 11 a.m. having arrived, the Senate will proceed to consider the motion to invoke cloture on S. 2662, which the clerk will state.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close the debate upon the bill S. 2662.

Senators Ernest F. Hollings, Harry Reid, J. Bennett Johnston, Paul Simon, J.J. Exon, Daniel P. Moynihan, Claiborne Pell, Wendell Ford, Carl Levin, Bill Proxmire, Strom Thurmond, John J. Rockefeller, Terry Sanford, David Pryor, John C. Stennis, Richard Shelby, Quentin Burdick, George Mitchell, Jesse Helms, and Tom Daschle.

The PRESIDING OFFICER Under the previous order, there will now be a period of 1 hour and 30 minutes of debate, with the time to be equally divided and controlled by the two leaders or their designees.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I yield the time on this side to Mr. HOLLINGS for his control. I suggest the absence of a quorum. I ask unanimous consent that the time be equally charged to both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WIRTH). The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, what is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are 80 minutes of debate evenly divided on the question of invoking cloture on the textile measure.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, in resuming our debate on textiles, the word to emphasize, Mr. President, is "resuming."

This debate, in earnest, was initiated practically 30 years ago during the Eisenhower administration. At that time, we heard persuasive testimony to the fact that textiles were a crucial, basic industry that was being subjected to a deluge of low-cost imports.

In the 1950's, there was no question that our standard of living was the highest in the world, as, according to most measures, it continues to be the highest today. And you and I as legislators add to that standard of living, whether through laws requiring notification of plant-closing, whether through parental leave requirements, whether through clean air standards and clean water standards. Most of us support these advances, but there is no denying that they add to the cost of production.

In the 1950's, we received President Eisenhower's endorsement of our findings of injury to the textile industry. However, in June of 1960 the International Trade Commission found against us. The ITC declined to find injury. Today, the U.S. textile industry continues to disappear, yet the ITC still finds no injury.

So we appealed in 1960 to President Kennedy. We got his seven-point program. We later got the multifiber arrangement. Along with Senator Norris Cotton of New Hampshire, I passed in the Senate, a textile bill in 1968; we passed another one in 1970. It was vetoed. We passed another one in 1985; it, too, was vetoed.

So here we are, Mr. President, once again joining debate on textiles. Once again, they tell us the industry is going great guns. But, in truth, we just continue to go out of business. I have just come home from a trip to the Far East, and I learned that the Edisto plant in Orangeburg, SC, employing 1,000 workers, is closed as of September 1, just a few days ago.

Recently, I circulated a "dear colleague" letter to bring my colleagues up to date on the textile crisis. Yes, accounting-book profits from mergers and asset sell-offs obscured the true depth of the crisis. Even so, profits last year were less than profits for manufacturing overall. Again this year, textile profits are down some 12 percent.

Now I find that, since I returned from Asia, in a month's time we have lost another 10,000 jobs: a total of 31,000 jobs so far in 1988. Yet still, there are those Senators who rise and claim that everything is fine, that textiles are doing well.

It is the same story they gave the shoe manufacturers some 10 years ago. The footwear industry went to the International Trade Commission. It was confirmed that 50 percent of the domestic consumption of shoes in this country was represented in imports.

Nonetheless, the White House overruled the ITC. The White House said the footwear industry was doing fine. Ten years later, 84 percent of the shoes on the floor of this U.S. Senate are imported. The U.S. footwear industry has been devastated.

So we are down to the bottom-line question: Are we Americans going to maintain our standard of living? Of course, we can go backward. We can reduce our standard of living like Great Britain has. I remember at the outset of World War II, Mr. President, Great Britain was the great British Empire. Yet consider that in 1988 the per capita income of Japan is at $19,000; in the United States of America it is $18,600; West Germany is $18,400; and in once-great Britain, it is $9,800.

We can go backward. We can go the way of Britain. We can dismantle our domestic industries. But surely that is folly. Mr. President, this bill is about our survival as a great power.

This bill is not protectionist. We will hear that old shibboleth. They do not know what protectionism is, on the floor of Congress. We spin grand theories of free trade, but our rivals practice a bare-knuckles brand of controlled capitalism. They subsidize R&D. They encourage savings. They do not give any interest deductions on consumer credit. There are no deductions for dividends paid by a corporation. Everything is geared to encourage savings in order to finance R&D and capital investment.

It is not that we Americans are immoral. I hear Senators saying we have got to save more, as though we are a nation of moral degenerates. The truth of the matter is that we have opted for a credit-card economy and a credit-card government. In contrast, our rivals have the savings; they have the capital; they pay for the research; they have got the Government bank; they provide the Government leasing; they protect their domestic markets; they make sure businesses do not go broke. Instead of opposing mergers and trusts, our rivals propose mergers and trusts. They monopolize markets and then, obviously, they end up with a quality product. Market share is the objective, controlled capitalism is the name of the game, and Government support is the sine qua non of success.

Japan developed the model for government-orchestrated controlled capitalism, and it is emulated in Taiwan, Korea, Hong Kong, Thailand, Indonesia. And it is winning. It succeeds. It works.

That is why we have introduced this bill, not to roll back anything, Mr. President, but on the contrary, to hold the line to make it worthwhile for our domestic producers to invest.

The textile industry has invested over $18 billion since 1980, over $2 billion a year. Their productivity rate has increased annually at 4.6 percent, compared to the national average of only 2.7 percent for all manufacturing.

Textiles are one of the most productive of American industries. My distinguished colleague on the other side of the aisle has always championed the cause of minorities and women. The textile industry is the largest employer of women and minorities in America. When I started back 30 years ago under Eisenhower, textiles accounted for 4 million jobs. When I started under our current President, Reagan, textile employment was down to 2.2 million or 2.3 million. Now, we are down to 1.9 million. We have lost 350,000 to 400,000 jobs.

So we are at water's edge. We must hold the line for a textile industry that is critical not only to our economy but, more importantly, to our national security. Under President Kennedy, we held formal hearings by the Departments of Labor, Commerce, State, Treasury, and others. We held those hearings back in the spring of 1961. The formal conclusion was that textiles were, next to steel, the second most important industry to our national security. You cannot send American GI's to war in Japanese-made uniforms.

Our task, today, is to globalize our quotas and use the resulting economic leverage to the interest of the United States of America. Enough of the diversioning rhetoric about "protectionism" and "free trade" and "trade war." The war has been raging now for a good 30 years. All the Pacific rim countries, Mr. President, have joined the fray. And they are winning.

By the year 2000, the GNP of the Pacific rim countries will exceed the GNP of the United States and Europe combined. That is only 12 years away.

This Congress and this Government have been leading us down the road of Great Britain. We are dismantling our industries and destroying our best jobs. As in Great Britain the middle class is disappearing and, ultimately, free government is threatened.

That is why this bill is introduced. I am proud as a principal sponsor to stand in behalf of the textile industry because I have watched it over these years. It was not productive back in the early days. I saw the underpaid labor and the unhealthy conditions. Yet, today, U.S. textiles are on the cutting edge of innovation. In a weave room, instead of 115 employees, they have less than 15. They are electronically controlled and computerized. Where they would have 30 dies, they have 630 dies and they have the best of machinery.

Mr. President, let me at this time thank my colleagues for their attention. We debated this issue in 1985. The distinguished Senator from Washington and myself and the Members have heard our points on both sides. I appreciate their indulgence in hearing us again prior to cloture vote. I yield the floor.

Mr. EVANS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. PACKWOOD. How much time does the Senator want?

Mr. EVANS. Approximately 15 minutes.

Mr. PACKWOOD. I will yield 20 minutes to the Senator from Washington.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. President, indeed we are back at the same old stand debating not the same old bill, however, a bill that has several changes and circumstances which are different than they were 2 years ago, circumstances which, in no respect, make this any better a bill or any more necessary a bill than it was 2 years ago when fortunately it was vetoed by the President whose veto was upheld by the House of Representatives.

But let me begin, Mr. President, by saying this vote coming up today on cloture is a bad procedural precedent. We have not yet begun to debate this bill. We have not yet begun to amend this bill. We have not yet begun to give, as we do any legislation that comes before us, or any proposed legislation, an opportunity to sort of give it its own head for a time until cloture is voted.

If this becomes a precedent, any majority leader under any majority at any time in the future may just choose to shortcut the normal procedures of the Senate by moving to cloture, filing cloture, proceeding on to some other bill for a couple of days, coming back, invoking cloture, or attempting to, before any debate at all has occurred on the bill.

Procedurally, this is a bad, a terrible precedent for this Senate to undertake at this point. But procedure is only one thing; substance is much more important.

The distinguished Senator from South Carolina has mentioned the way of Britain. I cannot think of a better example of a country which did try protectionism, which did try nationalization, which did lurch back and forth in the post-World War II days between the Labor Party, which nationalized their major industries, and a Tory government, which would denationalize them, but always seeking some kind of protection for British products.

Of course, they went downhill until recently when Margaret Thatcher, in her extended term as Prime Minister, has turned the country around in terms of its economy, in terms of its future, in terms of its hopes, and all by reducing that kind of protectionist attitude rather than increasing it.

I thank the Senator from South Carolina for producing such a good example of another country recognizing that protectionism did not work and turning around now, especially in their joining with the European Economic Community to reduce, not increase, the tariff and protectionist barriers between them.

Mr. President, we need add no protection for the textile and apparel industry. It is already one of the most protected industries in the United States today; 18 percent average tariffs, while at the same time we here in the Senate are attempting to reduce and even eliminate tariffs with those countries we call free trade partners. We have done it with Israel. I am confident we will do it with Canada.

We are looking ahead to a future which encourages interrelationships rather than discourages them; looking ahead to a future which reduces tariffs, not keep them; looking ahead to a future which hopefully will mean broader and bigger international markets rather than smaller and more protected international markets.

There were nearly 2,000 quotas established in this industry. We have 43 bilateral agreements. We have a multifiber agreement. In all of these, we have in the past attempted to put limitations on those who would import to the United States.

Well, I do not think we need more protectionism. Production has increased 6 percent this last year. Import volume is almost flat. For the first 5 months of 1988, imports have fallen by more than 8 percent. Capacity utilization is 92 percent in the textile industry, higher than almost any other industry in the United States. They could hardly do more. Employment rose 3 percent, for an increase of 21,000 jobs during this last year. The unemployment rate fell. Merchandise exports in the industry increased by over 14 percent. And what is more important, Mr. President, when you talk about jobs and you talk about efficiency and you talk about production and you talk about competitiveness, we ought to take a look at how able any industry in the United States is to produce per employee hour. The Senator from South Carolina has talked about a flat, maybe even a declining employment in the overall textile industry. U.S. mill consumption of cotton, wool, and man-made fibers during this last year reached a record 12.8 billion pounds, an increase of nearly a billion pounds over the previous high in 1986.

Mr. President, it is too bad that charts cannot be placed easily in the RECORD, but if they could, they would show a steady, almost uninterrupted increase in fiber consumption by U.S. textile mills with today being at an all-time high. That does not sound like an industry that needs more protection. Rather, it sould like an industry that has had an opportunity during its profitable last few years to invest, to become more competitive, and I hope they will continue to be more competitive.

Why now, Mr. President, why now are we coming back to this bill? In November 1985, we did pass the textile bill. The industry was considerably less profitable, had considerably less consumption, considerably less efficiency. There is hardly a reason I can find to believe that this bill is more necessary or as necessary as it was in November 1985. Too often we in Congress act on this and other proposals after the fact, trying to remedy something that is already being remedied, trying to protect something that is already being protected. Well, what are the costs, Mr. President, of doing something like this? Presumably the sponsors of the bill and its supporters would like to see some protection and some help for one industry but at what cost? At what cost? Seven billion dollars in increased shoe and clothing costs to American consumers; $25 to $37 billion in the first 5 years. If—and I think the question is really if—any jobs are saved with this bill, who is going to pay? The American consumer is going to pay, and most especially the American consumer at the bottom end of the income scale. The poor, the elderly, those who do enjoy the benefits of low-cost clothing and low-cost shoes, will see those prices rise. They will be the ones hurt. Are we going to pit one group of Americans against another and put on the one side the protection of an industry already protected beyond compare and on the other side of the scale put the poor and the elderly as the ones who will pay the bill? I cannot think of anything more unfair than that.

Mr. President, not only will it hurt U.S. consumers but it clearly will provoke retaliation against U.S. exports. The compensation provisions of this bill are far from adequate to remedy the damage it would cause. And what are we doing, Mr. President? We are saying, on the one hand, here is an industry that believes it is not protected enough yet, an industry that believes it needs to have even more protection. Well, the other countries of the world are not quiescent. They are not going to roll over and say, "Yes, sir" to the United States any more. They have their own interests, their own people, their own jobs, and their own imports—imports from the United States. Their only action against us can be retaliation against those imports.

So what are we going to do? We are going to take one industry and not only pit it against the consumer but pit it against our most competitive industries, those that already are exporting to other nations, those industries which are going to ensure the future well being of the United States. These are the industries which would be retaliated against and hurt with the passage of this bill.

What in the world are we doing to ourselves? To attempt to protect one industry already protected to a far greater degree then probably necessary, we are going to hamper the competitive opportunities of our most competitive industries.

Interestingly enough, the European Economic Community and Canada, two of the largest recipients of our exports, are not now subject to textile quotas. They would be especially likely to retaliate.

The bill violates United States international obligations. I cannot understand, Mr. President, how we can blithely in this Senate, having taken the oath of office, and oath of office that says in essence we uphold the Constitution, we live up to our obligations when we have signed with other nations international obligations which we expect to be lived up to by others, we have traditionally for the 200 years of our history lived up to ours, with the passage of this bill throw away 43 bilateral agreements; we blithely ignore a multifiber agreement. No nation in peacetime has ever disregarded so many international agreements as would be disregarded with the passage of this bill.

The bill would be contrary to bills we have already passed—the Israel Free Trade Agreement, and hopefully soon the Canadian Free Trade Agreement. It would impose unilateral quotas on trade from these nations.

Mr. President, we are already seeing what is happening with the current protection in this industry. Textile companies posted record profits of almost $2 billion last year, a 54-percent increase from 2 years ago. Mr. Presient, if anybody wanted to make a darned good stock investment 5 years ago, they should have invested in the textile industry. Textile stocks have gone up 838 percent during this 5-year bull market. But in parallel with this protection and the resulting profit margins of the textile industry, we are seeing the costs of that. The average family already pays $238 a year more for clothing than it would if there were no textile protection. Textile makers used to complain about low-priced subsidized imports. Last year the value of those imports increased 15 percent, rising even more rapidly this year. And the high cost and increasing cost of clothing is fueling inflation, inflation which is the one thing, the one thing, that would deter our unparalleled economic advance.

Clothing is up 8 percent, far higher than the average cost of living. It is pulling the cost of other things, and if inflation rises and appears to be rising faster than currently, then we put the economic brakes on through higher interest rates. People are less able to buy homes, industries all over the country will have greater problems in borrowing for expansion, and we will see a slowing, a staggering, and maybe even a halt of economic advance.

Mr. President, beyond all of these elements, this bill pits one geographic region against another: one region of a country which seeks more protection, another region of a country which seeks more opportunity, one region of the country that fears it does not have both the belt and the suspenders it already enjoys but needs even more, while other regions of the country and other industries are rolling up their sleeves and going to work to learn how to be more competitive in an increasingly competitive world.

It would be easy for this Senator to join with the Senator from South Carolina if he believed that the only measure of an industry's health was the number of employees it had. The real measure, as I said earlier, of an industry's health, is the productivity of that industry.

Let me use as an example one of the fine companies in our part of the world. I was Governor in 1969 when the Boeing Co. at that time during a period of rapid expansion and large sales had 118,000 employees in the Seattle area. Today they are going through another period of increasing sales with their capacity to produce far, far greater than it was in 1969. Yet, they have 85,000 employees. It would be easy to wring our hands and say, "My goodness, we have lost 33,000 employees." And, "What kinds of protection must we impose in order to prevent that job loss?"

Instead, we have a company that has become that much more efficient and as a result is that much more competitive in a worldwide market, and was responsible last year for over $20 billion of commercial aircraft sales, $15 billion of which was to foreign nations, the greatest export surge of any company or of any industry in this Nation, I am confident.

Yet, on the surface, if you measure this against 1969 you would say, my goodness, we have lost 33,000 employees.

Mr. President, we not only pit one geographic region against another but we pit one industry against another. Chemicals, computers, aerospace, forest products, even agriculture are our important export industries. And I think if anyone believes that the addition of this so-called barter system on agricultural products is going to help us in opening foreign markets they are sadly mistaken, sadly mistaken because it would not reduce retaliation against U.S. farm exports.

There are countries who will be affected and will have their access to U.S. textile and apparel markets greatly reduced under any circumstance. The barter provision by establishing a direct linkage between textiles and agriculture is going to increase, not decrease, the opportunities for retaliation especially by those countries in the European Economic Community and Canada whose textile and apparel exports are not now subject to quotas.

Again, Mr. President, this would do serious damage, most serious damage, to the poorest countries on Earth. Bangladesh cannot afford to pay more for American export agricultural products even though they may need them. The country is one-third under water today with one of the most serious floods in its history, and yet under this proposal we would lay it to them in terms of their opportunity as a poor and developing country to even provide the simplest of apparel imports to the United States.

It will encourage other countries to tie their purchases of U.S. agricultural, and other products to our purchases from their country. I cannot think of anything more detrimental to the opportunity for this country to become more competitive in international markets of all kinds than the bill itself and the agricultural barter provision which is attached to it.

Mr. President, this is such an important element, such an important principle that we are dealing with and debating today that it is my intent—and I am sure the intent of others—that this will be an extended debate, and that it will go on until this bill finally is laid to rest, as I am confident it will be.

Mr. President, I would like to ask unanimous consent that several articles be entered into the RECORD at this time, one by Clayton Yeutter in the Washington Post; an editorial in the Wall Street Journal called "Textile Workship." And then I might just say in passing that I am an avid reader, as we all are, of the local newspapers. Seldom do I find the Washington Times and the Washington Post on the same side of any issue. I would like to introduce an article by Warren Brookes in the Washington Times, Tuesday, September 6, and a Washington Post editorial of Wednesday, September 7. Both of those papers, and I would suggest overwhelmingly nationaly editorial opinion, and the opinion of those who understand and know the international economics of today and tomorrow would be opposed to this legislation.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

A BILL TO RAISE THE COST OF YOUR CLOTHING

With clothing costs soaring and textile industry profits at record levels, this would seem to be a terrible time to take money away from people who buy clothes and give it to the companies that make them. Yet that is precisely what Congress is on the verge of doing in the textile bill.

This legislation, by dramatically reducing textile and apparel imports, would assuredly raise the price of clothes. This burden would fall most heavily on lower- and middle-income families, who spend a greater portion of their incomes on clothing than the wealthy. And the benefits would go to some of the nation's most profitable companies.

The justification usually offered for passing the textile bill is that competition from imports threatens the survival of the domestic industry. In fact, textile stockholders have never seen better days. Textile companies posted record profits of one point nine billion last year—a fifty four percent increase from just two years ago. More impressively textile stocks rocketed up eight hundred thirty eight percent during the 1982-87 bull market. Notwithstanding that, Congress seems determined to ask working families to pay more for winter coats and children's pajamas so that stock portfolios can grow even fatter.

But what about textile workers? What about their jobs? It's true that over the past decade, employment in the textile and apparel industries has declined (although it increased slightly from 1985 to 1987). But nearly all these jobs were eliminated through industry efforts to improve productivity. Consolidating operations and modernizing plants are necessary steps for any industry, but textile companies shouldn't blame imports when their own business decisions result in job losses. We expect these kinds of adjustments in a dynamic free enterprise society.

Not everybody realizes it, but the textile industry is already one of the most protected sectors of the U.S. economy. There are import restrictions on well over a thousand textile products from 42 countries, and the average textile and apparel tariff of 18 percent is about three times the average tariff on other manufactured products.

As a result, the average family already pays $238 per year more for clothing than it would if there were no textile protection. U.S. textile makers used to complain about "low-priced, subsidized" imports. No more. Last year the value of textile and apparel imports increased 15 percent, and they are rising even more rapidly this year. The high cost of clothing is fueling inflation. In the first half of 1988, apparel prices rose at an annual rate of 8 percent.

Consumers wouldn't be the only losers under the textile bill. Exporters, particularly farmers, would be exposed to retaliation from foreign buyers if the United States illegally cut off textile imports. Over 85 percent of U.S. agricultural exports go to the more than 40 countries that would be most affected by this bill. Last year U.S. agricultural exports totaled almost $29 billion, compared with U.S. textile and apparel imports of about $23 billion, U.S. farmers have more to lose than textile makers have to gain from this bill. Anyone who votes for it is no friend of the American farmer.

Textile bill supporters are seeking farm-state votes with a proposal that would give textile quota preferences to countries that increase purchases of U.S. farm products. There is far less of this than meets the eye, because the supposed "benefit" for textile-producing countries is nonexistent. Even with this bonus, countries that increase their purchases of American agricultural products would still have their access to the U.S. textile and apparel market cut. Our trading partners are hardly likely to feel rewarded if we tell them that they will be able to ship us a little less instead of a lot less if they buy American farm products. This meager attempt to bribe them out of retaliating against us is bound to fail. They will almost certainly still retaliate against U.S. exports—if not against our farmers then against our industrial products.

There is little question that the textile bill would raise clothing costs and spark countless trade wars. The only real question is why this is still an active issue. There is no textile "problem," there is only a desire by a politically powerful special interest to increase its profitability at the expense of lower- and middle-income consumers. Not too long ago, taxing the poor to benefit the rich was called "regressive." If that concept is still valid, then this textile bill is a classic regressive solution to a nonexistent problem.

And by the way, textile and apparel imports are down more than 9 percent so far this year. Why this bill is even under consideration is beyond comprehension.

TEXTILE WORSHIP

Who was it who said passing the trade bill would kill protectionism as a political issue? We recall it was the same Reagan administration that is this week scrambling to find enough votes in the Senate to derail a new textile-protection bill. Maybe former Treasury Secretary James Baker and trade rep Clayton Yeutter now will agree that the special-interest gods are never satisfied with merely one sacrifice.

Indeed, the textile and apparel industries and their unions demand regular care and feeding. As the most protected U.S. industries, they already benefit from tariffs averaging close to 18%, not to mention more than 1,500 quotas. Naturally, this government cosseting has been good for business. Factories are running flat out while profits soared by 8.6% last year, after a 67% leap in 1986. This is what economists call "monopoly profits."

Which means consumers are paying monopoly subsidies. Consumer apparel prices rose at about double the rate of inflation in the first half of 1988, which even Mikhail Gorbachev now understands is what happens when demand exceeds a government-controlled supply.

William Kline of the Institute for International Economics has estimated that textile protection costs the average U.S. household $238 a year for apparel—a total of some $20 billion. The poor get hit the worst, with the poorest one-fifth of U.S. households paying an estimated 3.6% of their income to subsidize fat-cat textile shareholders and unionists. The Reagan administration figures the new bill—which would impose even stiffer quotas—would cost consumers an additional $7 billion a year.

The textile lobby nonetheless wants more, and its doting politicians are only too happy to serve. The House already passed its own protectionist bill 263 to 156, and the Reagan administration frets it may not get 34 vote-sustaining votes when the Senate weighs in as early as today. GOP statesmen such as William Cohen (Maine shoemakers), Jess Helms (protectionist on principle) and Orrin Hatch (who knows what in Utah) are standing tall behind the bill lest they be considered soft on Sri Lankan seamstresses. If the world trading system, the GATT and U.S. exporters (who will suffer from retaliation) get creamed as well, that's all right, because Sri Lankans don't vote.

As for the national—as opposed to the special—interest, here's surely an opportunity for the presidential candidates. Michael Dukakis claims he wants a competitive America, and nothing is more uncompetitive than an American rag trade that is so coddled it has no incentive to modernize. Alas, Mr. Dukakis will have to shun the advice of his running mate, Lloyd Bentsen, who keeps saying he's not a protectionist even as he wraps both of his mercantilist arms around this textile bill. No wonder Big Business lobbyists were willing to pay Mr. Bentsen $10,000 for bacon and eggs.

For his part, George Bush could find the textile issue looks a lot like it did in South Carolina in March. That's when he blew away protectionism's Big Mo—and Bob Dole—by opposing the textile interests even in the heart of textile country. He also might find that defending consumers against business interests turns the tables on which candidate is the real economic populist. We suspect American voters care much less about making offerings to the textile lobby than do the parochial inhabitants of Congress hunting for PAC money on Capitol Hill.

TUGGING FOR MORE TEXTILE PROTECTION—WILL BUSH FACE DOWN THE BARONS?

(By Warren Brookes)

Today, Democratic Sen. Ernest "Fritz" Hollings of South Carolina, chairman of the Commerce Committee, will try to move the Textile and Apparel Trade Act (S. 2662) to the floor for a vote.

In an election year, with the House already on board with its own completed quota legislation (supported by Michael Dukakis), the only question is: Are there enough nay votes to sustain a veto?

With George Bush struggling out from the Quayle-quake, Republican senators could be protecting their own flanks—and the temptation in the White House might be to go for a compromise sell-out to put the issue behind them, although U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter assured us recently the president would stand firm against them, as Mr. Bush did in the southern primaries last March.

Otherwise a totally undeserving industry will get still another $7-10 billion bailout at the expense of the American consumers, who are already paying an average of 18 percent on tariffs in place, not to mention some 2,000 quota agreements with 42 countries negotiated by this administration alone.

In fact, the U.S. textile and apparel industries are now the most protected in America, with a cost to the average family of more than $240 a year, or more than $21 billion total.

Already, the textile quotas the Reagan administration worked out with the Asian Rim countries in the summer of 1986 have hit the cash register in the form of 15 percent annualized inflation rates on apparel and textiles this past spring.

Small wonder that during the Reagan bull market run-up the textile group of stocks produced an average return of more than 838 percent from 1982-1987, and industry profits rose a total of more than 54 percent over the 1986 and 1987 period, and were up again in the second quarter of 1988 by 61 percent over 1987.

Yet, there is no evidence that the industry is using these suddenly strong profits to catch up with enormous productivity gains being made throughout the rest of the world.

In his new book, "The American Jobs Machine," Clemson University economist Richard MacKenzie warns: "The effects of quotas are not necessarily positive for the textile and apparel industries. Increased prices for domestic and imported textiles increase the cost of textile and apparel production in the United States. The main long-run effect of curbs on textile and apparel imports seems to be some retardation of productivity improvements, the result of reduced competitive pressures.

He then quotes Wilburn Newcombe, the courageous editor of American Textiles International, who warned his own industry, last year, "Now is the time to buy and build. Sales and profits are high. Stock values are higher. We can't keep crying 'imports!' to cover up large pockets of inefficiency remaining. Instead we need to make ours one of the most modern manufacturing industries in the nation—modern throughout."

Yet, the two most recent international textile equipment expositions, the U.S. textile industry was the weakest purchaser of new high speed equipment of any major textile country.

Instead, it was up on Capitol Hill calling for still more help. As U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter told this column, "There is probably no American industry that less deserves protection than this one. Unfortunately, they have a history of using presidential-election politics to their advantage." Textile and apparel executives have been especially heavy contributors to the Dukakis campaign.

But even as they make their case for slapping a 1 percent annual growth quota on all textile-exporting countries selling to the United States (not just Asian Rim nations) the latest trade numbers show how unnecessary and self-defeating this would be (See table.)

Through the first six months of 1988, textile imports have risen less than 1 percent, while textile exports have soared 22 percent. June imports were down 1 percent, exports up 20 percent, and the textile merchandise trade deficit is falling by 15 percent a year. Increasing trade sanctions against all textile exporting countries would almost certainly slow this progress.

As Mr. MacKenzie argues, "On balance, protectionism can be expected to reduce American jobs." Anyone who doubts this need only look at the U.S. steel industry, where both labor and industry used 15 years of protectionism to drive up wages and drive down total productivity, killing sales and cutting jobs more than 50 percent.

Mr. MacKenzie reminds us of Will Rogers' wisdom, "If a business thrives under a protective tariff, that doesn't mean it has been a good thing. It may have thrived because it made the people of America pay more for the objects than they should have, so a few got rich at the expense of the many."

Will Rogers' description exactly fits the textile industry, whose buddy Mr. Hollings plaintively cried out: "We are losing our shirts. We are losing our shoes. While the United States sits in the grandstand shouting, 'We may start a trade war,' down on the field the trade war is in the fourth quarter."

It now remains to be seen whether George Bush has the guts to continue to risk Southern backlash and back a Reagan goal-line stand against these crocodile-cryers and win one for the consumer.

[From the Washington Post, Sept. 7, 1988]

THE TEXTILE GIVEAWAY

Protectionist trade bills are usually bad news, but the Senate's textile legislation is flagrantly, recklessly,. almost comically wrongheaded. Since half the Senate has signed on as cosponsors, it will certainly be passed. Equally certainly, President Reagan will veto it. One question is whether there are enough votes to override a veto. Another is why the Senate is seized with this passion to pass another squalid giveaway to the textile producers.

The bill would allow imports of textiles and clothing to increase 1 percent a year, on grounds that the market is expanding only that fast. No matter how attractive the imports might be, or how competitive, Americans would be forbidden by law to buy more than the current proportion of them. The bill also freezes shoe imports at the present level. The American producers lost most of the market for women's shoes because they didn't keep up with the fashions as deftly as shoemakers in Italy and Brazil did. But in fashion or out, the American producers would be guaranteed their present share of the market under this law. No matter how poorly they performed, they would be protected.

The textile industry is already one of the most heavily protected industries in this country, and has been for more than 30 years. It is profitable and even does some exporting. But it likes having a captive market, and no amount of protection is ever enough.

The purpose of the bill is to preserve jobs. Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, the chief sponsor, says that 350,000 jobs have been lost in textile and clothing production since 1980. True, some were lost to imports. Equally true but not mentioned by the senator, many of those jobs were lost to rising productivity. The same thing is happening throughout American industry.

You can probably think of a good many senators who are urgent and forceful in arguing that the United States must make itself more competitive in world markets. That means pushing steadily for higher productivity. You would be astonished to see that many of those same senators are cosponsors of this bill, the central purpose of which is to take the competitive pressure off this favored industry.

But in the end this bill won't save jobs. Protectionist bills never do. They only shift the impact of change from one industry to another. While legislation can save some jobs in textiles, clothing and shoe production, it will cost jobs in importing and retailing. On balance, the losses to the country will be greater than the gains. If the Senate is trying to make the American economy less efficient and less competitive, this textile bill is the way to go.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HOLLINGS. How much time do I have remaining, Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina has remaining 25 minutes and the Senator from Oregon has 17 minutes.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, momentarily I yield myself several minutes.

Mr. President, I ask my distinguished colleague not only to read the Washington Times but to read the Washington Post of yesterday, specifically the article entitled, "China Initiative Is Paying Off For Washington—State, That Is—Persistent Effort Bringing Billions in Trade."

It is wonderful to read that article because it reveals one of the secrets to the success of Washington State's aircraft industry.

The Senator from Washington has said that the textiles are the most protected industry he has ever seen. We have multifiber arrangements, bilaterals, tariffs, and quotas. One thing we don't have that Senator EVANS' aircraft industry has is subsidies.

I remind my colleagues that we have never asked to roll back quotas on Bangladesh or any other country. In fact, with the discretion granted the administration, I would hope they would reallocate more generous quotas to the less developed countries and quit making the rich countries richer. I would allocate some from Korea, which is doing so well, and some from Taiwan, and some from Japan. They are richer than you and I.

I agree with Senator EVANS. Let us look out for Bangladesh. You can do that under this bill. There is no rollback. More to the point, there is no subsidy. I have not tried to do for textiles what the Senator from Washington has learned to do for his principal industry. Mine happens to be a national industry; his is not. He says his is important to national security. I have proved that mine is important to national security. We have proved as much in formal hearings.

The aircraft industry is subsidized to the tune of $6 billion by the Export-Import Bank, through credit and loan guarantees, and what have you.

So the Senator from Washington has brought us to the crux of the matter. Am I to tell those workers of mine—$6 an hour in the apparel industry, $7 an hour in the textile industry—"What we have is a policy for those getting $14.74 in the aircraft industry to give them subsidies, but we can't give you a chance to survive because you are already allegedly protected?"

Protected? Let us look to the facts.

We had a pledge of protection—namely a pledge to enforce our Nation's trade laws. That is all we have asked for. In a letter to my distinguished senior colleague, Senator THURMOND, and to the distinguished former Representative from the Fourth District of South Carolina, Representative Campbell, now Governor Campbell, President Reagan pledged that he would enforce the law and link the rate of growth in imports to the rate of growth in domestic consumption.

Does the Senator from Washington know why we put that provision in this bill? I will read part of the Reagan letter, which is dated January 18, 1980.

I ask unanimous consent to have the letter printed in the RECORD, Mr. President.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

JANUARY 18, 1980.

Congressman CARROLL A. CAMPBELL JR.,
Longworth House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CARROLL: I share your concern for the well-being and continued viability of the American textile-apparel-fiber industry, and its more than two million workers. I want to pledge my strong support for renewal of the Multifiber Arrangement, and for such other actions which will enhance the international competitive position of the industry.

The MFA has brought a vital measure of order to textile trade by setting a framework for bilateral agreements establishing quotas for imports from developing, low-wage nations. The instrument is not perfect, but its renewal is imperative. My administration would seek MPA renewal, hopefully in a strengthened form. We would consider, for instance, keying import growth to the growth of the American market. We should explore the possibility of setting global quotas or guidelines. We would bargain for the tightest possible bilateral agreements, particularly with the Peoples Republic of China. With developing countries relying on textile exports to help them cover rising oil costs, this MFA renegotiation will be even more difficult than it was in 1977. We need a strong President, who looks to the needs of this country, to handle negotiations.

The textile industry, of course, would also benefit from incentive-oriented business initiatives which I support, such as accelerated depreciation and new tax deductions designed to encourage job-creating capital formation. Business productivity and modernization must be stimulated, and we should look to our tax laws to provide incentives for growth.

The textile industry is an integral part of South Carolina's and the nation's economy. I look forward to working with you to keep the industry sound.

Sincerely,

RONALD REAGAN.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I read from the letter:

> We would consider, for instance, keying import growth to the growth of the American market. We should explore the possibility of setting global quotas or guidelines.

So now we have introduced the bill, pursuant to the wishes of the gentleman who asked that it be done, and who vetoed the bill. That is why we changed the bill, to satisfy the President and follow his policy. What do we find? We find in the Wolff report, for example, a description of the EEC quota system, and I quote:

> Under MFA III, the EEC, unlike the United States, reduced the quota levels of its "dominant" suppliers in the most sensitive product areas beginning in January 1983.
> The EEC quotas in sensitive categories were established pursuant to "global ceilings"—overall limits on the quota levels from all suppliers combined. The United States does not use such aggregate limits in establishing its quotas.
> The U.S. annual growth rate on most quotas is six percent or more; EEC growth rates are generally less than six percent.

So now we propose to do what the Europeans are doing. One comment by my distinguished colleague was that the Europeans are doing fine and do not have any quotas. The fact, to the contrary is that the Europeans have global quotas and, as a result, have reduced their textile trade deficit from $5 billion in 1980 down to $1 billion last year.

In 1980, we had a textile trade deficit of $4.7 billion. If we had done what President Reagan pledged, if we had linked import growth to domestic consumption, that deficit would have risen to $7.8 billion. Instead, the U.S. textile trade deficit in 1987 skyrocketed to $22 billion.

Mr. President, I know that my senior colleague is coming to the floor in a moment, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, how much time does the Senator from Washington wish?

Mr. ADAMS. Two minutes.

Mr. PACKWOOD. I yield 2 minutes to the Senator.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I am opposed to the textile bill. But the issue before us now is not the bill itself; rather, the issue is whether or not we want to invoke cloture on it, even before debate has started.

I have a very substantive amendment to this bill, one that is very important both in terms of the revenues of the bill and the whole practice and operating procedure.

I ask my friends—and this is a bipartisan opposition to this motion for cloture—that if they have to vote for cloture, they not vote for it at this time; that we have an opportunity to debate these amendments; that we have an opportunity to present them; because we have just finished a very important trade bill. That trade bill took us weeks and months. This bill that is proposed today moves in a completely opposite direction. It moves in the opposite direction, and we will not have the time, if a cloture motion is adopted, to either try to reconcile this bill, to correct it, or to take the protectionism portions out of it. This bill is a protectionist bill. I think the proponents and opponents all agree to that. Having just passed a trade bill, I do not think we should immediately vote cloture at this time, having just returned from recess.

If we are under cloture rules, those of us who have very substantive amendments—they are very complicated amendments that involve such things as quota options and whether or not you can raise money or this will violate the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act, as well as other provisions of this bill—we will not have an opportunity to fully explain them to our colleagues.

This could change the whole trading system which we have used under the multifiber agreements.

I understand the concern of the Senator from South Carolina about the whole textile regime. But this is not the time, in the waning moments of this session, to pass this bill, under very limited rules of debate, because I know that Senator HOLLINGS and many of his colleagues have spent years and months—years overall, months in this session—working on this bill.

But even at the last moment as the Senator from Oregon will point out and this Senator from Washington and the other Senator from Washington will point out, this bill is undergoing change. We have three bills pending, and on those three bills there are great differences. How do we take a trade bill that we have just passed with great difficulty, add this to it, and have any kind of a trade philosophy, trade strategy, trade plan for this great Nation that the other nations of the world will understand and will move us forward?

We have tried very hard to craft a trade bill that will give us the strategy in a global economy where we can manage the U.S. economy in a fashion so that all of our businesses have an opportunity to compete.

Senator HOLLINGS fears that if we do not adopt cloture, a filibuster will develop—and he is right. But we are being asked to adopt cloture now before a filibuster has started and before debate has begun. I do not challenge the decision to file cloture; I would not seek to prevent my colleagues for voting for it at an appropriate time. But this is not that time.

Mr. President, if cloture is invoked now, a number of amendments, important amendments, will not be debated and considered as completely as they should be. Debate will be limited and those of us who seek to either defeat or improve the bill will have the opportunity for debate reduced. I would ask my colleagues to give us some time to debate this bill: If they plan to vote for cloture, I would ask them to vote for it the second time a cloture petition is offered. Give us a few days to make our case and get our amendments—amendments which are relevant but perhaps not germane—before this body where they can be considered on their merits and not just on their technical conformity to postcloture rules.

Mr. President, earlier this year we spent weeks debating the trade bill. All we are asking for is a few days to debate this bill—a bill which radically reverses the progress we made in the Trade Act. This bill would put us on the path of protectionism, a bill which invites a trade war, a bill which will violate several of our international agreements, a bill which will not help the textile workers but will harm other valuable and productive sectors of our economy.

Mr. President, this is a major bill. Senator HOLLINGS and his colleagues have worked on it long and hard, they have spent years on it. We ought to have a few days to debate it before cloture—and all its associated constraints—is adopted. Mr. President, at least on this first go around, I ask my colleagues to reject this cloture petition.

Mr. President, I would hope my colleagues who are listening to me would oppose this cloture motion. It will soon be up for a vote. We have not had an opportunity to debate it. We are prepared to debate it and to debate it substantively and on specific issues.

I thank the Senator from Oregon for yielding me time, and I yield back to the Senator from Oregon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HOLLINGS. I yield to the other distinguished colleague from Tennessee for 4 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee is recognized.

Mr. SASSER. I thank the distinguished Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. President, I rise today in support of S. 2662, the Textile and Apparel Trade Act of 1988.

This bill, I submit, is a reasonable solution to the devastating problem facing the domestic shoe, textile, and apparel industries, and that problem is one of increasing foreign imports that are driving our workers away from their jobs and driving American businesses under water. Since 1981, 400 domestic shoe plants have been closed resulting in a loss of 60,000 jobs in that industry alone. Statistics for the textile and apparel industries are equally as grim, if not grimmer. During these same years, 1,000 textile and apparel plants have been closed with a loss of 300,000 jobs.

S. 2662 is a carefully crafted bill designed to address this import problem by limiting the impact of foreign imports. The bill does not roll back these imports. Nonrubber shoes, for example, imports would be set at the level of imports in 1987, which is 81.6 percent.

I would submit, Mr. President, that giving foreign exporters or foreign shoe manufacturers 81.6 percent of the American market is very, very generous. This would be a global quota established on nonrubber shoe imports. Quotas for textile and apparel imports are allowed a 1-percent growth each year, and the President is provided maximum flexibility in the allocation of these quotas.

As all of us here are well aware, the domestic shoe industry has been especially hard hit by foreign imports of nonrubber shoes. Import penetrations currently stand at 82.5 percent. Nationwide, the shoe industry has lost 60,000 jobs, which is over 40 percent of its work force. Unless Congress acts, the situation will not improve. This year alone, 1,800 shoe jobs have already been lost.

My own State of Tennessee, for example, is the sixth most important shoe producing State in the country and ranks fourth in total people employed in the shoe industry. Almost 8,000 Tennesseans work in the shoe industry; another 400 work in leather tanning to supply the shoe industry. These are real jobs and they involve real people. Many shoe workers are women who live in small, rural communities where there are few alternative jobs available. Often, they are single parents and the sole support of their families.

I have discussed their plight with them. They come to me and they say: "Senator, I am 45 years old. All I know is work in the shoe industry. They are closing the plants. I have two children to support. What do I do?"

Import penetration in the shoe industry has increased from 22 percent in 1968 to its current 82.5 percent in 1987. In this same period, shoe employment in the State of Tennessee has gone from 14,531 in 1968 down to 8,000. This loss of jobs has had a devastating effect on many of the small towns where shoe plants were located. In many areas, these manufacturers were the largest employers and entire towns and counties have felt the negative economic impact of shoe plant closings.

The domestic shoe industry has already attempted to use our current trade laws to address the injury the industry has suffered due to imports. Most recently in 1985, the International Trade Commission unanimously agreed that injury had occurred to the domestic shoe industry and recommended a plan for relief consisting of 5 years of import limitation.

In a very short-sighted action the President of the United States, Mr. Reagan, denied this relief for the shoe industry that would have protected thousands of jobs that was recommended by his own International Trade Commission. As a result, hundreds of additional jobs have been lost in the State of Tennessee.

The domestic shoe industry continues to be injured irreparably by imports coming in from abroad, and it is clear, given the action of this administration, that the only recourse left to this industry is that of legislation.

Import penetration for shoes has reached a level higher than any other major industry—82.5 percent. As those of us who have been working on this issue predicted, the same problems are occurring in other industries as well. Shoe import penetration in 1981 was 51 percent, just below where apparel is now. Shoe imports grew to over 80 percent of our domestic shoe market in only 5 years. Apparel imports have risen from 32 to 54 percent in those same 5 years. At current rates, the apparel industry will lose thousands of additional jobs just as the shoe industry has lost them.

We should pass this legislation and pass it quickly. It will allow our domestic shoe, textile, and apparel industries to compete with the high levels of foreign imports flooding our country. Our domestic industries need and deserve our help. Thousands of American jobs depend on our prompt action on this legislation.

We cannot let those hard-working Americans down. We cannot stand idly by and allow these American industries to disappear. I urge my colleagues to join us in passing this much-needed legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KERRY). Who yields time?

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, I yield myself 8 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, we normally pride ourselves in most industries if there is a reduction in employment because we attribute it to productivity. In no place is this better true than in the agricultural industry. How often we have bragged in this country that in 1900 there were 20 million farmers and now there are 3 or 4 million, and we feed 50 or 60 people for each farmer in comparison to Hungary, Russia, or China?

That is productivity. There is declining employment in agriculture and we bragged about it. We say that is good.

And the Senator from South Carolina, and he is one of the most articulate spokesmen for this industry, all but admitted that the bulk of the employment decline in the textile industry has not come because of imports; it has come because of productivity. He cited, and I cannot remember if it was the dining room or not—they used to have 115 workers; now they have 15.

We ought to be doing everything we can in this country to invest capital and to reduce employment in industries by increasing productivity. That is the way we will increase our standard of living. That is the way we will increase total employment in this country.

Because of the fact you reduce employment in agriculture does not mean you have more unemployment in the country. Because you reduce employment in textiles does not mean you have more unemployment in the country, although, as a matter of fact, last year employment in the textile industry in this country increased, and if you look at the three principal textile States in the country, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, in Georgia last year, while the textile industry has lost 10,000 jobs over the last 6 years, they have gained 565,000 jobs in other industries in Georgia. In North Carolina the textile and apparel industry has had rising employment in the last 2 years, and while over the 6-year period of 1981 to 1987 they lost 17,000 jobs, other nonagricultural employment in the State of North Carolina alone rose 465,000.

South Carolina the same. They lost 27,000 jobs in the textile industry from 1981 to 1987, although in both North and South Carolina the employment went up last year, but in South Carolina they had an increase of 196,000 in other industries.

This is nothing, Mr. President, but the normal cyclical growth of this country and as we become more and more productive and as we squeeze and squeeze and become more efficient you have fewer employees able to turn out more goods and increase the wealth of this country.

So I do not think we should worry, per se, about do we have more or fewer employees in the textile industry. If we want to have more employees it is simple enough to do. Let us not just have quotas, not have a limit, we will put up a barrier on the imports of textiles. We will adopt a Luddite philosophy and destroy the machinery and I will bet you we can have 20 million people employed in the textile industry alone, maybe another 10 million in the apparel industry if the standard solely is employment. But the normal standard we have used in this country is how much more can we produce with fewer and fewer people in that industry. And those people who are squeezed out of one industry go into another, usually into another industry with better paying jobs because, as the Senator from South Carolina has indicated, usually jobs in the textile industry and the apparel industry are not on the higher end of the manufacturing jobs in this country.

Now, let us see who gets hurt if we have quotas, limitations, call it what you want. Who gets hurt is normally the poor.

A good example are the restraints we put on the Japanese automobiles. We have had them in effect since 1981. And what has happened? You have seen the lower priced and the moderate priced Datsuns, Nissans, Toyotas, and Hondas stop. Because if you can only send so many cars to this country, you make more money off of selling a high-priced car than a low-priced car. If you are a domestic manufacturer, you are making more money selling a $25,000 Cadillac than a $13,000 Chevrolet.

So, naturally, when we put the restrictions on imported cars, what did the Japanese do? They cut out their low-priced cars and they sold us their high-priced cars. And that is exactly what you are going to get if you put a limitation on imported textiles. Then the countries that have any quotas at all are going to say, "All right. Let's sell the highest priced textiles, the ones we can make the most profit on, and we will leave to the American manufacturers the manufacture of the textiles for the middle-income and lower-income people." And it will cause the prices to go up, and they are the ones that will get hurt.

Very frankly, in this country, the companies that make high-priced products seldom are asking for protection. I have a very significant textile and apparel manufacturer in the State of Oregon, Pendleton Woolen. I do not want to mislead anybody, but Pendleton would like to have this bill, also. They sell a very high quality, frankly, very expensive product. And their sales have continued up and they are doing quite well in this country. As a matter of fact, they are doing reasonably well in sales overseas. But it is a unique product and a high-priced product that the average $10,000, $12,000, $14,000 a year employee does not buy.

Lastly—and clearly we are going to have lots of other debate—lastly, let us take a look at the profits of the textile industry, whether you measure it on shareholders' equity or whether you measure it on return of assets and compare it with the rest of the manufacturing. In 1986, all other manufacturing had a 4.3-percent return on assets; 4.3 percent in 1986. Textiles had 6.1 percent.

In 1987, all other manufacturing had a 5.6-percent return; textile had 6.4 percent.

In terms of plant capacity, how much of your capacity are you using, in textiles, it is close to 90 percent. The rest of the manufacturing capacity of this country is around 83 percent.

By any standard, whether it is increasing the employment in the last year—and it has gone up in textiles—whether it is return on investment—it is higher in textiles than other manufacturing—whether it is on increased productivity—and textiles have done a wonderful job. In the last 5 years, they have invested and they have been very productive and they ought to be proud of it. But part of the reason they have been driven to the productivity is the competition on imports.

By any standard, if we are going to go toward protectionism in this country, there are other industries that could lay greater claim than textiles to the demand for protection. I would not support those other industries either. But of all the industries that have a difficult time at this stage in our industrial restructuring—and we have seen tremendous restructuring in the last 7 years—the textile industry is the one that is doing almost better than any other industry.

I say "textiles," I do not say "apparel"; textiles being the cloth, apparel being the cloak, for a lack of a better description.

On apparel, we have not yet learned to fully automate, as we have in textiles. It is still difficult to make a man's suit with automation. There is still a lot of handwork involved in it.

Interestingly, Japan, which is often cited as an example, has faced this situation 20 years ago, 25 years ago, actually, Japan was in the top five of exporters of both apparel and textiles.

Today, they are still in the top five on the export of textiles. They are not in the top 20 on the export of apparel.

When you go to buy a blouse, when you go to buy a suit, take a look in the jacket—we require labeling—and see how many things you find made in Japan.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon has used the 8 minutes allotted to him.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, I will use 30 more seconds and then I will yield the remaining time to the Senator from Texas.

You will find them made in Bangladesh, the Philippines, Indonesia, India, Brazil—not Japan. Japan learned to do the things they can do very well, which was invest capital, move into areas that are highly automated, and compete in the rest of the world.

The textile industry in this country has learned to do that. They do not need protection. They do not deserve protection. I would hope that this Senate would not give them protection.

I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. PACKWOOD. How much time remains on this side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon controls 4 minutes and 22 seconds.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, I yield whatever time is remaining to the Senator from Texas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I think it is fair to say that our distinguished colleagues from South Carolina, who are leaders in this effort, are among my most favorite Members in the Senate. In fact, my dear colleague from South Carolina, the junior Senator—and he would be a senior Senator in any other delegation, virtually, in the Senate were he not serving with STROM THURMOND—is one of my dearest friends. I have been on this floor on many occasions doing the Lord's work with him in trying to balance the Federal budget. So, as you can imagine, when I found that my two dear friends and colleagues were trying to help out the textile industry, I assumed they needed help.

In fact, I started looking into it, because I had a meeting this morning with a fellow from the pipefitters union in Beaumont, TX. In Beaumont, TX, our unemployment rate is somewhere between 15 and 20 percent. People move in and out. It is hard to get a good measure. Our pipefitters have taken a 25-percent cut in wages to try to stabilize their deteriorating economic circumstances.

And so I tried it out on him as to whether he thought that we ought to pass a textile bill. I explained to him that virtually every study I had seen indicated that to save a job in the textile industry through more protection costs about a quarter of a million dollars a job.

Now, there is some dispute about that, but I do not think anybody has argued that it costs less than $100,000. Most of the arguments I have seen have said, "Well, it costs about $220,000 a job in terms of higher costs to the consumer."

So his question was: Well, maybe they need help worse then we do. He said: "Is unemployment in textile areas of the country worse than it is here?"

So I looked up in the statistics, looking at the top five textile States in the country. I found that, if you take your unemployment levels, they averaged, in June, 4.8 percent, which is a level 15 percent below the national average. In the shoe producing States it must be great to be out of the shoe business, because if you take the five largest shoe-producing States in the Union, their unemployment rate in June was 4.38 percent, about half of the rate of unemployment in my State.

Then we started talking about: "Well, maybe the industry is being destroyed. Maybe people in the textile business are just going broke and they are fortunate enough in these States to have other good things happening, and maybe they need our help. Maybe these guys that have been laid off in other industries ought to pay higher prices for shoes for their children to go back to school this fall; going back to school today. Maybe they ought to pay higher prices for diapers and for the children's clothing they have to buy, so that they can help out the textile industry."

The only problem, Mr. President, is when I went back and tried to get this statistic on what has happened to, say, output in textiles, I found that it is up by 13.5 percent over the last 3 years. That is twice the rate of increase for manufacturing as a whole.

Then I thought, well, maybe they are trying to produce more, as in some cases we are with natural gas in Texas, with all of our foreclosures, with all of our financial problems. Maybe they are just producing more, just trying to stay above water. I mean, we are losing money in natural gas, in some cases, just trying to keep companies from closing.

Then I go back, Mr. President, and I look at the rate of return in textiles over the last 3 years and find that it has grown by 69.1 percent, as compared to 25.4 percent for the economy as a whole. In fact, the before-tax rate of return on equity is 26 percent in the textile business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time remaining to the Senator from Texas has expired.

Mr. GRAMM. Well, Mr. President, after I went through all those statistics I figured there is no way in the world I could say to the guy who is out of work in Beaumont: Your children ought to pay more for shoes and textiles so that people can make more money and prosper in other parts of the country while we suffer and sacrifice in Texas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time controlled by the Senator from Oregon has expired.

The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to our distinguished senior colleague.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The senior Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support this cloture vote. The domestic textile and apparel industry is facing a major crisis. If the current trend in job losses persists due to import penetration, massive economic hardship will continue to impact harshly upon those who depend on this industry for their livelihoods. As more than 300,000 textile and apparel jobs have been lost in the past several years, the time for action is now. I repeat, now. This body cannot delay any longer.

This legislation will promote the orderly, nondisruptive growth of world trade in fibers, textiles, and apparel products. It is the result of a cooperative, bipartisan effort on the part of textile and apparel management and labor, Members of Congress, and others concerned with saving this vital industry. This bill is a sound measure that will ensure strict enforcement of our existing trade laws and agreement.

In addition to its economic importance, the textile and apparel industry is critical to the defense of this Nation. We must not allow ourselves to become dependent upon foreign nations for the basic defense requirements of our Armed Forces. Textile employees have spent millions of hours manufacturing textile and apparel items so essential to our military forces. Unless we invoke cloture on this legislation and ultimately pass it, our national security could be threatened.

In my opening statement, I will be discussing, in detail, a report recently released by the Office of Technology Assessment. Its conclusions are extremely disturbing. This report states that "despite the optimism made possible by technical progress, U.S. textile and apparel firms are in danger * * * in spite of these remarkable advances, the industry is gravely threatened." In essence, the ultimate finding of the OTA report is that the domestic textile and apparel industry will be extinct in a few years unless the flooding of our domestic market with foreign textile and apparel imports is halted.

Before closing, I will briefly mention a disturbing situation. The Soviet Union is exporting cotton sheeting and print cloth to the United States. To allow our greatest adversary to profit from our domestic textile and apparel market simply undermines this Nation's commitment to freedom, especially when this industry is so essential to our national defense. We must take action on this vital legislation so that American workers will not lose their jobs to workers in the Soviet Union.

In closing, I urge my colleagues to vote for cloture. The critical importance of the textile and apparel industry to this Nation demands it.

Mr. President, I want to remind the Senate that textile ranks second to steel as a matter of national importance in defense. That has been testified to by the Defense Department. Textile ranks second to steel. If we get dependent on imports, what in the world will happen here if we get into a war?

I say it is extremely important that we pass this bill. It is fair to our workers. It is fair to our country. It is fair to our competitive enterprise to do this and I hope the Senate will see fit to pass this bill and pass it without delay.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, in the closing minutes we have, let me respond to the distinguished Senator from Texas. Let us go from Beaumont to San Antonio. I go to Beaumont, too, and several places in South Carolina—Marlboro County has 11 percent unemployment. But go down to San Antonio, Senator, and you will find out about the health of your textile industry. It is no different there than in South Carolina, Massachusetts, or anywhere else. This bill is for the survivors of that industry. It is not going to make anybody rich.

Responding to the Senator from Oregon, let me say that I never heard in my life such an argument that we ought to be delighted to see employment fall. I have been here 22 years. The Senator from Oregon said that we ought to be happy that there are fewer jobs in the textile industry. Certainly, we never heard such an argument when the issue was farmers. Only a few farmers are now producing enough to feed 15 countries and ourselves. We concluded that we had to save the family farm so that the big corporate combines would not take over. We have subsidized farmers to keep them employed. I never heard the argument that the fewer farmers the better.

Yet the Senator from Oregon comes around and says, in effect, we are all delighted to see the farmers go broke and go out of business because they are producing more and are more efficient. Likewise, we ought to be delighted to let the textile workers all go broke and let them produce more. I say that is nonsense.

I have been to Dae Woo, the largest textile producer in Pusan, Korea. They showed me exactly what they were doing. They have thousands of women, in row after row, all under one roof. In the first three rows they manufacture Bill Blass, in the next three rows they manufacture Liz Claiborne, in the next three rows they manufacture another brand name, all down the line.

They are all young, attractive ladies, and in Korean culture, they come into the textile industry at age 18, work there until they are 20, 21, or 22; 10 hours a day, 6 days a week, $1.35 an hour. And they save up their dowry. Here is my friend, the champion of women's rights. Go back to Oregon and tell the women they all ought to save up a dowry, save up for 4 years, and go back to the village in Oregon and get married. The average age in that Dae Woo plant is 24 or 25 years.

We hear the argument that American textiles need to be more productive. But the fact is that we are already on the cutting edge. Go down to Stonewear in Greenville, SC.

They have a stamp that puts on the button, another stamp that puts on the collar, another machine that puts the pocket on the shirt. It is mechanized.

There used to be 3,700 workers at Stonewear. They now are down to 1,700. They have increased their productivity. But they cannot go any further. Dae Woo plant is not nearly as efficient nor as mechanized and productive as Stonewear in Greenville.

So do not give me that canard that we have got to get more productive. We have reached a critical mass of investment and we cannot keep putting billions in and not getting any profit back when 55 percent of all textiles consumed in this country are represented by imports. Meanwhile, the economic studies, not only the Office of Technology Assessment but also the London Economist conclude that by 1995, 83 percent of all textiles consumed in the United States will be imported.

That is the road we are on at the present trend. We are talking about the survival of the U.S. textile industry.

I do not want to demean the high purpose of this bill by talking bold politics. I would be delighted to debate this bill for a month. I could get reelected doing it. But the truth of the matter is we must respect the time constraints imposed by the leadership of the Senate.

The leadership has got a lot of business and less than a month to do it in. The Senate has heard the arguments on this textile bill. This bill passed the House a year ago by a vote of 263 to 156, and it has been debated and we have amended it with the agriculture and the tie amendments. All the colleagues have had the chance to debate. They have heard the pros and cons, and they are willing to have cloture, 30 more hours of debate.

Thirty hours is more than adequate to air the issues. I would love to debate at greater length, because I can see some Senators are not as informed as they should be about the nature of the worldwide competition, about the standard of living, and about the industrial backbone of this country. We know military competition. We know space competition. But, Senator, we do not know anything about industrial competition.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

WE MUST OPPOSE THE TEXTILE QUOTA BILL BECAUSE IT WILL TRIGGER A SEQUESTER

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I rise to oppose the textile quota bill. I think this bill has many features, but there is one that I believe has not been debated here yet.

This argument is so persuasive to me, however, that I want my colleagues to understand that if the Congress passes this bill and it becomes law, there is a very serious risk of a sequester next month under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings process.

The preliminary estimates by the Office of Management and Budget and the Congressional Budget Office for this bill are a loss in revenue from customs duties of $1.1 billion. There is an estimated gain from the auction of import quotas of $1.2 billion. These numbers are already published, and superficially they make the textile quota bill seem revenue neutral.

However, Mr. President, the United States has many obligations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and other treaties with non-GATT nations. Under these treaties, the United States would be obligated to pay compensation to those trading nations who will be hurt by this legislation.

Mr. President, preliminary estimates by the Office of Management and Budget are that approximately $6.1 billion in compensatory trade payments could have to be made to textile exporting nations under our international treaty obligations if this bill becomes law. The President will certainly carry out his duty and send up a request that we make these payments.

My colleagues are aware that at the present time, the initial OMB sequester report, issued on August 25, shows a deficit estimate of $144 billion—just under the mandatory sequester trigger of $146 billion. To the $144 billion, however, must be added $400 million for the omnibus trade bill, $300 million for the Hunger Prevention Act,

In addition to that total, which comes to $145.3 billion, we are looking at perhaps another $400 million for the welfare reform bill, $100 million for the United States-Canada Free Trade Agreement. We may pick up $50 million by taking the Postal Service off budget, and we may pick up $200 million by adopting the technical corrections tax bill, but, Mr. President, that will still leave us with less than $1 billion of leeway under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings sequester target of $146 billion.

I would ask my colleagues if they think this election-year issue of textile quota legislation is worth a sequester? I would remind my colleagues that if a sequester is implemented, it would cut the deficit back to $136 billion—in other words, to spend a small extra amount of money on textile protection, we will have to suffer a $16-billion cut in everything else.

Remember, it is OMB which will decide if a sequestration is imposed on the fiscal year 1989 budget. It is OMB which has told us about the $6.1 billion compensation cost. This is something I believe all of us should think about now as we begin this rollcall vote.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I would like to take a few minutes to discuss the cloture vote we are going to make today on S. 2662, the Textile and Apparel Trade Act of 1988.

Regardless of the merits of this bill, I believe we must look at the effect this type of cloture vote has on the procedures and rules of the U.S. Senate. The Senate is designed to be a deliberative body, in which each piece of legislation on the Senate Calendar is to be given adequate time for debate on its merits.

Although cloture petitions are often necessary to insure that debate will not be endlessly delayed by a filibuster or other dilatory tactics, that is not the situation we are in now. I am troubled about the use of cloture petitions to place a time limit on floor debate prior to the beginning of discussions on a piece of legislation.

This bill, S. 2662, is a serious piece of legislation that deserves to be given the full consideration of all the Members of this body. It poses important questions for our trade policy and for American industries and consumers. In light of my position on the use of cloture petitions, I do not believe we should be voting to cut off the debate on this bill, before it has even begun.

Therefore, I must vote against this cloture motion, to allow the Members of the Senate to have the time necessary to more fully debate and consider this bill.

Mr. DOLE addresed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE. I ask unanimous consent I may proceed for 2 minutes.

Mr. HOLLINGS. If I can retain it, sure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina has 35 seconds. Is there a unanimous-consent request for additional time? Is there objection to that request? If not, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I take the 2 minutes to determine whether or not amendments filed by Senator Evans—I think he filed a two-page amendment, which is really 17 amendments, but the Parliamentarian has held it constitutes 1 amendment; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. DOLE. I just indicate to the managers of the bill, I support the bill. I would like to support cloture. I cannot do that unless we resolve this question of Senator Evans, a very real question. He offered 17 amendments. The Parliamentarian ruled it is only one amendment. I hope we can resolve that issue before the vote on cloture. I would be constrained and encourage my colleagues to vote against cloture. I would like to vote for cloture. I think we are taking advantage of the situation. It can probably be resolved before that vote.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the distinguished Republican leader yield?

Mr. DOLE. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I discussed this with Senator Hollings, and there would be no objection to having those amendments numbering 17 offered as separate amendments and having it qualify with the rule. But could we also agree that there would be no second-degree amendments?

Mr. DOLE. I think those are second degree.

Mr. BYRD. Really there should be no amendments to those amendments or are there second-degree amendments filed?

Mr. DOLE. Second-degree amendments have been filed.

Mr. BYRD. Those are timely filed. I have no objection, Mr. President, if the distinguished Senator wishes to make that request.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I need the attention of the Senator from Washington before I make the request. The request would be that amendment No. 2860 will be 17 amendments rather than 1.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. BYRD. No objection on this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

There being no objection, Amendment No. 2860 was renumbered Amendment No. 2860-A through Amendment No. 2860-Q.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

CONVENTIONS ON EARLY NOTIFICATION OF A NUCLEAR ACCIDENT AND ON ASSISTANCE IN THE CASE OF A NUCLEAR ACCIDENT OR RADIOLOGICAL EMERGENCY, WITH DECLARATIONS ON THE PART OF THE UNITED STATES—TREATY DOCUMENT NO. 100-4

INTERNATIONAL NATURAL RUBBER AGREEMENT—TREATY DOCUMENT NO. 100-9

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 12:30 p.m. having arrived, the Senate will now go into executive session to consider Executive Calendar Nos. 11, 12, and 13.

All time having expired, the question is on agreeing to the resolutions of ratification. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Arizona [Mr. DeConcini] is necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Arizona [Mr. DeConcini] would vote "yea."

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. Hatfield] and the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Stafford] are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The yeas and nays resulted—yeas 97, nays 0, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Two-thirds of the Senators voting having voted in the affirmative, the resolutions of ratification are agreed to.

The resolutions of ratification agreed to are as follows:

CONVENTIONS ON EARLY NOTIFICATION OF A NUCLEAR ACCIDENT AND ON ASSISTANCE IN THE CASE OF A NUCLEAR ACCIDENT OR RADIOLOGICAL EMERGENCY, WITH DECLARATIONS ON THE PART OF THE UNITED STATES—TREATY DOCUMENT NO. 100-4 [ROLLCALL VOTE NO. 311]

Resolved, (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the Convention on Early Notification of a Nuclear Accident and the Convention on Assistance in the Case of a Nuclear Accident or Radiological Emergency, done at Vienna on September 26, 1986, subject to the following declarations on the part of the United States of America: "With respect to the Convention on Early Notification of a Nuclear Accident."

As provided for in paragraph 3 of article 11, the United States declares that it does not consider itself bound by either of the dispute settlement procedures provided for in paragraph 2 of that article. "With respect to the Convention on Assistance in the Case of a Nuclear Accident or Radiological Emergency."

In accordance with paragraphs 3 and 4 of article 2 and paragraph 2 of article 7, the United States declares that reimbursement of costs is among the terms of assistance it may provide unless the United States explicitly specifies otherwise or waives reimbursements.

With respect to any other state party that has declared pursuant to paragraph 9 of article 8 that it does not consider itself bound in whole or in part by paragraph 2 or 3, the United States declares pursuant to paragraph 9 that in its treaty relations with that state the United States does not consider itself bound by paragraphs 2 and 3 to the same extent provided in the declaration of that other state party.

With respect to any other state party that has declared pursuant to paragraph 5 of article 10 that it does not consider itself bound in whole or in part by paragraph 2 or that it will not apply paragraph 2 in whole or in part in cases of gross negligence, the United States declares pursuant to paragraph 5 that in its treaty relations with that state the United States does not consider itself bound by paragraph 2 to the same extent as provided in the declaration of that other state party.

As provided for in paragraph 3 of article 13, the United States declares that it does not consider itself bound by either of the dispute settlement procedures provided for in paragraph 2 of that article.

AMENDMENT TO THE STATUTE OF THE INTERNATIONAL ATOMIC ENERGY AGENCY—TREATY DOCUMENT NO. 99-7 [ROLLCALL VOTE NO. 312]

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to acceptance of an amendment to paragraph A.1 of Article VI of the Statute of the International Atomic Energy Agency, as amended, relating to the composition of the Board of Governors, which was approved by the Agency's General Conference on September 27, 1984.

INTERNATIONAL NATURAL RUBBER AGREEMENT—TREATY DOCUMENT NO. 100-9 (ROLLCALL VOTE NO. 313)

Resolved, (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the International Natural Rubber Agreement, 1987, done at Geneva, March 20, 1987, and signed on behalf of the United States on August 28, 1987.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the resolutions of ratification were agreed to, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume the consideration of legislative business.

TEXTILE AND APPAREL TRADE ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to vote on the motion to invoke cloture, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close the debate upon the bill S. 2662.

Senators Ernest F. Hollings, Harry Reid, J. Bennett Johnston, Paul Simon, J.J. Exon, Daniel P. Moynihan, Claiborne Pell, Wendell Ford, Carl Levin, Bill Proxmire, Strom Thurmond, John J. Rockefeller, Terry Sanford, David Pryor, John C. Stennis, Richard Shelby, Quentin Burdick, George Mitchell, Jesse Helms, and Tom Daschle.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By unanimous consent, the quorum call has been waived.

The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate on S. 2662, a bill to remedy injury to the U.S. textile and apparel industries caused by increased imports, shall be brought to a close? The yeas and nays are required, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Arizona [Mr. DECONCINI] is necessarily absent.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HATFIELD] and the Senator from Vermont [Mr. STAFFORD] are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KERRY). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The yeas and nays resulted: yeas 68, nays 29, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 68, the nays are 29, three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn having voted in the affirmative, the motion is agreed to.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT—SENATE RESOLUTION 465

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the majority leader is recognized.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I think it is agreed between the two leaders and Members on both sides that the following request be agreed to. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate Resolution 465, a resolution welcoming back our distinguished colleague, Mr. BIDEN; that there be 20 minutes of debate thereon, 10 minutes under the control of Mr. ROTH and 10 minutes under the control of Mr. KENNEDY on this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE RETURN OF SENATOR JOE BIDEN TO THE SENATE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will now consider Senate Resolution 465, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 465) concerning the return of Senator Joe Biden.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I am delighted to stand today and to address my resolution to officially welcome back my good friend and distinguished colleague, Senator Joe Biden. As we all know, Senator Biden has boldly recovered from two life-threatening aneurysms, following successful surgery at Walter Reed Medical Center. We are all pleased that he has been given a clean bill of health by his medical doctors.

As a Member of the Senate, I am pleased that my distinguished friend and colleague has returned. His influence, intellect, and activity on this floor has been sorely missed. And as a Delawarean, I am also pleased to add my voice to the throng of others among my fellow citizens in saying: We're happy you're back, Joe. I know that despite party politics, or ideological affiliation, since February of this year when the night lights burned in thousands of homes across Delaware, our wonderful families were praying for the speedy recovery of their Senator.

Though Joe and I agree on many things, we also disagree on others, but on one thing we stand inseparable—that is in our desire to serve the people of the first State. From Sussex to Kent to New Castle, Joe's energy and dedication to the people is well known and appreciated.

Most recently, his desire to serve thrust him onto the world stage and under the spotlight scrutiny of the press. Through it all, his poise and courage reflected a man called to serve. As Ernest Hemingway would say, it reflected grace under pressure. And Delaware was proud.

On December 1, 1783, the famed English statesman, Edmund Burke paid tribute to Charles James Fox for his attack on the East India Co. His words, though more than 200 years old, can also be used to pay tribute to the man we honor with this sense of the Senate resolution. He said:

> He well knows what snares are spread about his path, from personal animosity and possibly from popular delusion. But he has put to hazard his ease, his security, his interest, his power, even his popularity.
> He is traduced and abused for his supposed motives. He will remember that obloquy is a necessary ingredient in the composition of all true glory; he will remember that calumny and abuse are essential parts of triumph. He may live long, he may do much. But here is the summit.

Mr. President, because of the dynamic personality Senator Joe Biden demonstrates on the floor of this hallowed Chamber; because of his long service to the great people of Delaware—and to the people of the United States; because of the strength of his character to doggedly pursue the course of public service that he set for himself, despite the opposition along the way; because of the strength of his mind and body to overcome the threats these aneurysms represented to family, life, and service; and because I am just plain happy to have Joe back, I have submitted this sense of the Senate resolution and asked for its immediate consideration.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, on behalf of my colleagues on this side, I join with Senator Roth and others on the other side of the aisle in welcoming back our distinguished colleague, Joe Biden. He has been missed and we are all delighted that he is back with us. He is the chairman of the Judiciary Committee and he does an excellent job there, as we have seen, in his fairness, his integrity, and his dedication to duty many, many times over repeatedly.

Mr. President, as the leader on this side of the aisle, I have truly missed Joe Biden. We only have 54 Democrats, as we know. With Joe's absence, we were left with 53, and 2 of our colleagues were running for President for quite a while, so that left us with 51. And the majority cannot get much thinner than that. But I know that Joe Biden was with us in spirit.

There is one thing about Joe. When he was running for President he always said to me: "When you need me, Leader, let me know and I will be there." That was the kind of spirit that he displayed in those days and that is typical of Joe Biden.

So I am going to bend the procedures just a little bit here and say: Welcome back, Joe. We are all delighted to see you and see you looking so well, so hale and hardy and strong. We look forward to your being back at the helm of the committee which has been ably run by Senator Kennedy, Senator Metzenbaum, and others in your absence. But, just as there is no place like home, there is no hand on the helm like the chairman's hand, Joe Biden.

Mr. President, I yield as much time as he may require to the distinguished President pro tempore, Senator Stennis.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, I have just been downstairs. I got the wrong information. I thought you were down there and you were up here. I am delighted to get here and have a chance to say a few words.

If I may refer to the first days that you were here, I was correct when I said he is a comer. I felt like he enjoyed his work, and that is one of the first essentials. You cannot stay here long unless you enjoy your work to some degree. But you enjoy yourself to an unusual degree, and it is a great asset in public life.

I commend you highly for your attitude and for your ability and for your willingness to use that ability, generously and graciously.

I love the concept of the U.S. Senate, and I am proud of the purposes that it served all these, over 200, years. It takes men like you, with purposes like you have, a willingness to work, sacrifice, and then do it all over again, if necessary. That is what makes our system go.

I am one of your constituents to a degree. You came down to my home State, once. I remember our people received you with open arms, and received the attitude, what you said, the fine spirits that you had. And I bring you greetings from them. They always ask about you whenever I go home. I am pleased with that.

So, again, I appreciate you very much as a fellow Member of this body and you have meant something to me. Helpful, but the big story is that you have done things that will help our great Nation and our people and our system, our system of government.

May God bless you and continue to watch over you and give you strength for your work.

Mr. BIDEN. Thank you.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, when both Joe Biden and I were much younger in this Senate we shared hallway space on the sixth floor of the Dirksen Building. When you are on the same hallway you are frequently riding to votes, walking to votes, with whoever your hallmate is, and Joe and I got to know each other quite well in a short period of time.

I well remember in the summer, of 1973, it must have been, I would say, Joe, when my staff went up to the Senator's place in Wilmington for a Saturday afternoon staff party, joint staff party, with the two staffs, in which the afternoon centered around tough, fair, what was called touch football. It was "touch" in name only. But it was tough and it was fair. And Joe and his brothers and Joe and his sister, Valerie, were as decent a competitor as you could have; tough competitor.

But, without question, they intended to win. And without question we intended to win. I cannot remember, I have not got the foggiest idea now which of us won. We both won, probably. But the hallmark of what I saw that afternoon with Joe is what I have seen on the Senate floor in the ensuing 15 years, tough, fair, intending to win.

I would sooner debate one Joe Biden, and know that I will be pushed to the wall and have to defend every thought, have to put up with his absolutely unsurpassable humor in the midst of a serious debate, when humor can do more to defeat you than all of the arguments that an opponent might muster—I would sooner deal with that and debate with him and fight with him and on many occasions join with him than with a dozen lesser lights. And the Senate has been a lesser place in the last 9 months while he has been gone. It will be a much greater place when he is now back and I welcome him with open arms and look forward to some of that continued tough, fair, competition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware, Mr. Roth.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I yield to the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts, Senator Kennedy.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, just a few moments ago I think we saw one of the rare moments in this institution, ones which I think all of us who have the opportunity to share them, value very highly. That was a real outpouring of affection and respect and care for one of our very fine Members who has been absent too long, my very good friend and our chairman of our Judiciary Committee, Joe Biden.

I said down there, when we were with our colleagues from both sides of the aisle, that on both sides of the aisle all of our colleagues have been asking: Where is Joe? Because all of us have missed him. We know where he has been. He has been recuperating. But we are all a better institution because of his return here to the U.S. Senate. He is back where he belongs, as the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, where he presides with such effectiveness and fairness and devotion to duty and protecting and advancing the rights and liberties of all the people of this country. I know this is a great day for the institution of the Senate. I know it is shared by his wife Jill and his wonderful family, who were such sources of strength and courage during these very difficult times, and I join with those saying: Welcome back, Joe. You are where you belong. Thank you.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I was momentarily off the floor, but I understand we are welcoming back my good seatmate and very close friend, our distinguished Senator, Joe Biden, of Delaware. I really have missed him because we argue and then we concur and I learn. He has got the best balanced, measured judgment of perhaps anyone in this body.

We are all talking about a balanced budget. I think we need more balanced Senators. The distinguished friend from Delaware has really made a tremendous contribution. I prayed for his recovery and will continue to do so. I had a member of my own staff subjected to the same threat that very fortunately got up to London, Ontario, where they have the classes on this particular kind of surgery. So I followed with those doctors there and everything else, our doctors out at Walter Reed, and I was delighted to hear of the tremendous progress. A miracle has occurred. I know Joe Biden would be the first to recognize that. I know the body is blessed to have him back. I know I will start having a better time. I am tired of sitting back there and now that they have the rail, I will not have anybody to talk to unless Joe comes back.

I welcome him back to this body. He is a friend and great Senator, and we are delighted, Joe, to get you back.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware [Mr. Biden].

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry. I look for guidance from the Chair and leader. I have never been in this position before and I do not know whether it is appropriate for me to make a brief response now. Is it appropriate?

Mr. BYRD. Yes, it is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would state that we all welcome you back with warm and open hearts and the Chair would be very pleased to recognize the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Biden]. Welcome back, Joe.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Senator from Delaware may have as much time as he needs and wishes in which to respond.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. I thank the Chair and I thank my colleagues. I will not take much time because there is too much important business of the Nation beyond my expressing my gratitude and warm feeling I have about coming home. It is hard for me to believe that I have been in the Senate for 15 years already and without going through and responding to each of my colleagues and what they said, very briefly when I was in the hospital the only one of my colleagues I saw, because he was also in the hospital, was Senator Stennis. And to think that I would be, one day, on the floor of the U.S. Senate being paid such accolades by such a man of character and courage as John Stennis is beyond any expectation that I ever had in my wildest dreams. I mean that sincerely.

Out at Walter Reed, which is an incredible institution, I do not mean to sound melodramatic, but there is no question that the doctors and their skill and the grace of God are the two things that saved my life. When you go into Walter Reed, ward 72, they speak almost in hushed tones of John Stennis. There are more stories from the nurses, the orderlies, and the doctors about what incredible courage and stature and character that man has. So, I say to you, Senator Stennis, for you to say the things you said to me in front of my mother and father is something that I will never forget.

Also, for the warmth and affection, genuine affection that was shown by my senior colleague, Senator Kennedy, who came to see me, who—as a matter of fact, I am a little worried. The Judiciary Committee ran a heck of a lot better in my absence. And we disagreed less in my absence.

But I want to thank him for not only the affection he has shown but for literally looking out for my interests, as he has in my absence. And to Senator Bob Packwood. Bob, I do not remember who won that game, but I do know that I, also, learned something and that is that this place is one, notwithstanding our busy, diverse schedules, that can, in the most unusual circumstances, foster genuine friendships. And we do not often get an opportunity because of our mutual schedules. We spend a lot of time with one another. The fact of the matter is that those friendships formed are ones that last. I appreciate your kind words, and coming from one of the most skilled debaters in the entire U.S. Congress in the 15 years I have been here, it is a high compliment for you to say what you said.

Fritz Hollings took care of me for a long time. He took care of me in 1973 literally under similar circumstances, and he is always looking out for me. I am continuing to count on him. The reason I sit in this seat is because I have to have someone to lean on who is big enough to take the shots. He has taken the shots and has taken them for me and with me, and I appreciate his comments also.

And, leader, you have been extremely generous in, again, protecting my interests and looking out for my concerns, both in my absence previous to last September and my absence since February. You are a man of your word who has always gone out of his way to come to my aid and assistance when I have been in need.

Lastly, let me say to Bill Roth—it will probably get us both in trouble—Bill Roth has become a close personal friend. Bill Roth and I, in a sense, made an unwritten agreement years ago that we would both work for the interest of our State and neither would do anything that would in any way attempt to undercut the other's efforts in that regard. Little did I know many years ago that it would turn into a genuine friendship. Bill Roth has been generous to me beyond what I can express here on the floor, and the resolution and the contents of the resolution, Bill, are, in fact, unwarranted and unneeded, but much appreciated.

What is appreciated most of all is your close friendship. It is rare, I guess—I think it is not rare, but the idea of coming to the U.S. Senate and serving with a man of very different philosophic points of view on many subjects and of a different political party and never once in our entire relationship ever has a crossword passed either of our lips relative to one another is something I feel particularly fortunate in being blessed with a colleague from my State who feels that way about me as I do about him.

I do not want to say more because if I say more, it may be the Irish in me will creep out and maybe become a little too sentimental. But the fact of the matter is I remember a comment that was made a long time ago in another context. It was a comment made in a speech by DANIEL PATRICK MOYNIHAN. I do not remember the exact quote, Senator MOYNIHAN. It went something like this: "To fail to understand that life is going to knock you down is to fail to understand the Irishness of life." It was said more eloquently than that.

In the last 18 months, I learned that. One of the things I also learned is that friends make a difference. Having a place where you want to be makes a great difference and having the feeling that if you come back to the place that you want to be that you are going to be welcomed makes even more of a difference. You, my colleagues, in several difficult times in my life over the last year have stood up for me and with me on both sides of the aisle. It is much appreciated. It will never be forgotten. I still probably will not vote with half of you as we go down the line here, but I will not forget the sentiments expressed and support given over the last year for me. It means a lot. Thank you very much.

(Applause.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question occurs on agreeing to the resolution, Senate Resolution 465.

The resolution (S. Res. 465) was unanimously agreed to.

The resolution reads as follows:

S. RES. 465

Resolved that as Joseph Biden returns to the United States Senate, after a six month absence to recuperate from surgery, his fellow members in the Senate of the United States extend their warmest welcome and personal happiness as well as their very best wishes for his continued good health.

TEXTILE AND APPAREL TRADE ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill, S. 2662.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2662) to remedy injury to the United States textile and apparel industries caused by increased imports.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I make a point of order that the pending bill violates the U.S. Constitution in that it is a revenue-raising bill originating in the Senate. The Senate has upheld such points of order in the past, and I hope that they will do it now. Article I, section VIII of the Constitution states, "All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives."

On March 28, 1935, the RECORD contains a precedent involving this question. On pages 4584 through 4613, for another example, on January 16, 1924, the Senate voted that S. 120 to provide a tax on motor vehicle fuels in the District of Columbia was a violation of the constitutional provision on revenue.

Just as in the prior examples, this bill also should be ruled out of order by the Senate. I urge my colleagues to uphold the Constitution, which prohibits revenues bills from originating in the Senate, and to vote to rule this bill out of order.

Mr. HOLLINGS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the precedents of the Senate, points of order involving constitutional points of order are submitted to the Senate for debate and for decision.

The Senator from South Carolina seeks recognition.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I appreciate the distinguished Presiding Officer for his ruling and, of course, for recognizing me. The point of order is premature. Everyone knows in this body—and we have now had 68 votes—we have been debating this matter for a full year since the House bill came over. They understand the mechanics of what has just occurred. We had a bill in the Finance Committee, and we had the delightful opportunity of putting it on a revenue raising bill in the Finance Committee, namely the trade bill.

It was agreed at that time to keep textiles off the trade bill because it could have caused a veto; a similar measure had been vetoed in 1985 by the President of the United States. The agreement was that we would have the textile bill reported separately without recommendation. Thereafter, in order to forego a lot of the amendments and the various motions to proceed to the bill, which has already now been answered by our colleagues with the overwhelmingly majority 68 votes for cloture, we put the bill under rule XIV to have it voted upon and then substituted for the House bill.

The House bill passed in September of last year. It is at the desk. This is just like a second reading. If we do give it a third reading, then it would be the intent of the managers of the bill to move that it be substituted for the House bill. That would be the appropriate time. Really it is an appropriate point, of course, for the other body to make because if we start making that point and upholding it, then we almost get gridlocked within our Finance Committee. They find themselves many, many times in the position of having now to raise the revenue in the consequence of our Budget Act.

As the former chairman of a Budget Committee would understand, any time you effect revenue, then under another rule this is not in violation of the Constitution, this is not in violation of the rules but, rather, in order to comply with those rules we find ourselves in this position. So the point is made in appealing to the Chair and our colleagues of the body that on constitutionality, if the question is put by the Chair, we vote aye, because it is the intent and there are no monkeyshines about handling the bill and all to substitute it for the House-passed measure, on the point that the distinguished Senator from Texas is now making about all revenue measures under the Constitution derive from the House of Representatives.

Mr. SANFORD. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of S. 2662, the Textile and Apparel Trade Act and thank my colleagues for their overwhelming vote to bring this bill to the floor, 68 votes indicate we can override the President's expected veto. It is high time that the Senate pass this bill. Indeed, 8 years ago, when he was running for the office of the President, Ronald Reagan promised the 2.2 million textile and apparel workers of this country that if elected, he would relate the amount of growth in textile and apparel imports to the amount of growth in the domestic market for these products. The day has finally come for the Senate to make good on the promise that this administration has utterly failed to keep. If President Reagan had kept that promise, imports would have grown about 1 percent per year. Instead, they have doubled since 1980.

The unrestricted flow of imported textiles, apparel and footwear into the United States must be curtailed immediately, or one of this country's largest and most important manufacturing industries will be fatally damaged. Indeed, this bill is crucial to the lives and long-term economic stability of the over 350,000 fiber, textile and apparel workers in my homestate of North Carolina.

Most foreign producers of textiles face labor costs so far below those of American manufacturers that they would be expected to sell their goods at prices well under those that U.S. companies must charge. But the U.S. textile and apparel industry has not sat back and watched this tide of imports from low-wage countries simply wash over them. Rather, they invested over $18.9 billion in new capital spending to modernize their plants and have the lowest work/time per product of any country in the world.

But despite these heroic efforts of our domestic workers, imports have captured huge portions of both the apparel and footwear markets in the United States. We cannot let an uninhibited invasion of foreign textiles continue, as this industry is far too vital to the American economy.

IMPORTS HAVE TAKEN CONTROL OF OUR DOMESTIC TEXTILE MARKET

In the last 7 years, imports have taken unprecedented shares of the American textile market. Since 1980, imports have nearly doubled their stake in the apparel and apparel fabric market, as they hold 55 percent of a market in which they controlled only 28 percent just 7 years ago. Equally alarming is the fact that foreign-produced shoes account for 82 percent of the American footwear market, up from 50 percent in 1980. If these trends continue without restrictions, in just 5 years imports will control 90 percent of the apparel market, while American footwear manufacturers will be on the verge of extinction.

Mr. President, the American textile, apparel, and footwear workers have waited far too long for this legislation. They have done their part in addressing the trade deficit by consistently improving their productivity, efficiency and the level of their exports. Now it is time for the Congress to do its part to preserve this essential domestic industry. I strongly urge my colleagues not to turn their backs on the 2.2 million textile and apparel workers in this country. It is time to stand up for American workers and time to pass the Textile and Apparel Trade Act.

Mr. GRAMM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, it was my understanding that points of order under cloture were not debatable. Since the distinguished Senator from South Carolina spoke at length, I would like to state very simply one thing and then relinquish the floor.

Mr. President, the Constitution is very clear on this issue. The Constitution says all bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives.

We are already operating under extreme circumstances on this bill. Not one amendment has been offered, no real debate has occurred, and yet we have already imposed cloture. Now we are in the process of violating article I, section 7 of the Constitution of the United States.

I am going to insist that we have a rollcall vote. I hope my colleagues will not let politics override our obligation to uphold the Constitution of the United States. There is no doubt about the fact that unless this were later fixed, the courts would strike this bill down. But this violates the fundamental rule of the U.S. Senate, and the fundamental rule of the U.S. Senate is that no other rule of the Senate overrides the Constitution. So I urge my colleagues to uphold the point of order.

Mr. HOLLINGS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I move to table the point of order and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from South Carolina to table the point of order raised by the Senator from Texas. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Arizona [Mr. DeConcini] and the Senator from Hawaii [Mr. Matsunaga] are necessarily absent.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. Hatfield], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Lugar], and the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Stafford] are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Conrad). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 71, nays 24.

AMENDMENT NO. 2881

(Purpose: To provide that the textile quota shall not apply in any year in which the domestic industry has an above-average return on its assets)

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, I have an amendment at the desk, No. 2881, which I call up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Oregon [Mr. Packwood] proposes an amendment numbered 2881.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 11, between lines 5 and 6, insert the following:

(3) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the limitations imposed by this Act on the aggregate quantity of textiles and textile products that may be entered in any calendar year shall not apply if the Secretary of Commerce determines that the average return on assets of firms in the United States that manufacture textiles, or of firms in the United States that manufacture textile products, for the calendar year preceding such calendar year exceeds the national average return on assets of all manufacturing industries in the United States for the calendar year preceding such calendar year.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, will the distinguished Senator from Oregon yield?

Mr. PACKWOOD. I yield, and then I will yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I yield a half hour of my time to the manager of the bill, Senator HOLLINGS.

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, I yield a half hour of my time to the Senator from South Carolina on this bill.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I thank the Senators.

Mr. SANFORD. Mr. President, I yield 30 minutes to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. BYRD. By unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, my amendment is a relatively straightforward and simple amendment.

The argument has been made that the textile industry has been devastated, that it is losing its profits, that it is going to go out of business. My amendment provides that the proposed quotas and limitations in the bill will not go into effect if the textile industry is more profitable than the average of other manufacturing industries in the United States.

Most industries in the United States do not get protection from the Government with respect to quotas, regardless of whether profitable or not. If indeed I am correct—and I think I am correct—that the textile industry has been immensely more profitable by any standard——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator suspend?

Let us restore order in the Chamber so that the Senator can be heard.

Mr. PACKWOOD. If I am correct—and I am quite sure the facts stand reasonably, starkly admitted—that the textile and apparel industries collectively have been significantly more profitable than other U.S. manufacturing industries over the past number of years, they have no need for protection.

My amendment says that if the Secretary of Commerce determines that the average profitability of firms in the U.S. textile and apparel industry exceeds the national average return on assets of all manufacturing industries in the United States for the preceding year, then the limitations of the textile and apparel bill would not apply.

Mr. President, I have indicated that there are a number of ways you can determine profitability. One is profitability on stockholders' equity. In 1986 in the textile industry, that profitability was 13.1 percent. In 1986 for all other manufacturing industries, it was 9.5 percent. In 1987 for the textile industry, it was 15 percent. For all other manufacturing industries, it was 13 percent. That is one way of determining profitability.

The more common way is called return on total assets, and that is the method my amendment uses. On a return on total assets, it shows the same thing as the profit on stockholders' equity. In 1986 for the textile industry, it was 6.1 percent. In 1986 for all other manufacturing industries, it was 4.3 percent. In 1987 for the textile industry, it was 6.4 percent. For all other manufacturing industries in 1987, it was 5.6 percent.

Mr. President, every one of us has industries—mine happens to be the timber industry—that we would like to protect, I suppose, against foreign competition. We think: If we can just protect the industry in our State, which is an exception to the normal concept of attempting to open markets worldwide, if we can protect our industry and leave the rest wide open to competition. Of course, we all come from different States, whether it is North Dakota, South Carolina, or Oregon, and naturally we defend our constitutents and put blinders on. We do not think that the protection of our industry violates any kind of normal philosophical concept of wider markets.

I cannot go home and say to my burgeoning electronics industry—and it is burgeoning, although it has to compete with Japan and Singapore—or to my timber industry, which is gradually beginning to expand into more foreign exports on finished lumber but is having a tough time in competition with Canada and others—I cannot say that we gave protection to the textile industry, and their employment has gone up 30,000 and their profitability and productivity are greater than my industry, and we have given protection to the textile industry.

I do not want to mislead anybody. I think this is a bad bill, with or without this amendment. All I am trying to do with this amendment is to say that if the textile industry is more profitable than the average of the rest of the U.S. manufacturing industries, then the quotas and limitations in this bill would not apply. That, to me, at a minimum, would seem to be what we ought to require, or else we are saying to the textile industry: "You are an exception; you are exclusive. You will get protection regardless of your profitability, regardless of your increase in employment, regardless of your dramatically increasing exports." You will get protection, even though industries doing worse, suffering greater unemployment in States with greater unemployment, industries with lower profitability get nothing.

So I think from a standpoint of fairness, Mr. President, this amendment should be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, let us get right to the point on this issue of the increase in jobs and the loss of jobs.

My figures are from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and they are impeccable.

As I stated, Senator THURMOND and I in our "Dear Colleague" letter in early August, just 1 month ago, before we left town, quoted the figure of the Bureau of Labor Statistics at 21,000 textile jobs lost in 1988.

Since early August, however, the Edisto plant that employs 1,000 in Orangeburg has closed, as has the Greenwood Mill and several others across the country.

So let us not have misinformation passed off as accepted fact. U.S. textiles are going out of business, and jobs are the name of the game.

I have stood here in the Senate until 1 o'clock in the morning debating a $5 billion bill to create jobs for minorities and women. We are ready to pay for those jobs, just dole out from the public till. Of course, there was no money in the public till. We went down and borrowed it because the Finance Committee has not passed any taxes recently.

So what we do is go and borrow the money and just pay people to get work.

In contrast, textiles are a basic industry, critical to our national security, the greatest employer of women and minorities, and we are cavalierly kissing off the jobs and, unbelievably, we are told by my distinguished colleague that we are actually increasing jobs. Jobs, not profits. Such a claim, frankly, shows an unawareness of the cyclical nature of textiles.

I can tell you categorically that this is a cyclical industry. It operates between peaks and valleys, you go up and you go down. Indeed, that has been our trouble. As a Governor 25 years ago I went with our colleague, Senator HATFIELD, soliciting jobs for what we call the underemployed. The underemployed include textile workers who may work 6 days a week and then get layed off in a plant closedown. Right now, we are going back down into the valley. We were at a peak last year. We are going back into the valley now for the next 2 or 3 years and they are laying off many thousands.

I ask unanimous consent that the following list of textile plant closings and layoffs thus far in 1988 be included in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

What this bill offers the U.S. textile industry is a vital degree of certainty and predictability as to our Government's policy toward textile imports. Without that confidence in our Government's policy, the industry is reluctant to continue its investment and plant modernization. If the prospect is that a flood of imports will sweep away domestic U.S. textiles, there is no incentive to invest further in a doomed industry.

If you have a bill that says you must wait for some auditor to come around and say, "Well, you made a profit, and, therefore, the bill does not apply," you cannot tell what is going to happen. Always you are seeking a profit.

So what do you do? You try to make a profit or you try to continue the particular policy because if you do not continue the particular policy, you lose your plant. You are on the horns of a dilemma.

This is another in a line of spurious amendments about constitutionality. Let no Member be misled into thinking that he or she is going to vote for big profits unless you vote for the Packwood amendment. Not at all.

I am prepared to yield to my senior colleague or, at the appropriate time, move to table this particular measure.

But what we have here is a cyclical industry, and we are down in that valley now and we would certainly qualify. I would not worry in the next year or 2 years or 3 years, and, in fact, if we do not pass this bill I would not worry at all in the next 2 or 3 years because I know, as the London Economist has stated, by 1995, 83 percent of all textiles consumed in America will be imported, just like shoes are now in Oregon. That is where Nike is. They do not make a shoe in Oregon. They import shoes and they bring them in over the docks.

I have a dock. I live on one. My address for years is 2 Boyce's Wharf, Charleston, SC.

I know about trade. But we built up the economic backbone of this country on exports, not imports. You are turning us into a colony. You want to export, yes, your raw materials, your lumber, your wheat, your corn, your soybeans and your coal, and we are going to import all the finished products.

The only trouble is this is the first colony that had to pay for its own defense. The Japanese have colonized us. It seems like they would pay for their defense. We are stupid enough not only to be colonized but to want to pay for it and when we try to save a basic industry along comes an amendment like a minute ago that says you ought to be tickled to death when you get unemployment; now it says you ought to be tickled to death under this measure when you do not make a profit.

I am ready to move to table the amendment, but I will yield time.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, will the Senator from South Carolina yield for just one question so we can get our facts at least right?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield for a question?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Yes.

Mr. PACKWOOD. On my time. I am citing U.S. Department of Commerce statistics that textile and apparel industry employment in 1987 increased by 32,000 jobs. I am only talking about 1 year.

Does the Senator have a different figure from the Department of Commerce or the Department of Labor?

Mr. HOLLINGS. We have the latest figure. I am reading from the Daily News Record September 6. I am talking about jobs this year; employment in the apparel industry, dated September 6, 1988. Employment in the apparel industry in August totaled 1,091,000, a decline of 1,000 positions from July and 7,000 from August; jobs total of 1,098,000 employment in the textile industry last month amounted to a seasonably adjusted 721,000 jobs. This is from the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Mr. PACKWOOD. I am talking about 1987 for the full year, and I am talking about textile apparel.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Textile and apparel is the figures we use when we said textile; that is right. We use them both. We agree on that.

Mr. PACKWOOD. I have a 32,000 job increase figure in 1987.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I have a 31,000 decrease in 1988, and we are not through the year.

Mr. PACKWOOD. All right. I just want to make sure we are not talking apples and oranges.

Mr. HOLLINGS. That is right, do not talk apples and oranges. That is what I mean.

Mr. PACKWOOD. When my good friend from South Carolina said what they have to have is certainty, that is indeed what this bill is, and that is what this is designed for.

You know, the market system is not about certainty. The market system is about uncertainty and competition and taking a chance and if you do not do well you sometimes go bankrupt and if you do very well you make great profits, and the companies that are best managed and the most competitive and the most productive are the ones that do well, but if what you want is certainty, what you want to do is go back to the Coal Baron and mercantile system. The Government will give one franchise out for textiles and protect it, one franchise out for lumber and protect it, and you will get certainty and you will be guaranteed a profit year after year after year.

We used to have that, Mr. President, in the trucking industry in this country until deregulation of the trucking industry. It did not matter what their costs were and, of course, there was no international competition. It did not matter what their costs were so long as they all paid the same costs. And then you went to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Interstate Commerce Commission was required by law to guarantee them a profit. That was certainty, and the very badly managed companies made some profit and the very well managed companies made a great profit. And you know who paid for it? The consumers in this country, every one of them.

Jimmy Hoffa discovered the trick. It did not matter the teamster drivers made $20 or $25 or $30 an hour so long as all of the major trucking companies paid $20 or $25 or $30 an hour and so long as the Interstate Commerce Commission when faced with the tucking industry that said "Our labor costs have gone up 20 percent last year" was required by law to say "Oh, my goodness, your labor costs have gone up. We have to give you 20 percent plus 6 percent profit" and charge every Safeway store and Giant store and every dry goods store and department store in this country more to ship the goods and they pass it on to the consumers.

That is what this textile bill is. It is basically a gigantic Interstate Commerce Commission for the textile industry. It is certainty. It is a guarantee. You will make a profit, and the consumers will pay for it and the poorest consumers will pay the most, will pay the most because it is the goods that they buy that will be the most affected by this bill and because they have relatively small amounts of money, it will be at a much higher percent of their income of $12,000 or $13,000 or $14,000 or $15,000 a year than it will someone who is making $25,000 or $50,000 or $100,000 or $1 million a year.

I do not need to say to this Senate the other repercussions of this bill because there is no question but what this violates all of our so-called multifiber agreements, it violates the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs, and the other countries of the world will have a legal right to take action against us in the form of compensation or recrimination against our exports, frankly, and some of those in the form of wheat and other grains and lumber are probably going to come out of the hides of my State.

If I was any agricultural State Senator I would have grave reservations about this bill which guarantees profits regardless of ability or management competence to the textile industry at the expense of consumers, especially poor consumers, at the expense of the agricultural States of this country.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, lest somebody come to the conclusion that the textile industry is standing before us naked, lacking protection, threatening to lose the next war because our soldiers are unclothed, let me just state a few facts that I think are relevant to this amendment.

First of all, every time Americans buy a textile product produced overseas, they are paying an average tax of 18 percent in the form of a tariff. That is the highest tariff imposed on any major industry in America. In fact, it is six times higher than the average tariff imposed on all other manufacturing goods combined.

There are 1,500 quotas on textiles in force today—1,500 quotas. Do you want to know what a quota is? A quota is where the Government says that it is illegal for free American consumers to buy textile products that they choose beyond a certain limit. The combination of an 18-percent tax and 1,500 quotas means that the American consumer today is paying almost $30 billion for clothing above what would be paid in any kind of relatively free market.

When we last debated textiles, it appeared that the textile lobby had lost the debate. In reality, they did not lose. The Reagan administration, through the Multi-Fiber Arrangement, imposed more restrictions on textiles. The cost of textiles to the consumer is now rising at twice the rate of inflation. And, much to its shame, although everyone knows it has had every pressure in Congress to do the wrong thing, the Reagan administration is going down on textiles as one of the most protectionist administrations in the postwar period, a situation that historians are going to have to leaven by the fact that we have had runaway protectionism in the Congress. And the reason for the protectionism was made very clear by my dear friend from South Carolina when he talked about how he would like to debate this issue right up to the election.

The problem is the guy I am worried about here is not up for election. He is a guy who is trying to buy clothes for his children, trying to buy shoes for his children. He is producing a product that does not have 1,500 quotas. He is producing a product that does not have an 18-percent tax on foreign produced goods. And we are going to force him to spend almost another $10 billion to buy those shoes, to buy those clothes for his children.

Mr. President, no matter how you figure it, the facts in this case are totally clear. No one has argued that Americans are not paying at least $300 per family and maybe as much as $700 per family more for clothing than they would pay if we did not have all these restrictions. Now, for a U.S. Senator making $89,000 a year, or whatever they are making, maybe that is not a big deal. But I can tell you, to an unemployed pipefitter in Beaumont, TX, that is a big deal. And it is not right.

Now, the facts in this case are pretty clear. We can mess around with how we want to define things, but let me give you some facts that are clear.

First of all, according to the U.S. Department of Commerce, textile manufacturers have seen profits, pretax profits, rise by 69.1 percent since we last voted on the textile bill, more than twice as fast as the growth in profits for all manufacturing, which have gone up by 25.4 percent.

Last year, the pretax return on equity—that is not a debating figure, that is a fact—the pretax return on equity in textiles was 26 percent. Now, my mama sure does not get 26 percent from the savings and loan. My uncles that are in the used car business, they are not getting a 26-percent return on their investment in some old Chevrolet.

Do you know why these returns are 26 percent? It is because we mandated it right here on the floor of the U.S. Senate. We mandated that the working men and women of America were going to be ripped off by a conscious policy of the Federal Government.

Now, Mr. President, I promised myself that I am not going to get all excited and self-righteous on this bill, and I intend to work to see that I do not. But this amendment before us is a very simple amendment. It does not say you cannot rob the working men and women of America. It says go ahead and steal from them, but—but—you can only make that unemployed pipefitter pay more for his children's clothing if the before-tax rate of return on equity in textiles is no greater than average for all manufacturing in America.

No other industry in America has those kinds of protections. But we are saying, all right, let that happen, but do not make the working people pay more money for the gown their mama is wearing at the nursing home, or for the shoes their children are buying to try to go to school, when the before-tax rate of return on equity in the textile industry is 26 percent.

I want to say to my friends in the textile industry, when you come up here and lobby for this bill when your before-tax rate of return last year was 26 percent, you are absolutely shameless. Now there is nothing unusual about being absolutely shameless. It happens here every single day. But nobody who supports this bill ought to stand up and say, "You know, I am not a protectionist. I just want fair trade."

Where is fair trade here? Do you know where the fair trade is? The last time we went down this road we got in a dispute with Communist China about 50 million dollars' worth of textiles. We were going to show them. We were not going to let them sell those $50 million here and sell cheaper clothes that somebody might want to buy. We were going to stomp out that freedom; just, boom, gone.

Do you know what happened? The Chinese said, "All right, we don't sell the $50 million textiles, but we don't buy 699 million dollars' worth of cotton"—699 million dollars' worth of cotton. Well, maybe that made somebody feel good in the textile business, but that cost America one awful lot of jobs.

Mr. President, the amendment before us is about as simple as it can be. If the distinguished Senator from South Carolina is right and things are going to hell in a handbasket in the textile industry, then this amendment will not go into effect. Even though the level of capacity utilization in the textile industry—that is the percentage of plant and equipment that are being used today in the textile industry—is 92 percent, which is the highest of any major industry in America, if the Senator from South Carolina is right that things are going to go to hell, then this amendment is not going to have any effect at all.

But if you vote against this amendment, what you are saying is that no matter how profitable this industry is, we are going to make the working men and women of America pay more for their children's shoes, more for their children's clothes, in order to make it even higher. And I do not think that is right.

So I do not see how anybody, even if he is the most protectionist person you could imagine, could oppose this amendment. This just says, be protectionist when you are not making a normal rate of return. But when you are making a higher rate of return than manufacturing in general, do not pass a law that forces the working men and women of America to lower their living standard and send their children to school without being adequately clothed.

There is a further point I want to make, and I never tire of making it, because it addresses one thing I cannot understand in arguments made for this bill. It is not as if the textile manufacturing States are having tough economic times.

If you take the top five States in America that produce textiles, their average unemployment rate today, as of June 1988, was 4.8 percent. That is 15-percent below the national average. If you take shoes, it is 4.38 percent, which is 25-percent below the national average. In fact, most of the States that are big producers of textiles and shoes have unemployment rates that are half the unemployment rate in my State.

Why should I force the people of my State to pay more for shoes and more for clothes to benefit people in parts of the country that are experiencing unparalleled prosperity? And I congratulate them on that prosperity. I hope it will spread. I would like to see that before-tax rate of return 75 percent. I love to see industry in America improve its profits. But I do not love passing laws that guarantee birds' nests on the ground when the bird nest on the ground means that the eggs get eaten by some fox or bobcat. That is the problem here. So this is an important amendment, and I hope my colleagues will not walk through that door, close their eyes, and say, "Which way am I supposed to vote to help the textile industry?" This amendment helps 240 million Americans who have to buy clothes.

Finally, I hear this argument, that you cannot defend the Nation unless we have got enough drawers for our troops. We have an absolute prohibition, an absolute prohibition in every defense bill we passed, that you have got to buy American textiles for national defense. We pay billions of dollars of the taxpayers' money, unnecessarily, by preventing competition on defense. So, no matter what happens, we will always have a domestic textile industry for defense, because this Congress will not allow the taxpayer to compete in buying textiles—will not allow it, would not hear of it.

If the taxpayer could save money, they will not allow it to happen. So I hope nobody will be confused by that. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I yield such time as necessary.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I have a letter here that answers the Senator to a great extent. This is addressed to me.

> DEAR SENATOR THURMOND: Once again there is to be a vote on the future of the U.S. Textile and Apparel Industries. As in the past, spurious arguments are being heard from those who decry any action by the Government. The arguments are:
> Profits are up.
> The figures for the first quarter of 1988 compared to the first quarter of 1987 show profits.[1]
> | | Percent |
> |---|---|
> | All manufacturing | +49 |
> | Automotive | +1 |
> | Electronics | +7 |
> | Textiles | −12 |
> [1] Source: Quarterly Financial Report, U.S. Department of Commerce, released June 13, 1988.
> Plant Activity is high.
> Orders for Textiles have fallen 9 percent in the first four months of 1988. Currently, plant activity is declining.
> Quotas have been established to control imports.
> This is true only for certain products from certain countries. New sources are being developed faster than new quotas can be implemented.
> Overall, the rate of increase of Textiles and Apparel imports has declined. However, this is due as much to the decline in the market as any action taken by the Government. The facts remain clear imports of Textiles and Apparel continue, inexorably, to seize an ever-increasing share of the U.S. market.

Then he goes on to say:

> In Congress, there is debate on the need to reduce the number of people on welfare, yet the Textile and Apparel Industries who can and do provide employment at the entry level for so many are denied the opportunity of doing more. Are we as a country really interested in having the lowest cost (not price) merchandise for the benefit of importers, and then pass the charges for welfare to another account.
> Gradually, but surely, foreign suppliers are taking over the U.S. Textile and Apparel Industries just as surely as they have taken 82% of our footwear manufacturing.

Senators know what has happened to the shoe business. The same thing now is happening to the textile business.

> The decision before the Senate is whether these industries are to have a future in the U.S.A., or whether they are to be gradually but surely sacrificed.

Mr. President, I want to say this. The textile industry gives more jobs to the people who are not skilled and more jobs to women than any industry in the United States. It is helping these low-income people. They could not get jobs elsewhere. It is helping these women who could not get jobs elsewhere.

The figures show clearly, as I just stated here for 1987, that all manufacturing is up 49 percent; textiles is down 12 percent.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Based on pretax profits, the textile industry is over twice as profitable as the national average for all of the other manufacturers. Is that not enough, to be twice as profitable as any other industry? And you still want help? How on Earth can you ask for that, and say for our industry alone?

If, indeed, your profits are going down, then my amendment is not going to hurt. If you fall below the national average, this bill is going to be in full effect. If you are above the national average, all we are saying is that you are not going to get special help that agriculture or timbering or electronics or the automobile industry or anybody else does not get.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, my timber industry profits are up.

Let me say how we do agree. The Senator from Oregon and I agree on the issue of uncertainty in the market. When I talked about certainty, I wasn't talking about the certainty of profits. I was talking about certainty of policy. I was talking about the stability of our Government's policy. Under this bill you are going to have another element of certainty, and that is the certainty of competition. Because what this bill says is those several thousand U.S. textile producers who are still in business will have to compete with all the foreign importers, despite those foreign producers' low standards of living, lack of restrictions on child labor, absence of environmental protection laws, and so on, and so on. Imports will grow along with domestic consumption. So we have got the certainty of competition. This bill does not protect anybody from competition. But it gives certainty—maybe that is a badly-used word—stability of policy.

The Senator from Oregon tells us again and again that an industry must have long-range planning. How are we going to expect a manufacturer to make a long-term investment unless we have some stability of U.S. Government policy.

I agree with the Senator from Texas that, yes, we have had arrangements, all these so-called bilaterals and all the other so-called quotas, and they have not worked. We continue to go down, down, from when President Reagan said he would stabilize U.S. policy, from a $4.7 billion textile trade deficit in 1981 to a $24.8 billion deficit in 1987. And let us not get led down the primrose path about the pipefitter and the poor fellow as compared to the rich Senator. The true figures are those produced by that most eminent of market researchers, the Market Research Corp.

The Market Research Corp. determined in 1985 that the price of domestic-produced apparel was $17.61 compared to the import price of $17.67. The assumption of the argument is that when you bring in an imported article, even though it is produced with cheap labor, you get a cheap article.

You are not saving money for consumers. Back in 1985, we filled up the Senate floor with apparel. I went to Garfinckel's, I went to Herman's Sporting Goods, I went all over town to purchase garments manufactured in the United States and similar garments manufactured abroad. And we proved that there is virtually no price difference. I repeat, according to Market Research Corp., the 1985 retail price was $17.61 for domestic-produced apparel compared to $17.67 for imported.

In 1986, the domestic price of all apparel, $17.30; import price, $17.44.

In 1987, the domestic price, $17.87; the import price of all apparel, $18.09.

It is a retail ripoff for the old pipefitter in Beaumont TX. And you want to continue the rip-off of the pipefitter.

Here, we found a shirt. I knew I had some left in the closet. I was giving them away. This is made in Hong Kong. Is that Lord and Taylor? Beautiful; $36 for that blouse. This one here is made in the U.S.A., crafted with pride in the U.S.A. There we go; $26.99. The U.S.A. is giving a bargain, You picked the right one out of the closet. They were taking them from me. We went around buying them. We can get more in downtown Portland, OR. I will be glad to bring them back and show them to you.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, my good friend has it exactly right. You sell it for $26, make it in the United States or make it overseas, somebody is going to buy that instead of the $36 one. What the domestic manufacturers have discovered is this. If you can sell an imported product for $35, if you are going to compete with it in this country, you are going to have to sell a domestic product for $35 or less.

The consumer in this country may be a lot of things, but the consumer is not dumb. When mama, as my good friend refers to his mother, when mama goes down to the store and has to put shoes on her kid, normally tennis shoes that you go through two, three, four, five pair a year if you have active 6-, 8-, 10-year-old kids, she understands quality and she understands price. She understands junior is going to outgrow the shoes. If they are tennis shoes, he will probably outwear them, so if she can buy them for $15, $16, $18.

If we did not have any foreign competition, do you think the American manufacturer would be happy to sell that shirt for $26, $36? Not if they can sell it for $46. And I am not complaining. I understand the market system. The market system is designed for the manufacturer, the retailer, the wholesaler, and the trucking company who delivers it, to make the most profit they can make, and the better managed they are, the more they will make. But the key to keeping their profits down and their costs down is competition. In this case, foreign competition.

But despite that, employment in the textile industry is going up. You want an industry where it is going down? It is going down in our lumber industry. Last year was the biggest year we had since 1978, almost equaled that year, just above 1 percent or so with about two-thirds of the employees that we had in 1978 because we have become more productive. Your textile industry has become infinitely more productive and, in addition, employment is up year by year over the last 2 years. What this country needs is more, not less, competition and what it needs is less, not more, protection. This bill is a step toward a guaranteed profit. It is a step toward guaranteed less competition. It is a step toward a knockout blow for those people who are making $12,000, $14,000, $16,000, $18,000, $20,000 a year and trying to put two kids through high school, let alone put them through college and trying to clothe them with some kind of decency at a price they can afford.

Mr. GRAMM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I do not want to use up all my time on this one issue, but there is one point brought up every time we have had this debate, and I want to address it. That is this issue: Is it not amazing that these foreign goods sell for the same price domestic goods do if they are of the same quality? By that logic, I always wondered, Mr. President, how come that foreign oil from Saudi Arabia that costs 50 cents a barrel to produce sells at the same price that west Texas intermediate sells at, when you adjust for difference in quality and refining, when it costs us probably more to produce it than we are getting for it?

Why do they do it that way? Well, they do it that way because that is how markets work. Price is set by supply and demand, and where the quality of shirts people are trying to buy at various prices is equal, both domestic and imported, they will be sold at the point where market prices settle.

What the distinguished Senators arguing for this bill and against this amendment are saying is they do not like that price. They want to limit imports to make that price higher. That is what this whole debate is about.

The distinguished Senator from Oregon has said, "All right, go ahead and do it, but don't do it if the rate of return on investment in textiles is higher than the average for the rest of manufacturing in America."

To me, Mr. President, that is a very clearcut kind of issue, and I hope my colleagues will look at this amendment closely.

Mr. EVANS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. President, let me not add very much to what has been so eloquently said by the Senator from Oregon and the Senator from Texas, but we are dealing here with some pretty fundamental economics. It is amazing how the Senator from South Carolina can twist those economics around that could not pass the first year, Economics 101, at any college or university in this country. How in the world he can hold those two shirts up and say that the domestic one is cheaper for the consumer and then somehow suggest that that thinking consumer would go out and deliberately buy the import at a higher price just to support some other nation? That does not make any sense at all.

If, in fact, the retailers are selling equal goods at the same price or the domestic-made goods at a somewhat lower price, then a positive buy American program ought to succeed overwhelmingly. It would not be legislation that is necessary. It is just the education of the American consumer as to what is in their own best interest—quality, cheaper price, availability, that is what the consumer wants. If we provide it, we have no fear and need have no fear of imports.

But when you start to put limitations on the market, when you start to put these bilateral agreements that control imports and a multifiber agreement which is an overarching agreement that limits imports, we are doing exactly the same thing that we did in the supposedly voluntary restraint agreement in the automobile industry.

We got the Japanese under pressure to agree to limit their exports to the United States. What happened when we limited that market? Prices went up. The Japanese, as was said earlier this morning by the Senator from Oregon, just shipped in more expensive cars, and the American automobile industry then found it was profitable for them, at least in the short term, to raise prices.

I think that was a bad business decision because it was a splendid opportunity to add to the market share, to get people accustomed to buying American automobiles once again. But instead they chose to raise prices and missed out on the opportunity to have people buy American. The very same thing can happen in the textile industry. You put in artificial restraints, you affect the market artificially, you distort what retailers, wholesalers, manufacturers, and everyone else can do and the consumer loses, the consumer pays more just as they have in the case of the automobile industry.

The balance sheet over the last several years, the last time I looked was a $5 billion, as I remember, increase in prices to the American consumer, and who got the $5 billion? As I remember, $2 billion of that went to the Japanese automobile industry because they could raise their prices on the limited number of automobiles they sent to the United States. The other $3 billion went to the American automobile industry. And at whose expense? The consumer. Every consumer who bought an automobile, whether foreign or domestic, paid more than they otherwise would have.

You simply cannot artificially control markets without artificially affecting price, without artificially affecting competition, without artificially affecting opportunity, and ultimately without artificially affecting the future of the very industries in the United States we would like to encourage.

Mr. President, I think it is important to understand that even the apparel industry in the United States, supposedly as eager for this bill as the textile industry, has had extraordinary problems with the American textile industry in recent months.

Let me read an article, and I will then ask that it be placed in the Record, in the Women's Wear Daily of Monday, April 18, 1988, entitled "AAMA Lashes Out at U.S. Mill."

Now, who are the AAMA? That is the American Apparel Manufacturers Association. It starts out by saying:

> Antitextile sentiment within the AAMA is running at a high, according to the new Association chairman. He said that apparel manufacturers were angry that at the same time the textile industry was enjoying healthy profits, making it hard to put the case to Congress for harsher import protection, U.S. apparel firms were facing shortages of cotton yarn and specialty yarn dyed fabrics which were protected by import quotas.
> "I have never heard stronger resentment of the textile industry on the part of the apparel industry than I have here at this meeting."

Mr. President, in order to preserve opportunity for the apparel industry, we should give some chance for them to gather the raw materials for their value added here in the United States by buying from domestic mills if they can and buying from foreign mills if they get better value. By restricting that, we end up making it tougher for the American apparel industry to survive.

It gets back to a fundamental question. Today those who buy clothing in the United States and those who sell clothing do so in a different fashion than even a few years ago. Style is important. Changing style is even more important for many consumers. The retailers and the distributors and even the manufacturers of clothing simply have to respond faster to those changing styles. And when one after another of the apparel manufacturers and apparel importers in the United States say, as they have to me, if, if the textile industry would produce materials in small enough runs and fast enough and get them to us soon enough so that we could manufacture in time to meet these changing styles, we would buy domestic goods; there is a refusal. It is easier to make big runs. It is easier to have long lead times. It is easier not to respond to the changing needs of the market. That is the fundamental question, whether this industry, already as protected as it is, already at profit margins higher than other industries in the United States, refuses to understand and respond to the market needs of the very apparel manufacturers they are supplying. No wonder, no wonder they look overseas as they must. And of course to make it even more difficult for our apparel manufacturers, the textile industry seeks to make it even tougher, even tougher for our apparel manufacturers to get the goods they need to keep in business.

Just another reason, Mr. President, why this bill should be defeated but why this amendment certainly should be passed and respected, an amendment that does nothing more than say as long as you are doing better than the vast majority of American companies and American workers, you do not need additional protection.

Mr. HOLLINGS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Fowler). The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. In 1978 we passed the windfall profits provision as we decontrolled oil and gas, and in 1988 this Congress changed it. Congress can change anything. And I am confident if we saw an industry making exorbitant profits and was overprotected, we would be falling over each other trying to get out on this Senate floor to change that and introduce bills which would whip right on through. The Congress is going to meet next year. We will have an election and we will be back in January.

But what they are trying to do is institute instability. I have guaranteed 55 percent under this bill. There is no rollback. I do not know of any politician that will guarantee his opponent 55 percent. This particular industry would be glad, because they have tried every other way in the world through all the Presidents and all the administrations and continued to go down, down, down, to say, "All right, at the highest level of imports in the United States, namely, at that 55 percent saturation, we will not have any rollback. And when there is an increase in consumption, we will give that to the importer. But give us some kind of stability." And the way they put stability is to say let the President measure profits. And they know it is a cyclical operation which goes back to the very point that is continually misquoted. My colleague from Oregon time and again picks out the 1987 figures. Let us just go back a few years now. We could go back—I will put it in—to 1975, but starting in 1982—I am proving the point of the cyclical operation—we had lost 157,000 jobs. We went down to 1,911,000. In 1983, we lost only 5,000 jobs; 1,906,000. In 1984, we picked up 26,000; 1,932,000. And that is what they quoted, using the same game plan they used in 1985. It did not get anywhere. "Oh, the industry is up."

In 1985, we dropped 102,000, for a total of 1,830,000 workers. In 1986, we dropped only 5,000, again down to 1,825,000. But in 1987—this convenient figure—we are back up to 18. Two years ago we lost 102. Now when we pick up 18, he says, "Oh, man, you are doing great." Already in this year, 1988, we have lost 31,000 jobs. So there we are. Those are Bureau of Labor Statistics.

I ask unanimous consent to have them printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the statistics were ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

U.S. EMPLOYMENT

Year	Textile and apparel employment	Job loss that year
1973	2,488,000
1974	2,328,000	−160,000
1975	2,111,000	−217,000
1976	2,237,000	+126,000
1977	2,226,000	−11,000
1978	2,231,000	+5,000
1979	2,189,000	−42,000
1980	2,112,000	−77,000

Mr. HOLLINGS. Finally, the Senator from Texas has come full circle. He said he always wondered why that oil overseas that was gotten out of the ground for 50 cents a barrel was charged the same thing as we did in Texas. He disregards, of course, back in 1955 we passed the oil import quotas. He favored that. He is the economist. I can tell you right now, he was 100 percent right for that. But he ignores the OPEC cartel. And that is why it pays the same amount. But when the OPEC cartel broke apart and Nigeria and Indonesia and Mexico started shipping in oil at the cheaper price when the cartel broke, Beaumont, TX, went to 15 percent unemployment. It did not pay to produce any oil at all. He did not have to wonder about the price. The Senator has answered his own question why they got 15 percent in the refrain he continues to quote because now the cartel is busting and the market forces are taking operations. And we say let the market forces take the operation here but let us do it like the Europeans—globalize. They have come down from a $5 billion to a $1 billion deficit since 1981. We have gone from the $5 billion, $4.7 billion to be exact, to a $25 billion deficit under all of this protection and they are sneaking in this kind of profit measure to give instability where it just will not pay to invest in the industry and we will continue to go out of business as the London Economist is quoted.

Mr. President, unless there is further debate, I move to table the amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from South Carolina to lay on the table the amendment of the Senator from Oregon. On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Arizona [Mr. DeConcini] and the Senator from Hawaii [Mr. Matsunaga] are necessarily absent.

I further announce that if present and voting, the Senator from Arizona [Mr. DeConcini] would vote "yea."

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. Hatfield] and the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Stafford] are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 62, nays 34, as follows:

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion to table was agreed to.

Mr. EXON. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senate will be in order.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas [Mrs. Kassebaum] and the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Nickles] have said they would give me the hour they have on the bill. So I ask unanimous consent that the time that would otherwise be allocated to those two Senators be allocated to me.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 2862

(Purpose: To suspend the provisions of the bill in the event that they would impose a disproportionate burden on the poor)

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 2862.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

> The Senator from Texas [Mr. Gramm] proposes an amendment numbered 2862:
> On page 20, strike line 24 and insert in lieu thereof the following:
> "enactment of this Act, except that the President may suspend the application of the provisions of this Act if he determines that application of the provisions of this Act would impose an economic burden on the poor proportionately greater than that imposed on the population of the United States as a whole.".

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, this amendment is virtually identical to an amendment that was adopted by the Senate to the trade bill, but I think it is even more important on the textile bill than it was on the trade bill.

Obviously, a great concern about this bill should be its impact on the poor.

The cost of textile protectionism per family of four, at least in terms of current textile protectionism, is currently ranging between $300 and $700. The imposition of additional restrictions as proposed in this bill would further raise the cost of clothing American families.

Mr. President, for high-income families that would basically be a nuisance, but it would be a burden that they could readily bear. They might not like it, they might feel it was unfair, but they could probably live with it. The problem is that there are a lot of people in this country who would have a great deal of difficulty in buying shoes for their children and in buying clothing for their children if we impose additional restrictions that further drive up costs.

Since we adopted the Bradley amendment, which did in essence the same thing on the trade bill that we are doing here, I thought that this was an important issue. I think it is especially important because all over the country last week and this week Americans are sending their children to school. I think we ought to have a provision in here that simply says that if the impact of this provision is found to produce a disproportionate burden on the poor, then the President has the ability to intervene on their behalf.

I hope my colleagues will see the wisdom of this amendment, and I remind my colleagues that the wisdom is doubly amplified when you look at the level of profitability of the industry, when you look at growth in employment, when you look at plant usage, when you look at the fact that we already have an 18-percent tax on average on all textiles that are being bought that are produced abroad, when there are already 1,500 quotas. If we are going to add more costs on the backs of the poor, then we ought to have some ability for the President, whoever our new President may be, to intervene on their behalf.

I urge my colleagues to adopt the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina, Mr. Hollings.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, the assumption again is that the imported article is cheaper. It is more cheaply made. There is no question about that. You can go to the 25 cents an hour. I tried my best on my last trip to the People's Republic a couple years ago and the best I could determine was around 25 cents an hour. There are a billion Chinese ready to go to work for 25 cents an hour, if that is the poor he is talking about, because the poor of America has not gotten any break with even the majority—you would think that the prices would have come down—with the majority 55 percent as represented in imports and you can see how they are transshipping through all these countries and now we have to compete, as I say, with the billion in China under a controlled economy, and talk about that is productivity and we have to compete with it. I think not. I think that the Senate sees through this one here about the poor. The poor are those who are ready, willing, and able to work and doing their best and perform, if you please, in the most productive of fashions, the most productive industry in America.

I want to find anybody who can tell me for the last 10 years each year that has had an increase of 4.6 percent GNP. The textile industry has been able to do that with tremendous output, tremendous investment, and high productivity. That is not a rich industry. It is not the poorest. Unfortunately, these fuzzyheads that are coming around this country hollering we are going to a service economy, yes, there are those in the laundries and the hamburger shops that are making the $3.35 or $3.50. We are making $6 and $7, $6 for apparel and $7 for textiles, but the average industrial wage in America is $9.97. So we are below manufacturing. We are not overpaid. We are highly productive, and we are not saying roll back anything and give us an increase. We are giving the majority of the industry to the Chinas and the Russias and all the rest of them.

I have a chart in here: Yugoslavia, Romania, Hungary, Poland, U.S.S.R., Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, East Germany, Afghanistan, Cambodia, Laos, Mongolia, right on down, their increase in imports during the last 12 months, going up some 116.9 million yards. They are going up, up, and away.

The point of this bill is not protectionism. It is survival. That is the kind of thing on which we need a policy out of this Government. It is like the policy that saved the basic industry in Europe with the globalization of its quotas.

On that basis, Mr. President, when my colleagues finish their debate, I would be prepared again to move to table.

Oh, excuse me. I yield to my distinguished colleague, the Senator from South Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina, [Mr. THURMOND], is recognized.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, the National Consumers League which is a pioneer consumer organization in the country was formed to promote high standards of safety and fairness at the workplace and the marketplace. Their membership spans the country, and the executive director wrote, and here is what he says.

"I'm writing to you to express our support for the Textile and Apparel Trade Act."

It goes on to say, "The United States textile and apparel industry is the most productive in the world. Due to the huge U.S. trade deficit, however, 350,000 American workers have lost their jobs in the textile and apparel industry. This is a particularly troublesome statistic in an industry which supports the livelihood of many small American towns and pays its workers an average $6 an hour."

According to a special report of the Office of Technology Assessment, the U.S. Textile and Apparel Industry, a Revolution in Progress, another American worker also loses a job for every textile job lost. Now remember that. Every time we lose a textile job, another worker loses a job. Who is this saying this? The National Consumers League. Who are they interested in? They are interested in the consumers. They are interested in the public.

Now, Mr. President, the American consumer does not benefit from the products of low-wage overseas labor. These products are bought from factories who have workers, some of whom are children, who are earning as little as 20 cents an hour, often under intolerable labor conditions. They are marked up and sold in this country for exactly the same price as an equivalent American product.

In other words, they sell for just as much over here. Who makes the profit? The consumer does not get the benefit of it.

The last time we had the textile bill up here we had shirts bought here in this town. Some were made in America; some abroad. There were not 3 or 4 cents difference between them.

It is the shippers who come in here, the middlemen, the retailers making the profit and not the American consumer. Otherwise, this National Consumers League would not be supporting this bill. They are supporting this bill because they know it is best for the public.

The letter goes on to say:

> The health of the American textile and apparel industry is crucial to the livelihood of hundreds of thousands of American workers. We urge your support of this bill.

Mr. President, there are 2 million people engaged in textiles in this country. There are 2 million more who are supported indirectly by textiles. There are more people engaged in textiles than in automobiles and steel combined. It is a big industry, but it is going out of existence unless we do something. It cannot stay in existence.

Yet, as I stated, the Defense Department says it ranks second only to steel—second only to steel—in the matter of national defense. Now, what is going to happen if we have a war? Who is going to make the parachutes? Who is going to make the uniforms? Who is going to make the other products that textiles make? Can we take the chance?

I hope this Senate will think over this matter and pass this bill regardless of how the administration feels. They are just free traders, those who are taking this position. And some in the Senate are free traders. They have a right to be. But you have to use common sense. You have to use balance. What is best for America? What is best for the public of America?

And here is the National Consumers League saying that this is best for the public of America. I ask the Senate to think this over.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, let me read the amendment. It is very simple.

> * * * the President may suspend the application of the provisions of this Act if he determines that application of the provisions of this Act would impose an economic burden on the poor proportionately greater than that imposed on the population of the United States as a whole.

This is not a new amendment to the Senate, Mr. President. We adopted this in the trade bill. It was offered by the Senator from New Jersey, Senator BRADLEY. The Senate adopted it.

All we are saying—and, by and large, it is the bulk of the consumers who are the poor—is that if this bill disproportionately burdens the poor, then the President can say the quotas will not be in effect. Now, how on Earth can you argue against this amendment, which we have already adopted on the trade bill where it was offered by the Senator from New Jersey. If the poor are not the consumers, then I do not know who the poor are. They are the ones that spend the bulk of their money on clothing, food, housing. They do not get any vacations in France. They do not get any vacations in a town 50 miles from where they live. They are lucky if they can get 2 weeks a year off and can afford to go to the local amusement park.

How anyone can oppose an amendment that says if it disproportionately affects those people, then these quotas will not go into effect, I do not know.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, let me respond to the issues that have been raised, and I will try to do it very briefly.

First of all, Mr. President, this amendment goes to the heart of the problem with this bill. The truth is that our colleagues know that this bill disproportionately affects the poor people of this country because this bill will raise the cost of clothing to the American consumer. And since clothing is something that every family has to buy, it is a staple, you are going to end up affecting poor people more than you are the population as a whole.

I hear my colleagues talking about people that are earning $6 and $7 an hour in the textile industry. Well, Mr. President, I am not in any way callous toward people in the textile industry. I have a lot of kinfolks that work in the textile industry. My mama worked in the cotton mills when I was a child. The textile industry is a vitally important industry to America. But what I am trying to do in this amendment is protect the people who do not make $6 or $7 an hour.

Now I hear my colleague from South Carolina quote this so-called consumer group, the National Consumers League. I do not know who they are. But, Mr. President, what saddens me in this debate, as in so many other debates, is that there is in our political system often no voice whatsoever for the American consumer.

My colleague is not correct when he says there are 2 million people involved in the textile industry. There are 240 million people in America involved in the textile industry. What I am trying to see here is that the other 238 million people that are involved have a voice, as well.

I do not think it will do any good to go back over all these profit figures and all these employment figures, but the plain, unvarnished truth is that the textile industry is not dying. The textile industry has experienced a rebirth. It is a great credit to the people that work in that industry, both in labor and management, that they have reached down and pulled themselves up by the bootstraps and that today American textiles are competitive; that exports are up by 15 percent. I am proud of that.

But, Mr. President, had we adopted bills like this, is there anybody here who really believes that American textiles would have gone through the painful process of becoming competitive? Is there anybody here who really believes that people will do the hard thing unless the discipline of the marketplace, in having to face real, honest-to-goodness competition, is present? I do not think they will. In fact, the genius of the American system is that competition produces extraordinary results from plain old ordinary people like you and like me.

The reason I oppose this bill is that this bill strikes at the very heart of what makes America work. Mr. President, this amendment simply is trying to help the people that are not lucky enough to make $6 or $7 an hour, people who will see their living standards decline.

I urge my colleagues, as they did on the trade bill, to assure that there is a provision where we take into account what the impact of this new restriction will be on the poor. If there is no impact, if it cannot be demonstrated, as I am sure my colleagues will contend, that really poor people are not hurt by 1,500 quotas and by an 18-percent tax, that it does not have any impact on the poor or the consumer—I do not think anybody that is the least bit objective is convinced by that—but if they are right, this amendment is not going to have any impact at all.

But if they are wrong in the week that all over America millions of children are going to school, let us set out a provision that says that if this bill turns out to have a big impact on poor people, disproportionately speaking, that we have got some remedy to try to do something about it. On the trade bill, we made that decision. I hope my colleagues will make it here. I yield the floor.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. President, let me add only a few words to those of my colleagues from Oregon and Texas. You know, it is interesting that, both in this Chamber and on the political trail, it has become almost an article of faith that we protect and preserve the Social Security System of the United States with all of its cost-of-living increases because we want to protect the elderly against inflation, against increased costs. And there is not hardly a Senator in this Chamber who at this point in time would vote against a cost-of-living increase in Social Security, against the kind of help for the low-income citizens of this country that we have protected on so many occasions.

And yet, are we going to, if we vote against this amendment, turn right around and take from them with one hand what we have just given to them with the other hand? We say, "Here is the money. Here is that cost-of-living increase. But, oh, by the way, you are going to pay more for the clothing which is needed. You are going to pay more for some of the most fundamental of the needs of your existence." And we refuse to even give any recognition to the fact that this might affect them adversely.

I find it hard to believe that any Senator in this Chamber would vote against this amendment any more than they would vote against an amendment to give a cost-of-living increase to a Social Security recipient. They are virtually the same thing. One is to provide adequate income. The other one is to limit unusual expense.

But as far as the consumer is concerned, especially as far as that low-income consumer is concerned, it all comes out the same. Either you do not have enough income, on the one side, or if you provide the income and say it is going to cost you more to live, on the other, what in the world have you gained?

I think this is a modest effort to provide for those who are clearly least able to take care of themselves and I find it hard to believe my colleagues in this Senate would—in fact, I would hope that the opposition on this bill would accept this amendment; we would not even have to go through a rollcall vote because it would make this bill more compassionate to those who need help the most.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. With respect to the Department of Labor and its study, textiles and apparel increased in price by 5.6 percent, according to the PPI. With the same index, for consumer nondurables, it rose by 22.3 percent. This mild price increase is partly the result of a 2.8-percent rise in labor productivity in synthetic fibers and it contributed to the 19.2-percent decline in general imports of cotton, wool and manmade fiber textiles. And in the case of specialty steel the competitive position of the industry has improved with little apparent inflationary impact. That is the Department of Labor.

With respect to the National Consumers League as quoted by my senior colleague, "The American consumer does not benefit from the products of low-wage overseas labor."

Mr. President, if the President looks at this bill and determines it is a burden on the poor he can veto it. For that I offer many other reasons. But what you have is bad legislation. You should never pass a bill saying any President at any time might determine a measure is in particular a burden on any segment of society. How do you determine it? willy-nilly, you suspend the legislation. I do not think that is good form. That is why it was dropped from the conference.

My distinguished colleague from Oregon on the Finance Committee knows why in the trade bill it was passed here in the rush of things just to get on with it. When it got over to the House they all agreed, including the administration, and said get that kind of provision out of this bill. So let us not put it in now about a burden on the poor and play monkeyshines at this time.

It does not raise the cost of clothing and my distinguished colleague from Texas, I am confident he knows Robert Nathan, he is the honorary chairman—he is the honorary chairman, Esther Peterson is the honorary chairman, Jack Blum is the president. They have quite a bit that has been in Government. I know my colleagues have been in Government.

The National Consumers League, they are outstanding citizens. Ms. Peterson—probably if I had to pick one consumer representative best known in all America, it would be Esther Peterson. So do not say, "I never heard of that kind of crowd, I do not know what they are talking about." They know exactly. They are trying to gut the bill about a burden on the poor.

I move to table the amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I agree that we ought to be concerned about the effect of this bill on the poorer members of our society, just as we ought to look at the impact of any legislation on the poor. However, this amendment is so loosely worded that it would open an enormous loophole in the textile bill, and render the bill ineffective in the hands of any administration that does not want to enforce it.

The amendment says the provisions of the bill do not apply if its effect would be to disproportionately burden the poor. But it does not define what would constitute a disproportionate burden, or even what is meant by "the poor." It would be left up to the President to decide how to interpret this standard. Any President determined not to implement the requirements of this legislation would find the vague wording of this amendment extremely useful.

Because I want to see the underlying bill not only passed into law but also enforced by the executive branch, I cannot support this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

There being no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the motion to table. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Arizona [Mr. DeConcini], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Gore] and the Senator from Hawaii [Mr. Matsunaga], are necessarily absent.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. Hatfield], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Heinz], and the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Stafford], are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Heinz] would vote "yea."

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. Mikulski). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 60, nays 34, as follows:

So the motion to lay on the table amendment No. 2862 was agreed to.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to.

Mr. EXON. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HOLLINGS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Madam President, I rise today in very strong support of the textile and apparel trade bill of 1988. I was an original cosponsor of the bill when it was first introduced last year, and I am very glad to see it is now on the floor. The purpose of this bill is to help the textile, apparel, and footwear industries in our Nation. These industries have been battered mercilessly by imports over the past 10 years. We must give them the help that this legislation provides or these industries are simply not going to survive. In West Virginia, these industries are barely holding on, Madam President, and this bill would make the difference between life and death for them. When I talk about the survival of these industries, I am not talking about some kind of vague impersonal corporation. I am talking about jobs, jobs that are held in the United States predominantly by women, by minorities, by immigrants, by those at the entry level of our work force. I am also talking about West Virginians who have been working in the apparel or footwear industries for decades, West Virginians who are in danger of losing their jobs in a factory that may be the only manufacturing employer in an entire county.

Our State is not a large one, Madam President. Many of our counties are extremely rural and depend on a single industry. Often those are footwear or apparel industries. These counties are suffering terribly in West Virginia. These are counties that have been totally untouched by the so-called economic recovery of the Reagan years. The loss of jobs in textiles, apparel, and footwear has been devastating in my State, and I am just not willing to watch these industries decline further.

Madam President, let me try to put this in personal terms—the devastating impact that cheap imported shoes have had on West Virginians. I refer to the Kinney Shoe Factory in Glenville, WV, in Gilmer County. It is a small county of 8,000 people with 2,000 of them employed. In this factory, there were about 250 people working. Overnight, when the factory was closed because of the pressure of imports, one out of every eight jobs in the county disappeared.

Many of these Kinney workers had been employed at the factory for years, for decades. Some, obviously, are no longer young, and, frankly, a new career is not something that presents itself very easily to somebody who has been working in a shoe factory and is in their 50's or 60's. It has been a terrible struggle for these people.

Younger workers were forced to leave home in search of work because the Kinney Shoe Factory was closed down. Some had to leave West Virginia entirely. The result was that you have family separations. They cannot afford to take their families with them because they were not sure they were going to find that job, and if they did find that job maybe it did not pay that much.

So you have family separations, you have an increase in the number of divorces, an increase in family problems, an increase in drinking, and you know the syndrome of which I talk.

People lost their homes in Gilmer County as a result of the closing of this shoe factory. Banks were forced to foreclose, cars and furniture were repossessed. This happened. This is not academic. It happened. Little by little people's lives have crumbled away.

I do not want to preside over the destruction of Glenville, WV. I want to help Gilmer County and other counties like it throughout Appalachia.

We have an American dream, and the American dream is that if you work and if you work hard, you will succeed and improve your standard of living. Instead, now, with the closing of this one shoe factory—and there have been many other examples—we have a community which has been devastated. Twelve and a half percent of the jobs in the county are gone overnight. The standard of living is declining.

I recognize that we are talking about the textile, apparel, and footwear bill. But I must say, Madam President, that the law about plant closing notification sure would have been useful in this case where the people at the factory had 1 week's notice. With 1 week notice they were given their pink slip, and then gone after working for decades.

You know the nature of traditional rural counties. People get a job they stay there, they work hard, then their children come along, and they get into those same jobs. That is what they are trained for. Then you get the pink slip, 1 week later you are gone, no jobs in the county, a few jobs in the State, what do you do? I am pleased that we have now plant closing notification legislation.

Let me give you another example, Madam President, of what I am talking about in West Virginia. In 1978, 5,800 West Virginians were employed in the apparel industry; 5,800. Last year that figure was down to 3,800. That means over 2,000 jobs disappeared over 9 years. This Senator does not want to see that continue.

In 1980 there were over 2,100 people working in the nonrubber footwear industry in West Virginia. In 1986 one factory closed down. In 1986 another factory closed down. By 1986, 2,100 jobs had turned into 1,200 jobs; in other words, a 40-percent decline in only a few years. This is intolerable and cannot be allowed to continue. I stand shoulder to shoulder with the chairman of the Commerce Committee, the distinguished Senator from South Carolina, Senator HOLLINGS, in his efforts in respect to all of this.

Overall, Madam President, in West Virginia 7,400 people are working in the textile and apparel complex of industries. Those are good jobs in rural counties where other work is not available. Adding the 1,250 people working in the nonrubber footwear sector, plus another 300 folks in other parts of the shoe industry, that means 9,000 West Virginians need the help that this law will bring to save their jobs. These jobs are critical to our State, not to speak of the workers, the families, the neighborhoods, and the communities.

I will do everything in my power to preserve those jobs. That is why I so strongly support what the Senator from South Carolina, Senator HOLLINGS, is doing.

I urge my colleagues to vote for passage of the Textile and Apparel Trade Act of 1988. It is going to help West Virginia, and I know it is going to help our Nation. And I urge the President to think of the working men and women of this country and sign this bill.

I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

Mr. HOLLINGS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, it is particularly warming to this Senator that right at 29 years ago as a young southern Governor I joined with the distinguished northern Governor, Nelson Rockefeller. I realized the national import of this particular industry, and the importance it had to all sections of our country, and as some just about 30 years later to join with the distinguished Senator from West Virginia and hear his eloquent remarks on behalf of those who are working hard, who are the most productive, who are really creating the jobs for us in the United States, I want to thank the Senator from West Virginia just like his senior colleague, the majority leader.

That is why we are here today, because he has fashioned the operation of this bill so we could bring it up and be able to bring it to close with 30 hours by a vote on a cloture motion. So the majority leader has been in the forefront as a cosponsor leading the way, and Senator ROCKEFELLER has given his leadership.

There is nobody having a better understanding when I hear Senators presenting these amendments about the poor than to come from a State such as West Virginia, where the industries there have been and are exceeding kind of an economic mold now for several years as hardworking, and the finest people in the entire world. And to have them represented by Senator ROCKEFELLER in this particular presentation he has made, I want to thank him in behalf of all of us who have been working on this measure.

Mr. EVANS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

AMENDMENT NO. 2860, DIVISION L

Mr. EVANS. Madam President, I call up amendment No. 2860, Division L.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report that amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

On page 12, line 10, insert a new subsection (f):

"The limitations on the importation on the aggregate quantity of textiles and textile products proscribed under subsections (a) through (f) shall not apply to any country that, in calendar 1987, purchased more textiles and textile products produced in the United States than it exported such products to the United States."

Mr. EVANS. Madam President, this amendment which I had read in its entirety because it is short and straightforward I believe speaks to what this country I hope has been all about; that is, competition, the opportunity to export, to sell our products overseas, to enjoy the benefits of that with our neighboring countries and our friends. And, of course, our worry is about those countries who are exporting too much to us. It is the Hong Kongs and the Taiwans, and it used to be Japan and some of the other nations that have created the imbalance in textile trade and the apparel trade which is causing so much difficulty and which has created this bill.

This amendment would really focus then on those countries.

Madam President, there are 52 nations to whom we export substantially more in terms of apparel and textiles than export to us. Those countries represent nations on every continent, some are very small in terms of their exports to us, and some have never had any exports to us at all. And, of course, we would be preventing any of those nations from beginning any kind of textile industry, and the potential export of textiles or apparel to the United States; because this bill says that we are limited to no more than 101 percent—in other words, a 1-percent increase—over the base year. If, in the base year, these countries exported nothing to the United States, 101 percent of nothing is nothing. It gives these nations no hope whatsoever of even building a modest trading relationship with the United States. Some are close friends of ours. Some are undeveloped countries just struggling with the very beginnings of development. As I said, they represent all continents. But, collectively, this is not a significant effect on the bill itself.

If, in fact, it is true—and I have some question about the figures—but in the bill, on page 4, section 3(e), the textile and clothing trade deficit of the United States exceeded $21 billion in 1986, an increase of 18 per centum over 1985, and accounted for 20 percent of the Nation's overall merchandise trade deficit.

Madam President, the figures of the Department of Commerce which we have before us show that the textile and clothing trade deficit in 1986 was $18 billion, not $21 billion. But, more important, as we have finally begun to get hold of our own individual and internal budget deficit, as the dollar has shifted in value compared to other nations' currencies, as we have become more competitive, we see that without any further legislation—without any further legislation in this or any other field, for that matter—the trade imbalances are slowly and now more rapidly correcting themselves. That is why I said this morning that this is a case of legislation, if ever needed, that is no longer needed. The circumstances which brought it about 2 years ago no longer hold, and in fact we are finding that the competition, coupled with the change in American currency, is making us that much more competitive and reducing even the textile and apparel trade imbalances.

Let me be more specific as to just where we are going. The bill talked about the increases in textile and clothing trade defict, but let us look at the most recent figures. What has happened in 1988? Let us go down through the countries of the world with whom we have the largest textile and clothing trade relationships.

The People's Republic of China has the largest single trade relationship with us in textiles and apparel. Their trade in the first half of 1988 is down by almost 25 percent. Taiwan, down 17 percent. The Republic of Korea, down 22 percent. Hong Kong, down 17 percent. Canada, our neighbor to the north, and one with which we are attempting to build a closer free trade relationship, is up 38 percent.

However, is that what his bill is aimed at primarily, countries like our closest friend and closest neighbor and biggest trading partner, Canada?

Our other closest neighbor is Mexico, which is next on the list in terms of volume, but they are down by 6 percent. They face the great difficulty of trying to stabilize an economy and provide jobs, in that we might have political stability on our southern border, and it is having greater and greater problems in one of their fundamental industries.

Japan is down 36 percent. India and Pakistan are up, and I think with good reason. Pakistan especially, which is up almost 70 percent—a recognition, if you will, of the extraordinary job Pakistan has done in supporting the interests not only of Pakistan but also of the United States and the free world in the fight in Afghanistan.

The Republic of the Philippines: We all cheered when Corazon Aquino took office as President. We pledged to provide help and assistance to the Philippines, and we are, at least to some degree. We have upped textile and apparel imports, one of their major industries, by a little over 6 percent during the first half of this year.

We go on from there, to Italy, down 24 percent; the Federal Republic of Germany, down 21 percent; Indonesia, down 13.5 percent. But, more important, let us look at the world as a whole.

Imports to the United States in the first 5 months of this year are down over 9 percent. Imports from the countries which are signatory to the multifiber agreement are down 9 percent. The three big exporting nations to the United States, ones about which we have been very concerned—Hong Kong, Korea, and Taiwan—are down by 19 percent. The OECD countries are down by 4 percent. Those which have not joined the multifiber agreement are down by 9 percent. On and on. Only the Caribbean nations with which we have very close relationships are up by 16 percent.

That is where we are. That is the true picture. It does not show an industry that is being flooded by imports. It shows an industry that is competitive, an industry that, by its own modernization, coupled with the better economic position of the United States vis-a-vis its trading neighbors, is doing very well.

The entire focus of this bill seems to be aimed at those with whom we have these awful imbalances, somehow to make all our trading balances zero. Madam President, that is a faulty notion. There never has been a time when this Nation has been able to so balance its trade relationships that in every business and in every enterprise there is an even balance in export and import trade, not just with the whole world but with each individual country. We cannot work toward that goal, nor should we.

This amendment is simply one of fairness. It is one that says:

> All right, if the bill worries and is aimed at those with whom we have an imbalance, with those nations which are somehow more competitive than the United States, those nations which export floods of apparel and textiles into the United States, let us take a quite different look at those nations which have a different balance, many of them which have exported nothing to the United States, some which have exported a very small amount, some which have exported a fairly significant amount, but which buy several times that much from the United States.

These 52 nations are not all large; many of them are quite small. They are not all developed. Many are quite undeveloped. In many of them, we are sending American aid year after year, American tax dollars, to avert starvation, in order to build the most fundamental of their economies, so that they might be more independent. We do that on the one hand and then turn around and say:

> For the business or industry that you are most likely to start with, and that is to make textiles and to make apparel, don't come to us. We would prefer to give you taxpayers' money to support you, rather than allow you to build your own economy and trade with us.

That, it seems to me, is a foolish direction indeed.

Some of these nations are not even necessarily friends of ours. It is interesting that amount, the 52 countries, the Soviet Union is one to whom we sell more textiles than we buy.

There are several countries, however, where there is a significant amount of textiles being purchased and apparel being purchased from the United States.

Do we suggest that it is in America's best interest for those countries in turn to say:

> Well, if you are attempting to limit our exports to the United States, I guess we better move toward trade balances, we better limit our imports from the United States as well.

It is easy enough for us to buy clothing and to buy textiles from other nations because that is clearly a concern of the sponsors of this bill. There are too many countries who are efficient, who are productive, and who are in the business.

So we cannot expect those who buy more from us than they import from us to not be able to look elsewhere. They clearly can.

So why, why should we penalize them for being good trading partners? Why should we penalize them for buying more from us than they sell to us?

It is inconceivable to me, Madam President, that we would so penalize so many nations.

If this amendment were adopted, does it have a huge effect on the bill or on our trading relationships? Not at all. The two-way import and export trade is something like $24 billion and the entire list of 52 nations has exports from the United States to all of those nations of only $84 million, a fraction of that of about $24 billion two-way trade, and U.S. exports to those same nations adds up to $458 million. The net positive trade balance for the United States is $375 million; not large, but important.

It seems to be in our best interest to try to encourage those nations to continue to do what they have been doing, and that is buying more from us than they sell to us. But if I were the leader of any one of those nations and I found that my trading partner, the United States said, "Sorry, sorry, wherever you are now is wherever you are going to be from now on. You might have a tiny little increase each year, but, of course, if you have not sold anything to us up to now, forget it, you cannot get in the business." I think if I were one of those countries I would be very much inclined to say, "I will look elsewhere for my products; I will look elsewhere for my apparel; I will look elsewhere for my textiles."

And what have we done for the textiles and the apparel manufacturers of the United States in this kind of bill?

Madam President, I suggest that this is a modest amendment in terms of its total impact but an amendment that would be the epitome of fair play when we are talking about good trading partners.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, it goes without saying that my distinguished colleague from Washington, having been a Governor, knows how to administer a law. Under this law, if it were indeed to become law, we would immediately give discretion to the President and the Secretary of Commerce, the administration itself, under the globalization of quotas, to do exactly as they please. They do not have to cut off anybody. I am confident no administration, Republican or Democratic, would be arbitrary. I am confident that they, as good business judgment would dictate, would work to the best interest of the United States. But there is a good measure of foreign policy that goes right to the heart and thrust of the amendment of the Senator from Washington, and that is to give the poor nations, the undeveloped nations, a chance. Do you think they have a chance now? The opportunity they now have is by way of transshipment. They are competing with the government-controlled industry of Taiwan, Hong Kong, Korea, Japan, Thailand, and Indonesia.

I had a discussion the week before last with the commerce minister of Indonesia. He had been charged up by the retailers. He wanted to speak with me. We had a meeting, had a news conference.

I said, "Mr. Minister, you had the Japanese come in here and, as a quid pro quo, they have financed and they built the industry and they are making all the profits. You have no chance of developing your own industry except under my textile bill. You have been purchasing our soybeans and our wheat down here in Indonesia. You are consumers of our agricultural products, and we hope to favor you, the developing country." Incidentally, Indonesia is the fifth largest nation in the world at present. Its population will grow to 175 million by the year 2110; Indonesia will be the third largest country in the world.

We can help that Nation's development through the globalization of quotas. We can favor the less developed nations.

Really, the proposed amendment is mischief. They know better because we have guaranteed 55 percent of the market to importers. This bill guarantees 55 percent of the market to the offshore producer. There is no penalization there. I am trying to encourage the industrial backbone of the United States of America. That is the intent of this bill, to encourage the survival of a basic American industry. This is not any fuzzy foreign policy where we live in a dream. We are looking at reality, where the best of economists, the Economist's Intelligence Unit in London, says that by 1995, 83 percent of U.S.-sold textiles and apparel will be imported. The domestic industry will be virtually extinct.

But look at these exporting nations. There are 30-some nations, and they find places of transshipment like Benin. Or take, for instance, Malawi. Last year, they went from 100,000 square yards to 4.2 million square yards, an increase of 3,600 percent due to transshipments. That is the kind of competition that the distinguished Senator from Washington ought to be referring to. The bottom line, here are the countries he would favor:

Ethiopia, which has a deficit in textile and apparel trade with the United States; French Guiana; Lebanon—we tell them, fine, take some more hostages over there, we want to increase our trade; Paraguay; Republic of South Africa; Soviet Union; South Yemen. Vietnam has a surplus. So tell all of the Vietnam veterans we now have the Vietnam amendment, or better yet Cuba. The Castro amendment—that is what this is. We are going to favor Fidel all of a sudden. Opponents of the textile bill have tried every kind of shenanigan that you can possibly think of, and now they have gone with the Castro amendment and said, "If you've got a surplus, as you have, Fidel, we want to favor you." Of course, we have an embargo down there but now the Senator from Washington wants to favor and, of course, the people in Ethiopia and, of course, the Republic of South Africa where in one breath we say, "Let's override the President, let's have sanctions against South Africa," but under the Evans amendment we will favor South Africa.

Come on. They are playing games and they know it.

I am prepared to move to table the amendment when the debate is completed.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

Mr. EVANS. Madam President, the Senator, of course, is selective in his reading of the list. It includes such friends as Australia, as one of the largest ones. It includes some of our people in the Middle East who have been friends and supporters—Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates; it includes Venezuela in South America.

At least Malawi is not on my list. Mali is, which is a quite different country.

Most of them are undeveloped; many of them African nations to whom we have provided help and assistance over a good many years.

It seems to me that to now deny them the chance to grow in their trading relationships is just to ensure that they will always be dependent and we will always be asked to provide support in order that they might avoid starvation rather than offer the opportunity for them to build a basic economy to eliminate the need for American taxpayer support and, instead, to build a responsible trading relationship.

All nations of the Earth have to have some opportunity to sell to others if they are going to make enough money to buy from others. That is a fundamental element of economics, whether you are talking about an individual in the United States; they cannot buy from others unless they can earn enough to purchase from others. In others words, they sell their labor and they sell their intellect in order to earn enough to buy products and services from others. And it is the same thing in international trade.

Now, this is not a huge amendment. This is one that it seems to me, is simple and straightforward and responsible, to say, let us focus on the problems. And the problems are those nations with whom we have a textile and apparel trade imbalance unfavorable to the United States.

Why are we painting with such a broad brush that we say all nations have to be covered? All nations, regardless of whether they have a positive or negative trade balance; all nations, regardless of how close they are as friends and trading partners; all nations, regardless of whether they have strategic importance to the United States. All nations. All nations are going to be covered. And for what purpose? For what purpose? To further protect, beyond the extraordinary protections already proffered to an industry, to further protect an industry which it has been clearly shown earlier today is enjoying record-making profits, recording-making volumes, an industry that is far more competitive, thank heavens, today than it was a few years ago and given good management and the opportunity to be more competitive—which they are—can continue to be productive, profitable, and an important part of our economy.

But are we going to shrink and say the only place we want to sell, the only place we believe we can be competitive in terms of textiles and apparel is within the borders of the United States; that there is no place we can sell on Earth where we can be competitive?

Madam President, we have already shown that there are at least 52 nations where we can be competitive, where we can sell a lot more than we purchase, and somehow for those nations we are even competitive today with our competitors.

We worry a lot about the ability of South Korea and Taiwan and Singapore and others in their growing ability to produce textiles and to produce apparel. Well, they do not look at the United States as the sole market. They are looking at a world market. Somehow and in some way the American textile and apparel industry has been successful in these nations. And are we going to encourage them to still look to us as a supplier when they have been good customers and the end result of being good customers is to get kicked in the teeth?

Well, I would not have to get kicked in the teeth more than once to decide that there might be a better supplier; there might be another more favorable nation; there might be another person or company or country who would be friendlier, could work more closely with us, and one on whom we could depend.

It is dependability that is exceptionally important in trade, whether it is internal or international. And if we are forever undependable by continuing to change laws and change regulations and zigzag from one place to another because of the exigencies of current politics or current activities economically in this country, we will never be viewed as a dependable trading partner. That could do more harm to us in terms of our future not only in the textile industry or the apparel industry but in all of our export industries, in all of the things in which we would like to be competitive internationally.

Madam President, the bill itself is ill-conceived but it is particularly ill-conceived to attack those who have been our best customers.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, I move to table the amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. HOLLINGS] to table the amendment of the Senator from Washington [Mr. EVANS].

The yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Texas [Mr. BENTSEN], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BREAUX], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIXON], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DODD], the Senator from Tennesssee [Mr. GORE], and the Senator from Hawaii [Mr. MATSUNAGA] are necessarily absent.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HATFIELD], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. HEINZ], the Senator from Vermont [Mr. STAFFORD] and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WEICKER] are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. HEINZ] would vote "yea."

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SHELBY). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

So the motion to lay on the table amendment No. 2860, Division L was agreed to.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to.

Mr. THURMOND. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, it is anticipated there will be one more amendment and one more rollcall vote. I would urge Senators to not delay too long in starting for the floor on the rollcall votes. I am finding that by the time the 15 minutes are up, today in at least one instance, not more than 60 Senators voted and then they all came in, 30 or 40 of them. One day 30 or 40 of them will miss the vote. It will not be this Senator's fault. I hope they will start earlier when the first bell rings, and we can complete the vote in 15 minutes. It is getting to be 18 minutes now on rollcall votes because of Senators late in arriving. I thank all Senators for their consideration.

Mr. GRAMM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, earlier today we had a letter that was read from extensively, a letter from the National Consumers League. It is my understanding from our Trade Representative that they have checked it out and found that that organization is virtually totally funded by the labor movement. I hope if that is not right that the National Consumers League will provide us with information about where their funding comes from, its source, and I will be happy to put that into the RECORD if this turns out not to be correct.

AMENDMENT NO. 2871

(Purpose: To exempt workers' coveralls, uniforms, workshoes, work boots from the provisions of the bill)

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I have an amendment at the desk No. 2871, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Texas (Mr. GRAMM) proposes an amendment numbered 2871.

On page 20, line 24, insert before the period the following: ", except that no provision of this Act shall apply to workers' coveralls, uniforms, workshoes, or workboots".

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I know it has been a long day. It is our first day back. I am not trying to drag another dead cat across the table here by going over all of the information that has been covered in the earlier debate.

This is a working person's amendment. This amendment simply says, in addition to the 1,500 quotas we already see, in addition to the 18-percent average tax we already impose upon the consumer, in addition to the $300 to $700 per American family that is already paid by existing legislation related to textiles, that we would go ahead and impose the restrictions, that this bill would impose on the consumer another roughly $7 to $10 billion of cost, except that we would exempt workers' coveralls, uniforms, workshoes, and work boots.

Mr. President, this amendment simply is trying to give some degree of protection to the working men and women of America who do not have a before tax rate of return of 26 percent on equity, which the textile industry had last year, people who are not fortunate enough to live in the textile-producing States that have an average unemployment rate of 15 percent below the national average, or in shoe-producing States with 25 percent below the national average. Those are the top five textile States and the top five shoe States.

This basically is an amendment that tries to afford some degree of protection to the people who are out there on hot days sweating, on cold days getting cold, doing the work, pulling the wagon, paying the taxes, making America work.

It seems to me that this is an eminently reasonable amendment. Let me remind my colleagues again that work coveralls and work boots would still be subject to 1,500 quotas; they would still be subject to an 18-percent tax on the back of the working people of the country. We would merely not make the situation worse.

I could review all the data about employment, profits, and exports, but I think we have gone through all that data. I hope my colleagues will decide that this is a reasonable amendment. In fact, I hope that our dear colleague from South Carolina will decide that this is worthy and will simply accept the amendment, and we can all then go home.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, this amendment is ludicrous. The only similarity is the word "work"—work boots, work shoes, work coveralls. Without a job the worker will not need any boots or coveralls or shoes. And going right to the heart of this particular bill, this is simply more shenanigans. Opponents of this bill tried to use the buzzword "poor." They tried to use the buzzword "undeveloped." Now they hope that the Members will not even stop to think and listen and see work boots, work shoes—whoopy, like he says, accept the amendment and gut the purpose of the bill.

We are trying to look out for those who need work shoes and work boots. And if he had any intent really of helping, he should have moved long ago to support this bill. Fifty percent of this bill is to save the remaining 16 percent of production that we have for work shoes and work boots. I have seen it. I have been to New Hampshire and seen Timberland. I have seen Dexter. I have seen Bass and the others that are still making shoes, and Johnson and Murphy in Tennessee. We have very few left. But the reasons we have very few left is we followed the rationale of my distinguished colleague, and he really demeans our intellect by coming along just with the descriptive word "work"—work shoe, work boot, work coverall, work this, work that, and hope that will cover for him and gut the globalizaton of the particular bill.

Yes, there are 1,500 categories, I can tell you, Mr. President. Here is a book with more than 15,000 restrictions. These are the restrictions on that so-called protected industry, textiles. These are "Foreign Regulations Affecting U.S. Textile and Apparel Exports," published by the Department of Commerce in April of a year ago.

Now, there it is. Try in Korea to sell anything like work boots, work shoes. You have to get a license from the textile industry and the shoe industry in that country, and they will not give you a license.

Go to Indonesia where I met with the Minister of Commerce. He started calling me a protectionist. I said, "Mr. Minister, why don't I just put into U.S. law your own licensing system. You will not give us a license." Well, all his colleagues around the table kept nodding and he just looked and blinked. They knew exactly what I was talking about.

We are facing the most restricted, protected market, and the best bet for bringing orderly marketing and to continue the competition was to go the proven European Economic Community way of a globalization of quotas; not cutbacks, not rollbacks. We will guarantee over half the U.S. market, guaranteeing the increases in consumption to the foreign importer into the United States, and now they come here and try to gut the globalization with the buzzword "work"—work shoes, work boots, work something, whatever else it is.

I am prepared to go ahead and vote anytime the Senator is ready.

Mr. THURMOND addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, this is simply a giant loophole. I want to mention this. The Communists are now sending goods into the United States. During the 12 months ending in May 1988, textile and apparel imports entering the U.S. markets from Communist countries amounted to over 1.75 billion square yards. That is the equivalent of 170,000 lost job opportunities for Americans. There are 170,000 jobs lost by imports coming in from Communist countries. I want to emphasize that.

When these statistics are compared to the 12-month period ending May 1985, imports from Communist countries have increased 67 percent.

Now, in my opinion this loophole should not be allowed. It is trying to play up the fact you are going to help some poor people or something of that sort. We want to help poor people all we can. But workers' coveralls, uniforms, work shoes, and work boots, they could be made in this country just as well. We have found that the ones who make the profit are the retailers and importers. The cost to the consumer is about the same. The amendment should not pass. It is just another effort to kill this bill.

Mr. GRAMM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, let me respond and I will try to be brief.

First of all, there are a lot of people working in this country. I do not know if my colleague from South Carolina saw the number today, but there are 115 million Americans at work as of yesterday. That is the largest number of Americans ever at work in the history of the country. They are also working at the highest wages they have ever earned. I know that Michael Dukakis and others would like America to believe that suddenly everybody is poor and wages are down, but the truth is that in the 1970's real wages fell by 6 percent. They have risen by almost 8 percent—that is, when you adjust for inflation—since 1981.

Also, we keep hearing all this stuff about people getting poorer. If you break out the income and wealth distribution of America into five equal parts, all five categories got poorer when Jimmy Carter was President. All five categories have gotten better off in the last 8 years. So I hear all this stuff about where these jobs are being exported, but the truth is that in the last 8 years we have created more jobs than all the developed nations of the world combined, more than Japan and Germany have created in the aggregate in the last 10 years. So this idea that America has no jobs is just pure old baloney.

Now, what this amendment is trying to do is recognize that there are costs involved in all these political favors that are being granted by this bill. Nobody disputes the fact that the average American family is paying between $300 and $700 a year more for shoes and textiles as a result of the restrictions that are already in place. What this amendment says is that we do not allow additional restrictions to apply for workers' coveralls and uniforms and work shoes and work boots.

It seems to me, Mr. President, that that is an effort to try to protect the people who are going to get hurt the worst by this bill.

Now, with regard to the economic horrors that are occurring in New Hampshire, forgive me if I do not burst into tears when I hear my dear colleague from New Hampshire, who is fond of saying their economy is doing so well in New Hampshire that they have people at work who ought to be on welfare. In fact, their unemployment rate is below the national average, half of what the unemployment rate is in my State.

When I am trying to offer an amendment to try to prevent the price of work boots from being jacked up and somebody says to me, "Well, look, there are people in New Hampshire that are making work boots." When their unemployment rate is below the national average, half of what it is in my State, I just cannot understand the opposition. Why should people working in my State pay more for work boots to help New Hampshire when their unemployment rate is half the unemployment rate of Texas.

I love New Hampshire. My dear colleague who joined our Senator from South Carolina and me in trying to stop deficit spending is from New Hampshire. I want the people of New Hampshire to make money. I want them to be employed, but again it is hard for me to take these arguments seriously when the parts of the country that are going to benefit the most are the parts of the country that are already doing the best.

The truth is that New Hampshire benefited from competition. If they were back in the textile business as they were in the 1950's on a dominant basis, they would not be as prosperous as they are today. What they have done is bring new industries in that they are now producing high technology items. Their wages have skyrocketed.

Do you know what is going to happen if this bill passes? What is going to happen if this bill passes is every one of these countries that are going to be feted by this new protectionism will have a right under GATT to have compensation. Every one of them will be able to go to GATT and say, "The United States has violated the GATT agreement, and we want compensation." Guess where they are going to take it? They are going to take it against petrochemicals and the chemical industry, they are going to take it against high tech areas, and they are going to take it against agriculture. And we are going to lose more jobs in those areas than we are possibly going to create by granting more protectionism in the textile business.

So, Mr. President, there are some who would call it frivolous to try to grant a little bit of relief from robbery to people that are buying coveralls, buying uniforms, buying work shoes, and buying work boots. But when the average family is already paying $300 to $700 a year because we are granting all of these gifts to industries that have a 26-percent rate of return on equity, I do not think it is frivolous. The truth is we ought to be granting it to children, we ought to be granting it to senior citizens, and we ought to be granting it to America, but I am not so foolish as to think that is going to happen.

So what I tried to do is focus here on things where nobody can say that these are items that are bought by rich folks. Nobody can say we are trying to hurt the textile and shoe industry at the expense of the well-to-do. I am just talking about not imposing more cost on the people that are buying coveralls, that are buying uniforms, that are buying work shoes, and that are buying work boots.

When they are already paying about twice what they would pay if we did not have 1,500 quotas and an 18-percent tax, I cannot see this as frivolous.

So I do not know whether it is going to pass or not, given the vote early in the day. I suspect it is not. But I want it on record that I do not think it is right to impose more costs on the working men and women of America who are doing the tough jobs, who are out sweating in the summer and cold in the winter, to give more money to one privileged industry, great as that industry may be, important as it may be. It is not right. This little degree of protection from protectionism is warranted, and I hope my colleagues will adopt the amendment.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, as I said, we have about 16 percent of our footwear consumption left. This amendment will get rid of the remaining 140,000 footwear and supply employees. I am looking at the letter from Fawn Evenson and the Footwear Industries of America, who make the work boots and work shoes. And they endorse it. They ask us to oppose these kind of amendments. I cannot understand the logic of my colleague from Texas.

I move to table the amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. CRANSTON. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, we have heard a lot of numbers thrown around over the past 2 days of debate, but one number really stands out—370,000.

That is the number of textile, apparel, and footwear jobs that have been lost to foreign competition during the 1980's. Another 47,000 U.S. workers will lose their jobs if we don't approve this legislation.

Here is another number: 88 cents.

That is the hourly wage received by Korean shoe workers. Can U.S. workers compete against that wage? Of course not. Should they have to? No way.

One last number: 12,490.

That is the number of Maryland workers who remain in these industries and who stand to lose their jobs to further import penetration—workers in Carroll County, Frederick County, Allegany County, and Washington County.

Fighting the battle against the trade deficit is a frustrating exercise, and it often seems that there is very little we can do to make a quick, decisive difference. Today we have that opportunity. A vote for this bill is a vote that will have an immediate payoff in U.S. jobs.

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I rise as a cosponsor of S. 2662, the Textile and Apparel Trade Act of 1988.

We are now importing over three times as many textile and apparel products as we were a decade ago. Many would question the importance of this. Why do we need to save the textile, apparel and footwear industries in America? Isn't this an industry we can afford to lose? I would strongly disagree.

The Pentagon ranks textiles as the most vital sector after steel, to our national defense. Both Caspar Weinberger when he was Secretary of Defense and the then U.S. Trade Representative, William Brock, have emphasized the need to maintain a strong textile and footwear industry for reasons of national security.

The nonrubber footwear industry above all others reveals the extent of our current vulnerability. In 1985, a Department of Defense report stated that the domestic footwear industry would be unable to accommodate military requirements in time of war. In that year, footwear import penetration was at 71 percent. That figure is now at 82 percent. A Defense Logistics Agency study conducted in April of this year found that U.S. factories could only produce 2.9 million of the 6.9 million pairs of boots needed in a mobilization.

Unemployment in this sector is now double the U.S. average and in Michigan alone, 30 percent of jobs have been lost since 1980.

But defense is not the only consideration.

A full 6 percent of all textiles produced in this country are used in the automotive industry. Without adequate domestic capacity, the industry would be forced to look elsewhere for upholstery fabric for seats and carpets.

Since 1980, the textile and apparel industry has endured a 19-percent annual rise in imports. Over 1,000 plants have closed resulting in a loss of over 350,000 U.S. jobs in direct manufacturing and related services and suppliers to this sector. In 1987, the Office of Technology Assessment found that 40 percent of the jobs created by this industry are indirect jobs outside of textile and apparel plants. There are 2 million people—more workers than the auto and steel industries combined—directly employed in the textile, apparel and footwear industries.

Taking a closer look at that work force, we find the largest proportion of women and minorities in any manufacturing sector—65 percent of those employed in textiles and footwear and 85 percent in the apparel industry, according to last year's figures from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. Unfair foreign trade practices are not only laying off American workers, they are costing the poorest, most vulnerable workers in this Nation jobs which assure them of productive, self-supporting lives.

The State of Michigan currently has 1,300 textile workers, 20,100 apparel workers and 2,300 footwear workers.

The effect of these continuing plant closures on the cost of unemployment related benefits cannot therefore be underestimated. In fact, ICF Inc., a nationally recognized economic consulting firm, has forecast savings of $500 million in Federal programs only the second year after the enactment of this bill. Within that same time span it also forecasts the creation of tens of thousands of American jobs.

The footwear industry tried to seek relief through existing statute, but was denied a meaningful remedy even after the case was successfully made.

Section 201 cases have been initiated five times by the industry since 1970 and have provoked little effective response. Indeed, the United States has not even utilized the limited GATT and Multi-Fiber Arrangement provisions guaranteeing relief to threatened industries, as Europe and Canada have. It is yet another case of our trading partners showing a greater willingness than we do to utilize existing authority to protect workers in sensitive industries.

Foreign exporters frequently use a combination of subsidies, import restrictions and unregulated salary and factory conditions in order to undercut U.S. manufacturers. Average wages for textile workers in developing Asian countries are 80-percent below those in the United States, and this is not a highly paid U.S. industry. Average hourly compensation for textile workers in May of this year was $7.32. For apparel workers it was $6.06—considerably below the $10.14 average for U.S. manufacturing as a whole.

Horror stories of Third World working conditions abound while developed countries use more subtle techniques of government aid to support their industries. A recent example was the Canadian duty remission program which, although modified due to great United States opposition, still imposes preferential treatment in the wake of a United States-Canada Free Trade Agreement.

Of course many would argue that, in the final analysis, the prerogative must lie with the American consumer. He or she must be able to buy the best product at the best price, be that item imported or domestic.

But the idea that it is the consumer who benefits from cheap imports is not necessarily the case. The report produced by the Office of Technology Assessment in April 1987 revealed that retailers typically mark up imported textiles and apparel 200 to 400 percent, compared with a 100-percent markup on similar U.S. made goods. In fact the consumer will typically pay exactly the same for these goods with, and I quote, "much of the difference ending up in the hands of foreign and domestic shippers, wholesalers and retailers."

This bill provides a wholly sensible approach to the textile, apparel and footwear industries. It allows for a 1-percent increase in imports—a figure notably larger than market growth in textiles and apparel over the last 10 years. It offers some respite to an industry which spends over $2 billion a year in modernization and automation programs and which, from 1975 to 1985, boasted twice the productivity growth of U.S. manufacturing as a whole.

We must give a healthy and vital industry a fair chance to compete in the international market. America needs its textile industry. I urge my colleagues to support the Textile and Apparel Trade Act of 1988.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. SIMON. I yield to the majority leader.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank my friend.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period for morning business for not to extend beyond 7 p.m. today and that Senators may speak therein.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO HERMAN J. WARNEKE, JR.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, it was with deep regret that I learned of the death of Mr. Herman J. Warneke, Jr., of Aiken, SC. Mr. Warneke's family came to South Carolina in the 1880's, and since that time, have been an important part of the Aiken community. Warneke's Cleaners, established in 1934 by Herman Warneke, Sr., and later operated by Herman Warneke, Jr., is one of Aiken's oldest family-owned businesses.

As a young man, Mr. Warneke began his career with Pan American Airlines in Miami, FL, and later served in the Navy during World War II. After completing his education at the University of South Carolina, he returned to Aiken to enter the family business. Mr. Warneke and his company represent the best in American small business. The entrepreneurial efforts pursued by Mr. Warneke and by other small businessmen in the United States are vital to our Nation's economy.

Herman Warneke, Jr., a friendly and soft-spoken man, exhibited a dedication to his work which resulted in the excellent service that has become a hallmark of the Warneke business. Active in the American Legion and a member of the Church Council of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, his gifts to Aiken were many.

The loss of Mr. Warneke will be felt by the business community as well as by his many friends in Aiken, but I am confident that he will be remembered with admiration and respect. My wife Nancy joins me in extending our sincere sympathies to the family and friends of Mr. Herman J. Warneke, Jr.

TRIBUTE TO JACK BONE

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. President, today the community of Minot, ND, honors veteran newspaperman Jack C. Bone.

Jack Bone has been associated with the Minot Daily News for more than 40 years as a reporter, editor, personnel director, and columnist. He now serves on the editorial board of the newspaper.

I consider Jack Bone a personal friend, and respect him for his talent and his many vital contributions to our State and the Minot community. Throughout the years, he has volunteered a tremendous amount of time and effort to water resource planning and development and other issues of vital importance to our State.

Jack Bone's many accomplishments have never received much attention because of his low-key approach. I am very pleased that his efforts are being recognized and that his fellow citizens are honoring him this evening at an appreciation dinner sponsored by the Citizens Committee of Minot.

I ask unanimous consent that an article about this outstanding North Dakotan be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Jack Bone

Maybe his golf game is the key to what Jack Bone is all about, this neighborly guy who has been bringing home The News for more than 40 years.

It's a game he both loves and hates, he says. He hasn't won any tournaments in the 40-plus years he has played ("got my handicap down to 13 once"), and he doesn't swing his clubs on courses where the fees are flights of fancy just for standing there.

Where he beat the averages though is in having shot the first hole in one at Souris Valley Golf Course in Minot when it opened in 1968.

Few can lay claim to making a hole in one. It's absolutely fitting and somehow hilarious that Jack did it—a kind of unannounced, unarranged claim to fame that brings him into the fun and funny situation that is his stock in trade.

When you have a name like Bone, maybe you make it a funny Bone. In a 1948 series about Daily News employees, Bone was credited for his quick way with a pun. Who knows when persons met the punster, and they became one.

Perhaps it was when he was still a boy in Biwabik, Minn., already as a high school lad writing a column for the Biwabik Times. Or later, when he was a junior college student in Virginia, Minn., and his column was called "The Funny Bone." He went on from there to the University of Minnesota, to the Range Facts, a weekly published in Virginia where he both wrote and was business manager, to the Army and a writing stint for the Iwo Jima Inquirer, and finally to The News in 1946 following World War II.

His punster penchant has been threaded through the After Deadline column he has written since 1951, a column started at the suggestion of Hal Davies, former owner and board chairman of The News.

It was Davies who, not long after Bone hired on as city editor, waived at a map in his office of the Missouri Souris Project and said, "I hope you're going to feel strongly about this project and see to it that it gets the attention of Daily News readers . . ."

Thus began what Bone himself has described as "an outpouring of words and water," which accompanied the project unfolding and all its related developments, particularly those having to do with the Garrison Diversion Unit. He also recorded, accurately and with a great deal of sensitivity for the thousands of people involved, the persistent flood problems of the Souris River Valley when they erupted in 1969.

He continued to write about water resources, water use and water management up to and through his retirement as a full-time staff member at The News in 1978. His immersion in water works and water words included his writing up to half a dozen statements for as many individuals to present in Washington in support of the project, each statement, by Jack, still another reason to defend it.

"I never calculated the volume over the years. And it was a kind of an unusual position for a newsman to be in. I'd go to Washington both as an advocate for the project and as a newsman attempting to be in a neutral position. But of course I wasn't, everything was written with a slant in favor of North Dakota." (Punster becomes prolific wordsmith.) Bone developed into a specialist in writing in a field where there were none before him at The News, and in the process, became one of the most knowledgeable, articulate and influential people in North Dakota in water resource development.

His work brought him the distinguished Service Award in 1977 from the Upper Missouri Water Users Association, a four-state organization. That same year he also was named a recipient of the Alumni Golden Award from Minot State University for his services as a journalist writing in the interest of MSU and the Minot community.

He did everything at The News. City editors in the 1940s—and for a lot of years that followed—routinely also covered city hall, the fire station, the city council, the Chamber of Commerce. There was no library at The News in those days. Jack persuaded Aloysia Brainard, then a veteran newswoman, to start one. Nor was there a photography department. He was instrumental in getting that going, too. Later, when he was named an assistant to Ray Dobson, who was publisher and editor-in-chief, he also became personnel director in the newsroom. After that, his intake of Tums stepped up and he got out to golf a little more.

Small wonder. Reporters were starting to clamor for more bylines. The '60s and their turbulence arrived, Jack riding the crest of high and low water, the start of the feminist movement, argumentative reporters, the now-and-again angry publisher and irate reader. His Tums consumption kept up the pace. He still writes his weekly column and occasional editorials, and is a member of The News Editorial Board created a year ago by Editor Stephen Trosley.

Over the years, he was a member of the Exchange and Lions clubs, the Jaycees and the Chamber of Commerce, the North Dakota Water Users, the N.D. Associated Press, the YMCA, Minot Vocational Workshop Board and the Souris Flood Control Committee. (Good guy on the golf course becomes adept aid at the negotiating table, helping to bring about the signing of a truce pact in the troubled Souris River flood control project.)

He and his wife, Evelyn, built the house they live in at 209-19th Ave. SE, and moved into it in 1946. He gardens there when he isn't golfing. And he has done his share of bowling and bridge-playing.

Their two children, Jack Roger Bone and Nancy Alice Armstrong, live in Canyonville, Ore., and Elkhart, Ind. Young Jack is taking a respite from 22 years in the field of education and Nancy is operating a drugstore with her husband, Gary.

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE ESTIMATE—S. 2436

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, on August 10, 1988, the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources filed the report to accompany S. 2436, a bill to reauthorize the Sleeping Bear Dunes National Lakeshore Advisory Commission.

At the time the report was filed, the Congressional Budget Office had not submitted its budget estimate regarding this measure. The committee has since received this communication from the Congressional Budget Office, and I ask unanimous consent that it be printed in the Record at this point.

There being no objection, the report was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

U.S. Congress,
Congressional Budget Office,
Washington, DC, August 11, 1988.

Hon. J. Bennett Johnston, Jr.,
Chairman, Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Dear Mr. Chairman: The Congressional Budget Office has reviewed S. 2436, a bill to reauthorize the Sleeping Bear Dunes National Lakeshore Advisory Commission, as ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, August 3, 1988.

Based on information provided by the National Park Service, CBO estimates that enacting S. 2436 would not result in any significant costs to the federal government, or to state or local governments. The bill would extend, for 10 additional years, the authorization for the Sleeping Bear Dunes National Lakeshore Advisory Commission.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them. The CBO staff contact is Michael Sieverts, who can be reached at 226-2860.

Sincerely,

James L. Blum,
Acting Director.

REPRESSION IN SINGAPORE

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, on July 11, 1988, Senators Simon and Cranston submitted Senate Concurrent Resolution 132 calling on the Government of Singapore to respect the human rights of all the people of Singapore and to release all persons imprisoned without trial for the peaceful expression of their political views. I support that legislation and urge the other Members of the Senate to add their support to this concurrent resolution.

The specific case of K.C. Chew, a citizen of Singapore currently detained for issuing a statement in response to charges brought against him, highlights the deplorable situation in Singapore.

On June 21, 1987, at 2:30 a.m., Singapore's secret police arrived at the home of Chew Kheng Chuan, known by his American friends as "K.C.," and arrested him under the Internal Security Act for his involvement in a so-called Marxist conspiracy to overthrow the Government. Under the act, persons can be arrested and detained indefinitely without trial.

It is my understanding that for 5 days, K.C. was forced to stand, beaten frequently, and deprived of sleep. It is not surprising that in the following months of inhumane treatment, confessions to charges of conspiracy were extracted from him. Subsequently, a 1-year detention order was issued against him.

K.C. graduated from Harvard in 1982. He returned to Singapore after graduation, but he maintained ties to the United States and to Harvard as an editor of the Harvard Newsline. The allegations of K.C.'s Marxist involvement are extremely weak. His undergraduate thesis on development, for example, which contained a brief quote from Karl Marx, was confiscated as evidence.

K.C. Chew rejects the charges against him, saying, "I am a democrat, a believer in an open and democratic polity and in the virtues of an open and an accountable government * * *. A citizen of a democracy, to be worthy of that society, has not just the right, but indeed the duty to participate in the political life of his or her society."

On May 18, 1988, K.C. was rearrested under the Internal Security Act for his role in drafting a statement that described the treatment he and other prisoners received in prison. To date, K.C. is still in detention.

I urge Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew to release K.C. and all other prisoners who have been imprisoned for their political views, and I encourage all who are concerned about cases such as K.C.'s to support Senate Concurrent Resolution 132.

SENATOR ROBERT C. BYRD

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, our colleague, Senator Robert C. Byrd, has enjoyed a public life so filled with important events and personal achievements that his biographers will need to work diligently to distill the essential characteristics of his remarkable life. At the time that he leaves his role as majority leader of the Senate, I am convinced that three areas are worthy of especial commendation and attention.

First of all, Senator Robert C. Byrd is a master legislator and parliamentarian. Much has been written, deservedly, about his mastery of the rules of the Senate, but this is only a part of the reason he will be remembered as a remarkable legislator. Senator Byrd deeply cares about legislative results and the consequences of effective and constructive governmental action. Early on, he learned that mastery of the rules and of the techniques which can lead to effective floor leadership make an enormous difference in one's ability to project ideas and visions and to change the course of history, even if in only modest ways, day by day. I admire, as do all Senators, his comprehensive knowledge of parliamentary procedures, precedents of the Senate, and general institutional memory which helps to refine all legislation including his own. These talents have made him an especially effective majority leader.

Second, Senator Robert C. Byrd reveres history. He has written extensively about the history of the U.S. Senate but this has led him into a general reverence for history and very sound background for his legislative proposals. In the same methodical way in which he has learned the rules of the Senate, he has learned the history of the Senate and this has given him additional power in knowing of the strength and weaknesses of those who have preceded us on the floor of the Senate and the opportunities which they might have taken and which are now available to us.

Third, and most important, Senator Robert C. Byrd is a patriot. He understands the Constitution of the United States of America and the broad range of responsibilities and obligations which each citizen freely acknowledges and a few citizens attempt to incorporate into their daily lives. During important foreign policy and defense debates, Senator Byrd has always tried to find that course of action which would best secure the future of our country. His diligence and often, his passion, on these occasions have made a significant difference.

Fortunately, for the U.S. Senate and for our country, Senator Robert C. Byrd will continue to serve with us for many years to come. During that time, we shall probably discover additional strengths which we will want to celebrate from time to time. For the moment, I simply want to affirm that I deeply appreciate the leadership which Senator Byrd has given to the U.S. Senate. He is clearly an important person in the history of the U.S. Senate and his reputation and achievements continue to grow.

BICENTENNIAL MINUTE

SEPTEMBER 7, 1969: EVERETT DIRKSEN DIES

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, 19 years ago today, on September 7, 1969, Senate Republican Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen died in Washington at the age of 73. The following day, Congress honored the Illinois statesman by arranging for his body to lie in state in the Capitol's rotunda, an honor accorded to only five other Americans on the basis of their service as U.S. Senators.

Everett Dirksen began his long congressional career in 1933, representing central Illinois for eight terms in the House of Representatives. In 1950 he moved to the Senate by defeating Scott Lucas, who was then the Senate's Democratic majority leader. In 1957, Senate Republicans selected Dirksen as their party whip and in 1959 he became Republican leader.

Dirksen excelled at both tough bargaining and at compromise, equally essential components of our legislative system. His ability to change a strongly held position was legendary. A resolute isolationist in the 1930's, Dirksen was actively supporting United States aid to Great Britain in the weeks before the attack on Pearl Harbor. In the 1960's, after first opposing the Nuclear Test Ban Treaty, he worked to ensure its ratification. In a memorable address, he recalled the bombing of Hiroshima. "For the first time the whole bosom of God's Earth was ruptured by a man-made contrivance that we call a nuclear weapon." He determined that he would not go to his grave without doing what he could to end the threat of nuclear holocaust. Similarly, in 1964, he persuaded other opponents to support the Civil Rights Act, providing the votes essential for its passage. Explaining his change of heart, Dirksen quoted Victor Hugo: "Stronger than all the armies is an idea whose time has come."

In his last decade, Everett Dirksen became, in the eyes of many Americans, almost the personification of the Senate. His golden oratory, his theatrical presence, his campaign to make the marigold the national flower endeared him to millions. In 1972, the Senate paid him a high tribute by naming one of its office buildings in his honor.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM WEEK

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, immediately prior to the August congressional recess, I along with 32 of my colleagues in the Senate, introduced Senate Joint Resolution 361, to designate the week of September 25, 1988, as "Religious Freedom Week."

At a time on a national level when we are celebrating the bicentennial of the ratification of the Constitution, I thought it most appropriate to also commemorate our national commitment to religious freedom, specifically freedom from religious persecution, intolerance, and indoctrination. No more clearly was the importance of religious freedom emphasized in our country's history than in a letter from President George Washington in 1790 to the congregation at Touro Synagogue in Newport, RI, stating "to bigotry no sanction, to persecution no assistance."

Without question, Touro Synagogue and President George Washington's letter on religious tolerance, have become important national symbols of our commitment as a nation to religious freedom.

During the recent congressional recess, Mr. President, Touro Synagogue celebrated its 225th anniversary. On the occasion of this anniversary in Newport, my distinguished colleague in the House of Representatives, Congresswoman Helen Delich Bentley of the Second Congressional District in Maryland, commented on religious freedom as an integral part of our national heritage. Congresswoman Bentley also payed tribute to our rich heritage of religious freedom in Rhode Island, and the important role that Touro Synagogue played in symbolizing this protection from religious persecution in the colonial states.

Mr. President, Congresswoman Bentley's remarks to the congregation at Touro Synagogue on August 21, 1988, are most thoughtful, and ideas which I believe we should clearly reflect upon today as we celebrate our bicentennial of the Constitution. They are comments which also underscore the importance of religious freedom throughout our heritage, as well as reminding us of our continuing need to guarantee to all citizens protection against religious intoleration and persecution.

I strongly commend my distinguished colleague Congresswoman Bentley for taking the leadership in focusing attention on the importance of religious freedom, and for introducing House Joint Resolution 518, with 145 cosponsors, which also designates the week of September 25, 1988, as "Religious Freedom Week."

I ask unanimous consent that the recent remarks of Congresswoman Bentley before the congregation of Touro Synagogue in Newport, RI, be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the remarks were ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Speech by Congresswoman Bentley at Touro Synagogue, August 21, 1988

When I entered this sacred edifice today, goose bumps ran up and down my spine and over my whole body—as I realized that I had entered Jewry's own Statue of Liberty—and I am honored to have been invited here today to celebrate with your Congregation the 225th anniversary of the completion and dedication of the Touro Synagogue and the 198th anniversary of George Washington's immortal words addressed first to your ancestors, "To bigotry no sanction, to persecution no assistance."

What a wonderful promise for the future of America! And standing in this sacred hall, we all must be moved thinking of the impact of that sentence on the listeners that long ago morning. What a thrill must have swept through the audience and there would have been a rustling in this sanctuary—a sound—as if a new wind has just picked up to sweep across the young nation—bringing hope to all its citizens that they were truly free to worship without fear of the tyranny of a state religion. That was the promise to them by the new President. How excited you must feel whenever you visit this hallowed hall! I told you how thrilled I felt when I entered here this morning.

It is difficult for us as Americans today to realize just how much that must have meant to those people, at that time. Few of our history books—after the period of the Puritan landings in Massachusetts—feature the impact that religious persecutions in Europe had to do with the flood of immigrants which came to this country before 1800. And yet, if you thnk about it, many of our colonial states were founded by settlers who came to the New World seeking religious freedom.

Certainly your own state, Rhode Island, was a haven in the very earliest years, not only from those fleeing persecution in Europe, but from those seeking escape from the harsh Puritan regime to the north in neighboring Massachusetts. Your own congregation had followed the route of the Puritans through Holland to these shores. And Rhode Island also had attracted many of the "separests"—Baptists, Quakers, Catholics—and in doing so began building a model for the pluralist society that has guided constitutional interpretation since the founding of the government.

My own state of Maryland was started as a Catholic colony—Lord Baltimore representing one of the most powerful Catholic families in England. Neighboring Pennsylvania was granted to William Penn, a Quaker. And in later years attracted German Moravians and Lutherans and the Amish and Mennonites who still, after two hundred years, are free to live daily—purely for religious reasons—as they lived then.

And behind the respect of their neighbors for their unique life style—fostered in this country by our long tradition of "live and let live"—stands the power of the central government and the constitution protecting their belief and their right to even be protected from serving in the Armed forces of the United States, because they are pacifists.

This "Marvelous experiment" in self government which the Republic was labeled in its early years has been never more marvelous than in its protection of the free exercise of religion. In the history of nations, we are not very old. But, in the history of democratic governments, we are the oldest. And in the history of religious freedom, our "Bill of Rights"—our written contract with every American—is unprecedented in age and law.

And I believe—it started here! The promise of Touro given a year before the Bill of Rights became part of the Constitution!

How fitting it is that the preamble to my resolution, H.J. Res. 518, calling on the Congress to designate the week of September 25th, 1988, as "Religious Freedom Week" cites the promise of Touro and I must give all the credit there is to Rep. James Scheuer for not only being one of the earliest supporters of my resolution, but for calling my attention to your historic contribution to the annals of religious freedom in this country.

When we go back into session, after Labor Day, this is what will be read on the floor of the House:

Whereas, the principle of religious liberty was an essential part of the founding of our Nation, and must be safeguarded with eternal vigilance by all men and women of good will;

Whereas, religious liberty has been endangered throughout history by bigotry and indifference;

Whereas, the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States guarantees the inalienable rights of individuals to worship freely or not be religious, as they choose, without interference from governmental or other agencies;

Whereas the Constitution of the United States ensures religious freedom to all of the people of the United States;

Whereas the bicentennial of the ratification of the Constitution occurs in 1988;

Whereas, at Touro Synagogue a letter advocating the doctrine of mutual respect and understanding was issued more than a year before the adoption of the Bill of Rights?

Whereas the letter of President Washington and the Touro Synagogue have become national symbols of the commitment of the United States to religious freedom;

Whereas, throughout our Nation's history, religion has contributed to the welfare of believers and of society in general, and has been a force for maintaining high standards for morality, ethics, and justice;

Whereas, religion is most free when it is observed voluntarily at private initiative, uncontaminated by Government interference and unconstrained by majority preference; and

Whereas, religious liberty can be protected only through the efforts of all persons of good will in a united commitment: Now therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and the House of Representatives assembled: That the week of September 25, 1988, is hereby declared to be "Religious Freedom Week", wherein members of all faiths or of none, may join together in support of religious tolerance and religious liberty for all.

In the House we now have 100 co-sponsors. Your own Senator Claiborne Pell is sponsoring the resolution in the Senate where there are 35 co-sponsors.

There may be some of you in the audience who wonder at my original sponsorship of this resolution. Of why I have done it. If maybe I am particularly pious.

I think that the answer to my strong awareness of religious freedom and my appreciation of freedom of worship is because my own religion is in such a minority—not only in this country—but in Europe also. I am Eastern Orthodox. I am also a first generation of American-Serbian ancestry. The history of oppression of my church and my people by the Ottomans is among the saddest and most tragic in the world's history.

Like many of you here today, I was raised on the blessings of the freedom in America by people who knew for centuries what oppression is. My mother and father's native country—Yugoslavia—is still not free. And quarrels among its various ethnic groups and religions going back for hundreds of years are still alive there . . . still stir hatred and animosity, still fester causing it to remain a poor, torn country—despite its standing as one nation.

Because of this, my love for America and its guarantees of the freedom we share this afternoon, in this sacred place, is unashamed. My patriotism, literally translated—"love of country"—exists and grows because from the very first this nation was dedicated by men and women who loved their God and their religion enough to leave all in order for them—to their own minds—to save all.

We—and the world—are forever in debt to their courage and their commitment to a spiritual life—to spiritual values. Without them, there would have been no "America." There may have been a collection of states on this continent, but there would have been no "united." Every value which built this country was brought with them in their various faiths. At every turning point in this nation's history, the values and verities of the Ten Commandments have not only determined our actions, but—I believe—the upholding of those values—have saved us in the darkest hours.

In my District there is a Catholic Church that is a permanent reminder of the time when there was no religious freedom in this country. The cornerstone for St. Ignatius Catholic Church in Bel Air, Md., was laid in 1791, immediately after the Bill of Rights, including the Right of Freedom to Worship, was added to the Constitution, completed in 1792.

In the burial grounds of St. Ignatius are bodies of military heroes from every war in which this country fought for freedom for all. These include heroes from the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, the Civil War, the Spanish-American War, World War I, World War II, the Korean War, and the Vietnam War—all of whom laid down their lives that you and I, our forefathers, and our future generations would be free to hold meetings such as this in institutions like Touro Synagogue.

Yes indeed, the darkest hours frequented our horizon on many occasions:

It was nothing short of a miracle that we won the Revolutionary War against Great Britain—a nation much more powerful in all ways. In the War of 1812, the second time a King reached out for us, it was the seapower of this country—which saved this country and offered the opportunity indirectly for Francis Scott Key to write the immortal Star Spangled Banner as he saw the Stars and Stripes still flying over Fort McHenry in the early morning hours after a fierce all-night battle! I'm very proud that it was the battle fought in Baltimore Harbor that sealed the fate of the British once and for all.

Those dark hours hovered overhead again in the late 1850's and early 1860's when Lincoln's great courage came from his religious faith. And the terrible trial of the tearing apart of this country in a great Civil War for a principal—freedom for all men—no matter their color—was looked upon by a more cynical world as being rather foolish.

When we review the history of our marvelous country, the great United States of America, and the past battles for freedom, we can say that our people were being driven by the promise of Touro.

And so it has been down through the history of this nation.

Proud of my country? Indeed I am!

Proud to be here today to join with you in your wonderful celebration? Indeed I am.

And from the bottom of my heart, I thank you so much for asking me to come . . . It is not only a great commemorative day in the history of Touro Synagogue, it is also a great day in my life that I could give the first reading of my resolution to you—before it is read on the floor of the House of Representatives. It is most fitting and in its way, historic too. Thank you for the opportunity.

DEATH OF COACH ROBERT LEE DODD

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, when the Georgia Institute of Technology begins its 1988 football season on Saturday, it will be the first time in 57 years that Coach Bobby Dodd has not been on the sidelines or in the stands.

Named for the Confederate general, Robert Lee "Bobby" Dodd was born November 11, 1908, in Galax, VA. He served for 14 years at Georgia Tech as an assistant football coach—1931-45; for 22 years as head football coach—1945-66; and for 26 years as the Georgia Tech athletic director—1950-76. During his coaching career he compiled an impressive record of 165 wins, 64 losses, and 8 ties. In 13 bowl game appearances, Bobby Dodd led Georgia Tech to 9 wins. He was selected "Coach of the Year" in 1952 by the New York Daily News, the same year he coached Georgia Tech to a national championship.

These impressive statistics do not tell the whole story, nor do they tell the most important story. Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young said it best:

> Bobby Dodd was a winner because he understood that winning is a matter of character and intelligence, as well as physical ability. He pioneered in the development of leadership for our Nation. His athletes have gone on to be successful in almost every other area of life. That is coaching at its best.

These are the qualities the American Sportsmanship Council recognized and sought to set as a standard in naming their annual "Coach of the Year" award for Bobby Dodd. For these reasons he was also inducted into the National Football Hall of Fame, the Helms Football Hall of Fame, the Tennessee Sports Hall of Fame, and the Georgia Sports Hall of Fame.

Ned West, sports information director at Georgia Tech under Coach Dodd, said that Coach Dodd was blessed with the reputation for what became known as Dodd's luck. And Coach Dodd believed in it more than anyone. "If you believe you are lucky, you will be," Coach Dodd would say.

Ned West said that all of the Georgia Tech players were believers.

> They knew that if the team had a bad break on the playing field that "Dodd's luck" would even things up. So, they worked even harder for the "break" they knew would come, and were ready to capitalize on it when it did. Usually it did, and they did.

Former Georgia Tech football star Frank Broyles said:

> There was no doubt in anyone's mind that off the field Bobby Dodd was like a second father. And he treated every person as he would treat his own son, or would want to be treated himself * * * He taught us to care, because he cared. He taught us to be concerned, because he was concerned. He taught us that honesty is sacred, is absolute, and is eternal.

The Bobby Dodd legend lives on and off the football field. The Bobby Dodd Center, a sheltered workshop for retarded citizens in Atlanta which celebrated its 25th anniversary in 1985, was named after him in recognition of his support of job training for the handicapped.

In 1978, Dodd became the first recipient of the "Big Heart Award" for his work with retarded children. He was also a member of the advisory board and honorary fund drive chairman of the Atlanta Association for Retarded Citizens, Inc., and a board of trustee of the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children.

Dodd was an honorary coach for Special Olympics, a member of the Atlanta Rotary Club, the Northwest Presbyterian Church, the Capital City Club, the Ansley Golf Club, Omicrom Delta Kappa, ANAK and Sigma Nu. He also served as a trustee of Westminster Schools, chairman of the board of trustees and the Mt. Vernon Christian Academy, director of the Atlanta Boys Club and a trustee for the Big Brothers of Atlanta.

University of Georgia football coach and athletic director Vince Dooley said, "Bobby Dodd was not only a great football coach, but also a great human being. He always represented the highest standards of Georgia Tech and of college football." We will miss him on and off the football field.

JTPA

Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, I am proud to be the author of the Job Training Partnership Act. It has provided the road to economic opportunity for millions of our disadvantaged citizens.

I am also proud of the fact that JTPA was a bipartisan bill. The Senate bill was developed through intense negotiations between myself and Senator KENNEDY and that bipartisan product, with additional contributions from many other Senators of both parties, was unanimously adopted by the Senate. The Senate bill was further modified in conference with the House of Representatives led by Representative PERKINS—the former chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee; Representative HAWKINS—the present chairman; and Representative JEFFORDS—the ranking minority member.

No major piece of legislation is written by any single Senator. It is the product of negotiation and compromise both among Senators and interest groups—but that does not contradict the fact that someone has to take the lead in that process. Senator BENTSEN, rightly, puts authorship of the Medicare catastrophic bill amongst his accomplishments; but that does not mean that Secretary Bowen and many Senators, both Republican and Democratic, did not play key roles in its development—not to speak of the major impact from Members of the House of Representatives.

The fact that a piece of legislation was the product of bipartisan negotiation should not put it beyond the realm of criticism. If instances of fraud, waste, or corruption are found they should be corrected and, if appropriate, prosecuted. If the legislation has flaws, it should be amended. The Senate Labor Committee has in fact held oversight hearings under Republican and Democratic chairmen and proposals for constructive change have been made by members of both parties. A bipartisan Quayle-Kennedy bill was enacted in 1986 and a bipartisan Kennedy-Quayle bill passed the Senate unanimously last year. Senator SIMON, the chairman of the Subcommittee on Employment and Productivity, is developing additional legislation at the present time and I am sure it will receive careful, bipartisan scrutiny.

When a national candidate is associated with a national program, it is only natural that the press should do its best to examine and publicize any flaws that that program may have. I welcome such inquiry and I hope and trust that any flaws will be corrected administratively or legislatively.

But in the heat of partisan battle, let us not lose sight of sound public policy. We all want an effective job training program and no party will gain if we turn legitimate criticism into wanton destruction. No party will gain—but the disadvantaged will lose. If we destroy the system with irresponsible attacks, a new administration will have to labor long and hard to build a new one instead of adjusting the existing system to its own priorities.

The JTPA system serves the disadvantaged in Indiana and Massachusetts under the leadership of Republican and Democratic Governors, just as it serves them in all the States. I hope that those in both parties who have worked so hard to build and maintain a job training system will work together to ensure that the pressures of electoral partisanship do not destroy a sound bipartisan structure.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. GORE (for himself and Mr. Sasser):

S. 2754. A bill to designate the Federal Building in Jackson, TN, as the "Ed Jones Federal Building"; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

ED JONES FEDERAL BUILDING

● Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I would like to join my fellow Tennesseans and colleagues in the U.S. Congress in expressing the deepest gratitude to and highest praise for Congressman Ed Jones for his admirable 20 years of service in the U.S. House of Representatives. Earlier this year, Representative Jones announced that he would retire at the close of the 100th Congress. In commemoration of his outstanding service to the State of Tennessee and 8th Congressional District, I am introducing legislation, along with my esteemed colleague, the senior Senator from the State of Tennessee, [Mr. Sasser], to designate the Federal building in Jackson, TN as the "Ed Jones Federal Building."

This recognition is a very modest token of appreciation to a man who has always served his district and State with his constituents' best interests in mind. Ed Jones has been on the front line of promoting the interests of our Nation's farmers and other residents of rural America since he was elected to Congress in 1969. The Federal building named in honor of this extraordinary public servant in the district which he has represented diligently for many years will serve as an appropriate reminder of his work for future generations.

Ed Jones' announcement of his retirement at the end of the 100th Congress was received by me, and I know all of my colleagues, with a great sense of sadness. His leadership on the House Committee on Agriculture and as chairman of the prestigous Agriculture Subcommittee on Conservation, Credit and Rural Development will be sorely missed by all who have had the privilege to work with him. Additionally, his absence will be hard-felt in the Tennessee Democratic Delegation, for which he has served as dean for many years.

Although Mr. Jones' retirement will leave a void in Tennessee, his accomplishments and decades of service to the State, particularly in the area of Agriculture, will endure. He can reflect on a unique lifelong career as a farmer, family man and distinguished statesman who has always had a strong sense of pride for Tennessee.

Ed Jones was born in Yorkville, TN, where he continues to live with his wife, Llewellyn. After attending college at the University of Tennessee, he accepted a position with the Tennessee Department of Agriculture. He continued to gain notoriety in the field of agriculture in his positions as a supervisor for the Tennessee Dairy Products Association, an agriculture representative of the Illinois Central Railroad, and as Commissioner of the Tennessee Department of Agriculture.

Since his election to Congress in 1969, Mr. Jones has achieved the delicate balance of being a strong legislative voice in Washington and an attentive Congressman who maintains close ties with the people he represents. His various positions on the Agriculture Committee and its subcommittees have enabled him to have a strong role in the shaping of the country's long-term agriculture policy.

Mr. Jones' distinguished legislative achievements include participation in the writing of four omnibus farm bills. As chairman of the Conservation, Credit and Rural Development Subcommittee, he has presided over the restructuring of the Farm Credit System and written the landmark conservation provisions included in the 1985 farm bill. He has also championed the causes of rural electric and rural telephone cooperatives. But perhaps Ed Jones' greatest attribute is his willingness to listen to opposing views from different interests and write legislation that reflects a fair consideration of each party's concerns.

Congressman Ed Jones' selfless presence in the U.S. Congress has enriched the lives of his constituents. His career serves as a luminous example to all of us who follow him in mutual pursuits. I urge my distinguished colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation to name the Jackson Federal Building for Ed Jones, and I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the Record.

S. 2754

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. DESIGNATION OF ED JONES FEDERAL BUILDING.

The Federal Building located at 109 South Highland, Jackson, Tennessee is designated, and shall be known as, the "Ed Jones Federal Building". Any law, regulation, map, document, record, or other paper of the United States in which such building is designated or referred to shall be held to refer to such building under and by the name of the "Ed Jones Federal Building".●

By Mr. RIEGLE:

S. 2755. A bill to amend the Social Security Act to provide for improvements in services to applicants and beneficiaries under the Old-age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Program and the Supplemental Security Income Program; referred to the Committee on Finance.

SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFICIARIES PROTECTION ACT

● Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, today I am introducing a bill to ensure that individuals participating in the Social Security system are treated with respect, dignity, and fairness.

My friend and colleague from Michigan, Congressman Sandy Levin, is introducing an identical bill in the other body today. I understand that Congressman Levin has worked closely with the distinguished chairman of the Ways and Means Social Security Subcommittee in developing this bill, and the subcommittee will hold hearings on the bill this month.

The Social Security Beneficiaries Protection Act, S. 2755, would place into law a statement of American' rights to fair, courteous, and responsive treatment from the Social Security Administration. The bill encompasses a series of procedural changes designed to protect the rights of beneficiaries in dealing with the Social Security Administration [SSA].

Problems with the SSA generate the largest number of constituent complaints in my seven Michigan offices. We currently have over 300 individual cases pending, and we're opening new cases at the rate of 75 more per month. These figures strongly indicate that people are having problems with the current system, and I think this bill will help solve some of their problems.

I realize that Social Security is one of our largest and most complex Government programs, but it is also one of our most critically needed programs. Because Social Security provides the sole income to so many people, we must make sure the program is working efficiently and fairly. People must have faith that when they call or write on their personal situation, they are going to get the right answer right away.

SSA is taking modest steps to improve the administration of its program in some areas addressed by this bill, and I support those efforts. Nevertheless, we have seen significant deterioration in the responsiveness and quality of service provided by SSA over the past 8 years.

The Social Security Administration, which is often seen as one of our finest agencies, is now beset with morale problems and staffing shortages in the wake of neglect and budget cuts under the current administration. I have expressed dismay in the past about some of the practices of this administration, most notably their treatment of disability beneficiaries. Recently, I have been troubled by SSA's inconsistent treatment of attorneys' fees, the failure to credit billions of dollars to individuals' accounts, and persistent staffing cuts despite the failure of the new computer systems to perform as expected.

I am concerned that SSA is moving toward the use of new technology without considering the implications for many of the low-income individuals who are served. These individuals have traditionally needed more personalized services. A telephone call is often not an adequate substitute for personal contact.

We must assure that individuals receive proper guidance so that they receive the benefits to which they are entitled. S. 2755 contains a modest set of provisions that would restore the quality of services to which the public had become accustomed. We must act now to firmly establish in law a set of procedures that are in place for every beneficiary, in any circumstance that may arise.

S. 2755 has eight main provisions, which are as follows:

First, requires SSA to collect overpayments on a schedule which does not cause financial hardship for the beneficiary.

Second, requires SSA to notify all applicants for benefits that there have been problems with SSA's wage credit records. SSA furnishes an applicant with a summary of the wage history for applicant to verify; statute of limitations would be waived to correct any mistakes.

Third, requires SSA to establish a program to help homeless people qualify for benefits to which they are entitled.

Fourth, requires SSA to write all notices and correspondence in plain, understandable English.

Fifth, requires SSA to take into account any limitations that an individual might have when determining whether that person acted in good faith; including physical, mental, educational, vocational, or linguistic limitations.

Sixth, establishes demonstration projects to examine how SSA can create a system to automatically generate a letter to telephone callers regarding the outcome of the conversation; provides record and receipt of contact.

Seventh, SSA records name of any authorized attorney on computer files to facilitate their access to files.

Eighth, protects right of claimants to benefits to which they would otherwise be eligible but for an earlier, inappropriate, denial of benefits. Protects claimant from losing the right to past benefits due up to the time of the original denial.

I hope this package of beneficiary protections will be supported by my colleagues. While they are designed to be clear and absolute in principle, the details of how the principles are to be implemented are largely left to the discretion of SSA.

We've put Social Security on solid financial ground, we've kept it from being raided by other Government programs—now we have to make it work and see that people who are entitled to the benefits of the program get their fair share.

I urge my colleagues to join with me as a cosponsor of S. 2755.

S. 2756. A bill entitled the "Anti-Apartheid Act Amendments of 1988"; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. PROXMIRE (for himself and Mr. Conrad):

S. 2756. A bill to provide to employees of Government contractors protection against reprisal for disclosure to an appropriate Government official of information which the employee reasonably believes evidences misconduct relating to the contract with the Government; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

GOVERNMENT CONTRACTOR WHISTLEBLOWER PROTECTION ACT

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Government Contract Whistleblower Protection Act of 1988.

In light of the recent Pentagon procurement debacle, the terms "Government contractor" and "Government procurement" have become synonymous with the word "scandal."

I think it's fair to say that most Government contractors conduct themselves in an honorable fashion. Still, as more details of the Pentagon procurement scandal are revealed in the press, public trust in the procurement process, indeed in the Federal Government itself, is further eroded.

But Mr. President, many cases of corruption in the Government procurement process would go unnoticed and undetected were it not for a few brave souls who have come to be known as "whistleblowers."

Being a whistleblower is tough. It takes honesty, guts, and more than a little patriotism to risk your job, your standing in the community, maybe even your economic life to reveal abuses in the Government procurement system. But whistleblowers take these risks in spite of the many dangers to themselves and their careers in order to maintain the integrity of the Federal procurement system.

Right now, Federal employees who blow the whistle on corruption have certain protections under Federal law. But whistleblowers in the private sector have no such protections. Consequently, stories abound in which whistleblowers who work for Government contractors suffer harassment because they refused to idly stand by when they saw wrongdoing.

For example, there is the story of two Morton Thiokol engineers who testified before the Rogers Commission regarding defective "O" rings on the space shuttle and were reassigned for their troubles. Then there is the tale of Westinghouse Hanford employees who were assigned to find safety problems at the Department of Energy's Hanford, WA facility, only to suffer intimidation and reprimands after they testified about their findings to a congressional committee. These are only two examples; you need merely to open a newspaper to find more.

Mr. President, we need to protect whistleblowers who work for the Federal Government, but we also need to protect whistleblowers who work for companies that do business with the Federal Government.

My bill will expand protection to employees of Government contractors. Here's how:

The bill makes it unlawful to discriminate against or discharge any employee if the employee discloses information to appropriate Government officials regarding violation of laws, rules and regulations or mismanagement, gross waste of funds, abuse of authority of a danger to public safety.

Employees who believe they have suffered for "blowing the whistle" may file a complaint with the Secretary of Labor who will then complete an investigation within 30 days.

Within 90 days after the Secretary has received a complaint, he will issue an order providing relief to the employee if the investigation shows such relief is warranted. This order can include reinstatement and compensation for damages. The Secretary may also order the contractor to pay the costs and expenses of bringing the complaint.

Employees may bring a civil suit against the person who was the source of the complaint to enforce compliance with the Secretary's order.

Mr. President, this bill will help restore integrity to the Government procurement process and assure that those who want to protect the United States against fraud, abuse, waste and public safety hazards, and I ask my colleagues to support the measure so that we can bring public trust back to the procurement process.

A similar bill has already been introduced in the other body, and it is my hope that this Congress will pass the bill without delay.

By Mr. HATCH (for himself, Mr. Humphrey, Mr. Matsunaga, Mr. Stafford, Mr. DeConcini, Mr. Bentsen, Mr. Dole, Mr. Stennis, Mr. Cochran, Mr. Stevens, Mr. Fowler, and Mr. Cranston:

S.J. Res. 372. Joint resolution to designate the week beginning November 21 through 27, 1988, as "National Adoption Week"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

NATIONAL ADOPTION WEEK

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President. Over the past 12 years, the week of November 20 has been known as "National Adoption Week." It is again my privilege to sponsor the joint resolution proclaiming Thanksgiving week, November 20-27, 1988, as "National Adoption Week" along with Senators Humphrey, Matsunaga, Stafford, DeConcini, Bentsen, Dole, Stennis, Cochran, Stevens, Fowler, and Cranston.

Adoption is an important part of the lives of millions of couples and children wanting to have a family of their own. In America today, there are an estimated 36,000 adoptable children who remain in foster care or institutions because of various public and private barriers. The majority of these children have special needs. They may have physical, emotional, or mental handicaps, or they may be children who have already reached school age. They are children of various ethnic backgrounds and children with brothers and sisters. There also remains a lack of awareness among prospective parents who don't know that these children need a home.

"National Adoption Week" acknowledges the benefits of adoption. During the week, the media, Government agencies, adoptive parent and advocacy groups, civic and church groups, and businesses will sponsor special events and provide information to heighten awareness of adoption opportunities.

Joann Jacobsen-Wells, a reporter for the Deseret News in Salt Lake City, UT, tells the following story in a recent article.

> Brad Woolley and his wife, Deedo, adopted three children—two boys, now ages 5 and 2, through a private attorney, and 9-month Mikko Yun from Korea.
> Although physically able to have children, they elected to adopt because too many children needed homes. That's not to say they didn't go through the same labor pains as do biological parents.
> "Adoption is misunderstood. People tell us that we got our children the easy way," Mrs. Woolley said. "But one of our first pregnancies lasted five years instead of nine months."
> Mrs. Woolley painfully remembers being notified of a child they could adopt. She quit her job, set up a nursery and prepared herself for becoming a mom.
> But the adoption fell through. The couple refers to that child as their "still-born baby."
> Woolley, who has never been given a baby shower, said few people understood their pain. One of the hardest aspects of adopting is the lack of emotional support from family and friends who can't relate to the fears and anticipations of adoptive couples—not to mention the bureaucratic red tape they must cut through.

"National Adoption Week" is during a time when we celebrate the traditions of the family. And, we in Congress must remember that those wanting a family, both parents and children, share one basic need, the right for a permanent, secure and loving home and family.

So let us join in the celebration for families who are united through adoption. Let us celebrate the increased attention to adoption and commend the institutions working to find permanent homes for all adoptable children. I urge you to join me in cosponsoring "National Adoption Week."

I ask unanimous consent that the complete text of the joint resolution be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the joint resolution was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

S.J. Res. 372

Whereas the week of November 21 has been commemorated as National Adoption Week for the past ten years;

Whereas we in Congress recognize the essential value of belonging to a secure, loving permanent family as every child's basic right;

Whereas approximately fifty thousand children who have special needs—school age, in sibling groups, members of minorities, or children with physical, mental, and emotional handicaps—are now in foster care or institutions financed at public expense and are legally free for adoption;

Whereas the adoption by capable parents of these institutionalized or foster care children into permanent, adoptive homes would insure the opportunity for their continue happiness and long-range well-being;

Whereas public and private barriers inhibiting the placement of these special needs children must be reviewed and removed where possible to assure these children's adoption;

Whereas the public and prospective parents must be informed of the availability of adoptive children;

Whereas a variety of media, agencies, adoptive parent and advocacy groups, civic and church groups, businesses, and industries will feature publicity and information to heighten community awareness of the crucial needs of waiting children; and

Whereas the recognition of Thanksgiving week as "National Adoption Week" is in the best interest of adoptable children and the public in general: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week of November 21, 1988, through November 27, 1988, hereby is designated "National Adoption Week", and the President of the United States is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe such week with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

By Mr. BYRD:

S.J. Res. 373. Joint resolution to designate the week beginning November 13, 1988, as "National Craniofacial Deformity Awareness Week;" to the Committee on the Judiciary.

NATIONAL CRANIOFACIAL DEFORMITY AWARENESS WEEK

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the joint resolution I am introducing today will designate the week of November 13-19, 1988, as "National Craniofacial Deformity Awareness Week."

There are estimated to be as many as 200,000 victims of craniofacial deformities under 5 years of age. This deformity is caused by many different factors—such as medications taken by the mother in early pregnancy, or abnormal genes or chromosomes. However, in many instances, the reason for malformation is unknown.

Many families are unaware that effective treatment is available for these children. I hope that, with the introduction of this joint resolution we can focus the public's attention on the thousands of children who suffer from the physical and emotional trauma brought on by craniofacial deformities.

The designation of the week of November 13, 1988, as "National Craniofacial Deformity Awareness Week" will aid the efforts of organizations, such as the National Craniofacial Deformities Foundation, to help individuals, many of whom have believed they were outcasts of society, to live normal and productive lives.

I ask my colleagues to join me in cosponsoring this joint resolution, and I ask unanimous consent that the text of the joint resolution be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the joint resolution was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

S.J. Res. 373

Whereas as many as 200,000 children of less than 5 years of age suffer from severe craniofacial deformity;

Whereas individuals who suffer from craniofacial deformity, including children and adults, are too often forced to live secluded lives, hidden from society;

Whereas individuals who suffer from craniofacial deformity and their families experience severe emotional and behavioral difficulties;

Whereas the National Craniofacial Foundation was created in 1982 to fund programs for research and education regarding craniofacial deformity and treatment of individuals who suffer from craniofacial deformity;

Whereas the National Craniofacial Foundation has funded surgical and nonsurgical treatment for more than 2,000 patients from 30 States and 12 countries; and

Whereas the National Craniofacial Foundation has begun to aggressively seek out individuals who can be aided by the services of the Foundation; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week beginning November 13, 1988, is designated as "National Craniofacial Deformity Awareness Week", and the President of the United States is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe the week with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED

TEXTILE AND APPAREL TRADE ACT OF 1988

ADAMS AMENDMENT NOS. 2889 AND 2990

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. ADAMS submitted two amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2662) to remedy injury to the U.S. textile and apparel industries caused by increased imports; as follows:

Amendment No. 2889

At the end insert the following: Notwithstanding any provision of this Act, no program herein authorized for the issuance and sale to United States companies at public auction of import licenses applicable to categories of textiles and categories of textile products shall take effect.

Amendment No. 2890

At the end insert the following: Notwithstanding any provision of this Act, no system of quota auctions related to the textile or apparel industries herein authorized shall take effect.

PACKWOOD AMENDMENT NOS. 2891 THROUGH 2894

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. PACKWOOD submitted four amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 2662, supra; as follows:

Amendment No. 2891

At the appropriate place add the following: Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the limitations imposed by this Act on the aggregate quantity of textiles and textile products that may be entered in any calendar year shall not apply if the Secretary of Commerce, under this existing authority, determines, based on information that the Secretary may require to be submitted (on a confidential basis and in such form and at such time as the Secretary may prescribe) by firms that manufacture in the United States, that the average return on assets of firms in the United States that manufacture textiles, or of firms in the United States that manufacture textile products, for the calendar year preceding such calendar year exceeds the national average return on assets of all manufacturing industries in the United States for the calendar year preceding such calendar year.

Amendment No. 2892

At the appropriate place add the following: Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the provisions of this Act (other than this section) shall not apply if the President, under his existing authority, determines that the provisions of this Act violate the international obligations of the United States.

Amendment No. 2893

At the appropriate place add the following: Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, any provision of this Act (other than an amendment made by this Act to another Act) which imposes a limitation on the quantity of footwear that may be entered, shall not apply with respect to athletic footwear.

Amendment No. 2894

At the appropriate place add the following: (4) The Secretary of Commerce, under his existing authority, may require firms that manufacture in the United States to submit to the Secretary of Commerce, on a confidential basis and in such form and at such time as the Secretary of Commerce may prescribe, such information as may be necessary to enable the Secretary of Commerce to make determinations under paragraph (3).

BOSCHWITZ AMENDMENT NO. 2895

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. BOSCHWITZ submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 2662, supra; as follows:

At the end of the matter proposed to be inserted, add the following:

Sec. . (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, any limitation imposed by this Act on the quantity of any article that may be entered, or withdrawn from warehouse for consumption, in the customs territory of the United States shall apply only if the President, within the existing authority of the President, certifies to the Congress under subsection (b)(2) that—

(1) the aggregate quantity of worldwide agricultural exports of the United States would not be reduced by any amount as a result of such limitation, and

(2) the aggregate quantity of agricultural exports of the United States to each foreign country or territory whose products are subject to such limitation would not be reduced by any amount as a result of such limitation.

(b) The President shall—

(1) determine—

(A) whether the aggregate quantity of worldwide agricultural exports of the United States would be reduced by any amount as a result of the limitation described in subsection (a), and

(B) whether the aggregate quantity of agricultural exports of the United States to each foreign country or territory whose products are subject to such limitation would be reduced by any amount as a result of such limitation, and

(2) certify such determination to the Congress, by no later than the date that is 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

GRAHAM AMENDMENT NO. 2896

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. GRAHAM submitted the following amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill, S. 2662, supra; as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted, insert the following:

Sec. . (a) The Senate finds that—

(1) the Caribbean and Central American countries historically have had close economic, political, and cultural ties to the United States;

(2) promoting Caribbean and Central American prosperity is in the economic and security interests of the United States;

(3) the Congress and the President proposed and enacted the Caribbean Basin Initiative as a key means of promoting regional prosperity;

(4) the Caribbean and Central American countries view the Caribbean Basin Initiative as a test of the long-term commitment of the United States to the economic prosperity of the region;

(5) the Caribbean Basin Initiative is not expected to have any significant effect on the overall United States economy, according to the United States International Trade Commission; and

(6) the Caribbean Basin Initiative represents an important opportunity for mutual economic benefit for the United States and the Caribbean and Central American countries.

(b) It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the integrity of the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act should be preserved,

(2) to the extent that Congress imposes worldwide quotas on textiles and footwear items to protect industry in the United States, the President should encourage and promote the economic prosperity of the Caribbean and Central American countries by ensuring that the allocation of the quotas is favorable to Caribbean and Central American countries and is not unduly restrictive or punitive,

(3) the quotas imposed by this Act should not discriminate against imports from Caribbean and Central American countries in relation to imports from other trading partners of the United States,

(4) the United States should maintain the commitment made by the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act to the countries of the Western Hemisphere, which is in the economic and security interests of the United States, and

(5) the Congress and the President, should cooperate to act in an expeditious manner in their deliberations on the enactment of the reauthorization of the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act, reaffirming our commitment to the economic development and prosperity of the Caribbean and Central American countries.

(4) Subsection (d) of section 251 of the Reform Act is amended by striking out paragraph (6) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(6) Expensing of rehabilitation expenses for the Frankford Arsenal.—In the case of any expenditures paid or incurred in connection with improvements (including repairs and maintenance) of the Frankford Arsenal pursuant to a contract and partnership agreement during the 8-year period specified in the contract or agreement, all such expenditures to be made during the period 1986 through and including 1993 shall—

"(A) be treated as made (and allowable as a deduction) during 1986,

"(B) be treated as qualified rehabilitation expenditures made during 1986, and

"(C) be allocated in accordance with the partnership agreement regardless of when the interest in the partnership was acquired, except that—

"(i) if the taxpayer is not the original holder of such interest, no person (other than the taxpayer) had claimed any benefits by reason of this paragraph,

"(ii) no interest under section 6611 of the 1986 Code on any refund of income taxes which is solely attributable to this paragraph shall be paid for the period—

"(I) beginning on the date which is 45 days after the later of April 15, 1987, or the date on which the return for such taxes was filed, and

"(II) ending on the date the taxpayer acquired the interest in the partnership, and

"(iii) if the expenditures to be made under this provision are not paid or incurred before January 1, 1994, then the tax imposed by chapter 1 of such Code for the taxpayer's last taxable year beginning in 1993 shall be increased by the amount of the tax benefits by reason of this paragraph which are attributable to the expenditures not so paid or incurred.

"(7) Special rule.—In the case of the rehabilitation of the Willard Hotel in Washington, D.C., section 205(c)(1)(B)(ii) of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 shall be applied by substituting '1987' for '1986'."

(5) Subparagraph (B) of section 251(d)(3) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "Pontabla" and inserting in lieu thereof "Pontalba".

(6) Subparagraph (T) of section 251(d)(4) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "Louisville" and inserting in lieu thereof "Covington".

(l) Amendments Related to Section 252 of the Reform Act.—

(1)(A) Subparagraph (A) of section 42(b)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "for the month" and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof "for the earlier of—

"(i) the month in which such building is placed in service, or

"(ii) at the election of the taxpayer—

"(I) the month in which the taxpayer and the housing credit agency enter into an agreement with respect to such building (which is binding on such agency, the taxpayer, and all successors in interest) as to the housing credit dollar amount to be allocated to such building, or

"(II) in the case of any building to which subsection (h)(4)(B) applies, the month in which the tax-exempt obligations are issued.

A month may be elected under clause (ii) only if the election is made not later than the 5th day after the close of such month. Such an election, once made, shall be irrevocable."

(B) Clause (ii) of section 42(b)(2)(C) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "the month in which the building was placed in service" and inserting in lieu thereof "the month applicable under clause (i) or (ii) of subparagraph (A)".

(2)(A) Subparagraph (A) of section 42(c)(2) of the 1986 Code (defining qualified low-income building) is amended to read as follows:

"(A) which is part of a qualified low-income housing project at all times during the period—

"(i) beginning on the 1st day in the compliance period on which such building is part of such a project, and "(ii) ending on the last day of the compliance period with respect to such building, and".

(B) Paragraph (1) of section 42(f) of the 1986 Code (defining credit period) is amended by striking out "beginning with" and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof "beginning with—

"(A) the taxable year in which the building is placed in service, or

"(B) at the election of the taxpayer, the succeeding taxable year, but only if the building is a qualified low-income building as of the close of the 1st year of such period. The election under subparagraph (B), once made, shall be irrevocable."

(3) Clause (ii) of section 42(d)(2)(D) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(ii) SPECIAL RULES FOR CERTAIN TRANSFERS.—For purposes of determining under subparagraph (B)(ii) when a building was last placed in service, there shall not be taken into account any placement in service—

"(I) in connection with the acquisition of the building in a transaction in which the basis of the building in the hands of the person acquiring it is determined in whole or in part by reference to the adjusted basis of such building in the hands of the person from whom acquired,

"(II) by a person whose basis in such building is determined under section 1014(a) (relating to property acquired from a decedent),

"(III) by any governmental unit or qualified nonprofit organization (as defined in subsection (h)(5)) if the requirements of subparagraph (B)(ii) are met with respect to the placement in service by such unit or organization and all the income from such property is exempt from Federal income taxation, or

"(IV) by any person who acquired such building by foreclosure (or by instrument in lieu of foreclosure) of any purchase-money security interest held by such person if the requirements of subparagraph (B)(ii) are met with respect to the placement in service by such person and such building is resold within 12 months after the date such building is placed in service by such person after such foreclosure."

(4) Paragraph (3) of section 42(d) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(3) ELIGIBLE BASIS REDUCED WHERE DISPROPORTIONATE STANDARDS FOR UNITS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the eligible basis of any building shall be reduced by an amount equal to the portion of the adjusted basis of the building which is attributable to residential rental units in the building which are not low-income units and which are above the average quality standard of the low-income units in the building.

"(B) EXCEPTION WHERE TAXPAYER ELECTS TO EXCLUDE EXCESS COSTS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply with respect to a residential rental unit in a building which is not a low-income unit if—

"(I) the excess described in clause (ii) with respect to such unit is not greater than 15 percent of the cost described in clause (ii)(II), and

"(II) the taxpayer elects to exclude from the eligible basis of such building the excess described in clause (ii) with respect to such unit.

"(ii) EXCESS.—The excess described in this clause with respect to any unit is the excess of—

"(I) the cost of such unit, over

"(II) the amount which would be the cost of such unit if the average cost per square foot of low-income units in the building were substituted for the cost per square foot of such unit.

The Secretary may by regulation provide for the determination of the excess under this clause on a basis other than square foot costs."

(5) Subparagraph (A) of section 42(d)(5) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting before the period "(increased, in the case of an existing building which meets the requirements of paragraph (2)(B), by the amounts described in paragraph (2)(A)(i)(II))".

(6)(A) Paragraph (5) of section 42(d) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) ELIGIBLE BASIS NOT TO INCLUDE EXPENDITURES WHERE 167(k) ELECTED.—The eligible basis of any building shall not include any portion of its adjusted basis which is attributable to amounts with respect to which an election is made under section 167(k)."

(B) Subparagraph (A) of section 42(d)(5) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "subparagraph (B)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subparagraphs (B) and (C)".

(7) Subparagraph (A) of section 42(d)(6) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting "or" at the end of clause (i), by striking out ", or" at the end of clause (ii) and inserting in lieu thereof a period, and by striking out clause (iii).

(8) Clause (ii) of section 42(d)(6)(B) of the 1986 Code (defining federally assisted building) is amended by striking out "of 1934".

(9)(A) Paragraph (3) of section 42(f) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(3) DETERMINATION OF APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE WITH RESPECT TO INCREASES IN QUALIFIED BASIS AFTER 1ST YEAR OF CREDIT PERIOD.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any building which was a qualified low-income building as of the close of the 1st year of the credit period, if—

"(i) as of the close of any taxable year in the compliance period (after the 1st year of the credit period) the qualified basis of such building exceeds

"(ii) the qualified basis of such building as of the close of the 1st year of the credit period, the applicable percentage which shall apply under subsection (a) for the taxable year to such excess shall be the percentage equal to ⅔ of the applicable percentage which (after the application of subsection (h)) would but for this paragraph apply to such basis.

"(B) 1ST YEAR COMPUTATION APPLIES.—A rule similar to the rule of paragraph (2)(A) shall apply to any increase in qualified basis to which subparagraph (A) applies for the 1st year of such increase."

(B) Paragraph (3) of section 42(b) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(3) CROSS REFERENCES.—

"(A) For treatment of certain rehabilitation expenditures as separate new buildings, see subsection (e).

"(B) For determination of applicable percentage for increases in qualified basis after the 1st year of the credit period, see subsection (f)(3).

"(C) For authority of housing credit agency to limit applicable percentage and qualified basis which may be taken into account under this section with respect to any building, see subsection (h)(6)."

(10) Subparagraph (B) of section 42(g)(2) of the 1986 Code (defining gross rent) is amended by striking out "Federal rental assistance" and inserting in lieu thereof "rental assistance".

(11) Paragraph (2) of section 42(g) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) UNITS WHERE FEDERAL RENTAL ASSISTANCE IS REDUCED AS TENANT'S INCOME INCREASES.—If the gross rent with respect to a residential unit exceeds the limitation under subparagraph (A) by reason of the fact that the income of the occupants thereof exceeds the income limitation applicable under paragraph (1), such unit shall, nevertheless, be treated as a rent-restricted unit for purposes of paragraph (1) if—

"(i) a Federal rental assistance payment described in subparagraph (B)(i) is made with respect to such unit or its occupants, and

"(ii) the sum of such payment and the gross rent with respect to such unit does not exceed the sum of the amount of such payment which would be made and the gross rent which would be payable with respect to such unit if—

"(I) the income of the occupants thereof did not exceed the income limitation applicable under paragraph (1), and

"(II) such units were rent-restricted within the meaning of subparagraph (A).

The preceding sentence shall apply to any unit only if the result described in clause (ii) is required by Federal statute as of the date of the enactment of this subparagraph and as of the date the Federal rental assistance payment is made."

(12) Paragraph (3) of section 42(g) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(3) DATE FOR MEETING REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, a building shall be treated as a qualified low-income building only if the project (of which such building is a part) meets the requirements of paragraph (1) not later than the close of the 12-month period beginning on the date the building is placed in service.

"(B) BUILDINGS WHICH RELY ON LATER BUILDINGS FOR QUALIFICATION.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—In determining whether a building (hereinafter in this subparagraph referred to as the 'prior building') is a qualified low-income building, the taxpayer may take into account 1 or more additional buildings placed in service during the 12-month period described in subparagraph (A) with respect to the prior building only if the taxpayer elects to apply clause (ii) with respect to each additional building taken into account.

"(ii) TREATMENT OF ELECTED BUILDINGS.—In the case of a building which the taxpayer elects to take into account under clause (i), the period under subparagraph (A) for such building shall end at the close of the 12-month period applicable to the prior building.

"(iii) DATE PRIOR BUILDING IS TREATED AS PLACED IN SERVICE.—For purposes of determining the credit period and the compliance period for the prior building, the prior building shall be treated for purposes of this section as placed in service on the most recent date any additional building elected by the taxpayer (with respect to such prior building) was placed in service.

"(C) SPECIAL RULE.—A building—

"(i) other than the 1st building placed in service as part of a project, and

"(ii) other than a building which is placed in service during the 12-month period described in subparagraph (A) with respect to a prior building which becomes a qualified low-income building, shall in no event be treated as a qualified low-income building unless the project is a qualified low-income housing project (without regard to such building) on the date such building is placed in service."

(13) Paragraph (4) of section 42(g) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting before the period "; except that, in applying such provisions (other than section 142(d)(4)(B)(iii)) for such purposes, the term 'gross rent' shall have the meaning given such term by paragraph (2)(B) of this subsection".

(14)(A) Paragraph (1) of section 42(h) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(1) CREDIT MAY NOT EXCEED CREDIT AMOUNT ALLOCATED TO BUILDING.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The amount of the credit determined under this section for any taxable year with respect to any building shall not exceed the housing credit dollar amount allocated to such building under this subsection.

"(B) TIME FOR MAKING ALLOCATION.—Except in the case of an allocation which meets the requirements of subparagraph (C) or (D), an allocation shall be taken into account under subparagraph (A) only if it is made not later than the close of the calendar year in which the building is placed in service.

"(C) EXCEPTION WHERE BINDING COMMITMENT.—An allocation meets the requirements of this subparagraph if there is a binding commitment (not later than the close of the calendar year in which the building is placed in service) by the housing credit agency to allocate a specified housing credit dollar amount to such building beginning in a specified later taxable year.

"(D) EXCEPTION WHERE INCREASE IN QUALIFIED BASIS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—An allocation meets the requirements of this subparagraph if such allocation is made not later than the close of the calendar year in which ends the taxable year to which it will 1st apply but only to the extent the amount of such allocation does not exceed the limitation under clause (ii).

"(ii) LIMITATION.—The limitation under this clause is the amount of credit allowable under this section (without regard to this subsection) for a taxable year with respect to an increase in the qualified basis of the building equal to the excess of—

"(I) the qualified basis of such building as of the close of the 1st taxable year to which such allocation will apply, over

"(II) the qualified basis of such building as of the close of the 1st taxable year to which the most recent prior housing credit allocation with respect to such building applied.

"(iii) HOUSING CREDIT DOLLAR AMOUNT REDUCED BY FULL ALLOCATION.—Notwithstanding clause (i), the full amount of the allocation shall be taken into account under paragraph (2)."

(B) Clause (ii) of section 42(h)(6)(B) of the 1986 Code is hereby repealed.

(15) Subparagraph (A) of section 42(h)(4) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "financed" and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof "financed by any obligation the interest on which is exempt from tax under section 103 if—

"(i) such obligation is taken into account under section 146, and

"(ii) principal payments on such financing are applied within a reasonable period to redeem obligations the proceeds of which were used to provide such financing."

(16) Paragraph (5) of section 42(h) of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating subparagraph (D) as subparagraph (E) and by inserting after subparagraph (C) the following new subparagraph:

"(D) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN SUBSIDIARIES.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this paragraph, a qualified nonprofit organization shall be treated as satisfying the material participation test of subparagraph (B) if any qualified corporation in which such organization holds stock satisfies such test.

"(ii) QUALIFIED CORPORATION.—For purposes of clause (ii), the term 'qualified corporation' means any corporation if 100 percent of the stock of such corporation is held by 1 or more qualified nonprofit organizations at all times during the period such corporation is in existence."

(17)(A) Subparagraph (B) of section 42(h)(6) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding after clause (i) the following new clause:

"(ii) CARRYFORWARD WHERE SECRETARY DETERMINES UNFORESEEN DELAY IN PLACING BUILDING IN SERVICE.—A housing credit dollar amount which was allocated to a building for a calendar year after 1987 may be carried forward to the succeeding calendar year for such building if—

"(I) it was reasonable to believe that such building would be placed in service during the earlier calendar year but was not solely because of unforeseen conditions which, as determined by the Secretary, were not within the control of the taxpayer, and

"(II) such building is placed in service during such succeeding calendar year."

(B) Clause (i) of section 42(h)(6)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "The portion" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in clause (ii), the portion".

(18) Subparagraph (D) of section 42(h)(6) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(D) CREDIT REDUCED IF ALLOCATED CREDIT DOLLAR AMOUNT IS LESS THAN CREDIT WHICH WOULD BE ALLOWABLE WITHOUT REGARD TO PLACED IN SERVICE CONVENTION, ETC.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The amount of the credit determined under this section with respect to any building shall not exceed the clause (ii) percentage of the amount of the credit which would (but for this subparagraph) be determined under this section with respect to such building.

"(ii) DETERMINATION OF PERCENTAGE.—For purposes of clause (i), the clause (ii) percentage with respect to any building is the percentage which—

"(I) the housing credit dollar amount allocated to such building bears to

"(II) the credit amount determined in accordance with clause (iii).

"(iii) DETERMINATION OF CREDIT AMOUNT.—The credit amount determined in accordance with this clause is the amount of the credit which would (but for this subparagraph) be determined under this section with respect to the building if—

"(I) this section were applied without regard to paragraphs (2)(A) and (3)(B) of subsection (f), and

"(II) subsection (f)(3)(A) were applied without regard to 'the percentage equal to ⅔ of'."

(19) Paragraph (6) of section 42(h) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(E) HOUSING CREDIT AGENCY TO SPECIFY APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE AND MAXIMUM QUALIFIED BASIS.—In allocating a housing credit dollar amount to any building, the housing credit agency shall specify the applicable percentage and the maximum qualified basis which may be taken into account under this section with respect to such building. The applicable percentage and maximum qualified basis so specified shall not exceed the applicable percentage and qualified basis determined under this section without regard to this subsection."

(20)(A) Subparagraph (A) of section 42(i)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(i) by inserting "or any prior taxable year" after "such taxable year",

(ii) by striking out "there is outstanding" and inserting in lieu thereof "there is or was outstanding", and

(iii) by striking out "are used" and inserting in lieu thereof "are or were used".

(B) Subparagraph (B) of section 42(i)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(B) ELECTION TO REDUCE ELIGIBLE BASIS BY BALANCE OF LOAN OR PROCEEDS OF OBLIGATIONS.—A loan or tax-exempt obligation shall not be taken into account under subparagraph (A) if the taxpayer elects to exclude from the eligible basis of the building for purposes of subsection (d)—

"(i) in the case of a loan, the principal amount of such loan, and

"(ii) in the case of a tax-exempt obligation, the proceeds of such obligation."

(C) Paragraph (2) of section 42(i) of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (D) and by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

"(C) SPECIAL RULE FOR SUBSIDIZED CONSTRUCTION FINANCING.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any tax-exempt obligation or below market Federal loan used to provide construction financing for any building if—

"(i) such obligation or loan (when issued or made) identified the building for which the proceeds of such obligation or loan would be used, and

"(ii) such obligation is redeemed, and such loan is repaid, before such building is placed in service."

(D) Subparagraph (D) of section 42(i)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "subparagraph (A)" and inserting in lieu thereof "this paragraph".

(21) Paragraph (4) of section 42(j) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(F) NO RECAPTURE WHERE DE MINIMIS CHANGES IN FLOOR SPACE.—The Secretary may provide that the increase in tax under this subsection shall not apply with respect to any building if—

"(i) such increase results from a de minimis change in the floor space fraction under subsection (c)(1), and

"(ii) the building is a qualified low-income building after such change."

(22) Clause (i) of section 42(j)(5)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(i) more than ½ the capital interests, and more than ½ the profit interests, in which are owned by a group of 35 or more partners each of whom is a natural person or an estate, and".

(23) Paragraph (6) of section 42(j) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by inserting "(OR INTEREST THEREIN)" after "BUILDING" in the heading, and

(B) by inserting "or an interest therein" after "disposition of a building" in the text.

(24) Subparagraph (B) of section 42(k)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof the following: ", except that this subparagraph shall not apply in the case of a federally assisted building described in subsection (d)(6)(B) if—

"(i) a security interest in such building is not permitted by a Federal agency holding or insuring the mortgage secured by such building, and

"(ii) the proceeds from the financing (if any) are applied to acquire or improve such building."

(25)(A) Subsection (l) of section 42 of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating paragraph (2) as paragraph (3) and by inserting after paragraph (1) the following new paragraph:

"(2) ANNUAL REPORTS TO THE SECRETARY.—The Secretary may require taxpayers to submit an information return (at such time and in such form and manner as the Secretary prescribes) for each taxable year setting forth—

"(A) the qualified basis for the taxable year of each qualified low-income building of the taxpayer,

"(B) the information described in paragraph (1)(C) for the taxable year, and

"(C) such other information as the Secretary may require.

The penalty under section 6652(j) shall apply to any failure to submit the return required by the Secretary under the preceding sentence on the date prescribed therefor."

(B) The subsection heading of subsection (l) of section 42 is amended to read as follows:

"(l) CERTIFICATIONS AND OTHER REPORTS TO SECRETARY.—".

(26) Paragraph (1) of section 42(n) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof the following: ", and, except for any building described in paragraph (2)(B), subsection (h)(4) shall not apply to any building placed in service after 1989".

(27) Subsection (d) of section 39 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) NO CARRYBACK OF LOW-INCOME HOUSING CREDIT BEFORE 1987.—No portion of the unused business credit for any taxable year which is attributable to the credit determined under section 42 (relating to low-income housing credit) may be carried back to a taxable year ending before January 1, 1987."

(28) Paragraph (1) of section 55(c) of the 1986 Code (defining regular tax) is amended by striking out "section 42(j)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (j) or (k) of section 42".

(29) Subparagraph (A) of section 252(f)(1) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "and" at the end of clause (i), by striking out the period at the end of clause (ii) and inserting in lieu thereof a comma, and by inserting after clause (ii) the following new clauses:

"(iii) the eligible basis of such building shall be treated, for purposes of section 42(h)(4)(A) of such Code, as if it were financed by an obligation the interest on which is exempt from tax under section 103 of such Code and which is taken into account under section 146 of such Code, and

"(iv) the amendments made by section 803 shall not apply."

(30) Subparagraph (E) of section 252(f)(1) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "maximum annual additional credit" and inserting in lieu thereof "maximum present value of additional credits".

(31) Subparagraph (E) of section 252(f)(2) of the Reform Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The preceding sentence shall apply to any building only to the extent of the portion of the additional housing credit dollar amount (allocated to such agency under subparagraph (A)) allocated to such building."

(32) Subsection (f) of section 252 of the Reform Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) TRANSITIONAL RULE.—In the case of any rehabilitation expenditures incurred with respect to units located in the neighborhood strategy area within the community development block grant program in Ft. Wayne, Indiana—

"(A) the amendments made by this section shall not apply, and

"(B) paragraph (1) of section 167(k) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, shall be applied as if it did not contain the phrase 'and before January 1, 1987'.

The number of units to which the preceding sentence applies shall not exceed 150."

(33) Subsection (g) of section 42 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) SPECIAL RULE WHERE DE MINIMIS EQUITY CONTRIBUTION.—Property shall not be treated as failing to be residential rental property for purposes of this section merely because the occupant of a residential unit in the project pays (on a voluntary basis) to the lessor a de minimis amount to be held toward the purchase by such occupant of a residential unit in such project if—

"(A) all amounts so paid are refunded to the occupant on the cessation of his occupancy of a unit in the project, and

"(B) the purchase of the unit is not permitted until after the close of the compliance period with respect to the building in which the unit is located.

Any amount paid to the lessor as described in the preceding sentence shall be included in gross rent under paragraph (2) for purposes of determining whether the unit is rent-restricted."

(m) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 261 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subparagraph (A) of section 7518(g)(6) of the 1986 Code, is amended by striking out "section 1(i)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 1(j)".

(2) Paragraph (1) of section 3402(m) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "section 62) (other than paragraph (13) thereof)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 62(a) (other than paragraph (10) thereof))".

(b) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 302 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Section 302 of the Reform Act is amended by striking out subsection (c).

(2)(A) Paragraph (2) of section 904(b) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(2) CAPITAL GAINS.—For purposes of this section—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Taxable income from sources outside the United States shall include gain from the sale or exchange of capital assets only to the extent of foreign source capital gain net income.

"(B) SPECIAL RULES WHERE CAPITAL GAIN RATE DIFFERENTIAL.—In the case of any taxable year for which there is a capital gain rate differential—

"(i) in lieu of applying subparagraph (A), the taxable income from sources outside the United States shall include gain from the sale or exchange of capital assets only in an amount equal to foreign source capital gain net income reduced by the rate differential portion of foreign source net capital gain,

"(ii) the entire taxable income shall include gain from the sale or exchange of capital assets only in an amount equal to capital gain net income reduced by the rate differential portion of net capital gain, and

"(iii) for purposes of determining taxable income from sources outside the United States, any net capital loss (and any amount which is a short-term capital loss under section 1212(a)) from sources outside the United States to the extent taken into account in determining capital gain net income for the taxable year shall be reduced by an amount equal to the rate differential portion of the excess of net capital gain from sources within the United States over net capital gain."

(B) Paragraph (3) of section 904(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out subparagraph (D) and inserting in lieu thereof the following new subparagraphs:

"(D) CAPITAL GAIN RATE DIFFERENTIAL.—There is a capital gain rate differential for any taxable year if—

"(i) in the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, subsection (j) of section 1 applies to such taxable year, or

"(ii) in the case of a corporation, any rate of tax imposed by section 11, 511, or 831 (a) or (b) (whichever applies) exceeds the alternative rate of tax under section 1201(a) (determined without regard to the last sentence of section 11(b)).

"(E) RATE DIFFERENTIAL PORTION.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The rate differential portion of foreign source net capital gain, net capital gain, or the excess of net capital gain from sources within the United States over net capital gain, as the case may be, is the same proportion of such amount as—

"(I) the excess of the highest applicable tax rate over the alternative tax rate, bears to

"(II) the highest applicable tax rate.

"(ii) HIGHEST APPLICABLE TAX RATE.—For purposes of clause (i), the term 'highest applicable tax rate' means—

"(I) in the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, the highest rate of tax set forth in subsection (a), (b), (c), (d), or (e) of section 1 (whichever applies), or

"(II) in the case of a corporation, the highest rate of tax specified in section 11(b).

"(iii) ALTERNATIVE TAX RATE.—For purposes of clause (i), the term 'alternative tax rate' means—

"(I) in the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, the alternative rate of tax determined under section 1(j), or

"(II) in the case of a corporation, the alternative rate of tax under section 1201(a)."

(3) Effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1987, paragraph (1) of section 1445(e) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "34 percent" and inserting in lieu thereof "34 percent (or, to the extent provided in regulations, 28 percent)".

(c) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 311 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subsection (a) of section 1201 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "831(a)" and inserting in lieu thereof "831 (a) or (b)".

(2) Subsection (c) of section 311 of the Reform Act is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof the following: "; except that the amendment made by subsection (b)(4) shall apply to payments made after December 31, 1986".

(3) Subparagraph (D) of section 593(b)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "and" at the end of clause (iii), by striking out the period at the end of clause (iv) and inserting in lieu thereof ", and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(v) if there is a capital gain rate differential (as defined in section 904(b)(3)(D)) for the taxable year, by excluding from gross income the rate differential portion (within the meaning of section 904(b)(3)(E)) of the lesser of—

"(I) the net long-term capital gain for the taxable year, or

"(II) the net long-term capital gain for the taxable year from the sale or exchange of property other than property described in clause (iii)."

(d) Amendment Related to Section 321 of the Reform Act.—

(1)(A) Subsection (b) of section 422A of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"Such term shall not include any option if (as of the time the option is granted) the terms of such option provide that it will not be treated as an incentive stock option."

(B) In the case of an option granted after December 31, 1986, and on or before the date of the enactment of this Act, such option shall not be treated as an incentive stock option if the terms of such option are amended before the date 90 days after such date of enactment to provide that such option will not be treated as an incentive stock option.

(2)(A) Section 422A of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) $100,000 Per Year Limitation.—

"(1) In general.—To the extent that the aggregate fair market value of stock with respect to which incentive stock options (determined without regard to this subsection) are exercisable for the 1st time by any individual during any calendar year (under all plans of the individual's employer corporation and its parent and subsidiary corporations) exceeds $100,000, such options shall be treated as options which are not incentive stock options.

"(2) Ordering rule.—Paragraph (1) shall be applied by taking options into account in the order in which they were granted.

"(3) Determination of fair market value.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the fair market value of any stock shall be determined as of the time the option with respect to such stock is granted."

(B) Subsection (b) of section 422A of the 1986 Code is amended by adding "and" at the end of paragraph (5), by striking out "; and" at the end of paragraph (6) and inserting in lieu thereof a period, and by striking out paragraph (7).

(C) Paragraph (1) of section 422A(c) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "paragraph (7) of subsection (b)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (d)".

SEC. 104. AMENDMENTS RELATED TO TITLE IV OF THE REFORM ACT.

(a) Amendments Related to Section 405 of the Reform Act.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 108(a) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "or" at the end of subparagraph (A), by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof ", or" and by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) the indebtedness discharged is qualified farm indebtedness."

(2) Paragraph (2) of section 108(a) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(2) Coordination of exclusions.—

"(A) Title 11 exclusion takes precedence.—Subparagraphs (B) and (C) of paragraph (1) shall not apply to a discharge which occurs in a title 11 case.

"(B) Insolvency exclusion takes precedence over qualified farm exclusion.—Subparagraph (C) of paragraph (1) shall not apply to a discharge to the extent the taxpayer is insolvent."

(3) Subsection (b) of section 108 of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "subparagraph (A) or (B)" in paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof "subparagraph (A), (B), or (C)", and

(B) by striking out "In Title 11 Case or Insolvency" in the subsection heading.

(4) Subsection (g) of section 108 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(g) Special Rules for Discharge of Qualified Farm Indebtedness.—

"(1) Discharge must be by qualified person.—

"(A) In general.—Subparagraph (C) of subsection (a)(1) shall apply only if the discharge is by a qualified person.

"(B) Qualified person.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'qualified person' has the meaning given to such term by section 46(c)(8)(D)(iv); except that such term shall include any Federal, State, or local government or agency or instrumentality thereof.

"(2) Qualified farm indebtedness.—For purposes of this section, indebtedness of a taxpayer shall be treated as qualified farm indebtedness if—

"(A) such indebtedness was incurred directly in connection with the operation by the taxpayer of the trade or business of farming, and

"(B) 50 percent or more of the aggregate gross receipts of the taxpayer for the 3 taxable years preceding the taxable year in which the discharge of such indebtedness occurs is attributable to the trade or business of farming.

"(3) Amount excluded cannot exceed sum of tax attributes and business and investment assets.—

"(A) In general.—The amount excluded under subparagraph (C) of subsection (a)(1) shall not exceed the sum of—

"(i) the adjusted tax attributes of the taxpayer, and

"(ii) the aggregate adjusted bases of qualified property held by the taxpayer as of the beginning of the taxable year following the taxable year in which the discharge occurs.

"(B) Adjusted tax attributes.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'adjusted tax attributes' means the sum of the tax attributes described in subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (E) of subsection (b)(2) determined by taking into account $3 for each $1 of the attributes described in subparagraphs (B) and (E) of subsection (b)(2).

"(C) Qualified property.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified property' means any property which is used or is held for use in a trade or business or for the production of income.

"(D) Coordination with insolvency exclusion.—For purposes of this paragraph, the adjusted basis of any qualified property and the amount of the adjusted tax attributes shall be determined after any reduction under subsection (b) by reason of amounts excluded from gross income under subsection (a)(1)(B)."

(5) Paragraph (4) of section 1017(b) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(4) Special rules for qualified farm indebtedness.—

"(A) In general.—Any amount which under subsection (b)(2)(D) of section 108 is to be applied to reduce basis and which is attributable to an amount excluded under subsection (a)(1)(C) of section 108—

"(i) shall be applied only to reduce the basis of qualified property held by the taxpayer, and

"(ii) shall be applied to reduce the basis of qualified property in the following order:

"(I) First the basis of qualified property which is depreciable property.

"(II) Second the basis of qualified property which is land used or held for use in the trade or business of farming.

"(III) Then the basis of other qualified property.

"(B) Qualified property.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified property' has the meaning given to such term by section 108(g)(3)(C).

"(C) Certain rules made applicable.—Rules similar to the rules of subparagraph (C), (D), and (E) of paragraph (3) shall apply for purposes of this paragraph and section 108(g)."

(6)(A) Paragraphs (6) and (7) of section 108(d) of the 1986 Code are each amended by striking out "subsections (a) and (b)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsections (a), (b), and (g)".

(B) The subsection heading for section 108(d) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "Subsections (a), and (b)" and inserting in lieu thereof "Subsections (a), (b), and (g)".

(C) The headings for paragraphs (6) and (7)(A) of section 108(d) of the 1986 Code are each amended by striking out "Subsections (a) and (b)" and inserting in lieu thereof "Subsections (a), (b), and (g)".

(b) Amendment Related to Section 406 of the Reform Act.—Section 406 of the Reform Act is amended—

(1) by inserting "before October 1, 1987," after "from the sale", and

(2) by striking out "to the extent such gain" and all that follows down through the period at the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof "to the extent such gain is properly taken into account under the taxpayer's method of accounting during 1987.".

(c) Amendment Related to Section 413 of the Reform Act.—Subsection (a) of section 1254 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) Adjustment for amounts included in gross income under section 617(b)(1)(A).—The amount of the expenditures referred to in paragraph (1)(A)(i) shall be properly adjusted for amounts included in gross income under section 617(b)(1)(A)."

SEC. 105. AMENDMENTS RELATED TO TITLE V OF THE REFORM ACT.

(a) Amendments Related to Section 501 of the Reform Act.—

(1) Clause (ii) of section 469(e)(1)(A) of the 1986 Code (relating to certain income not treated as income from passive activity) is amended by inserting "not derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business which is" after "gain or loss".

(2)(A) Subparagraph (A) of section 469(g)(1) of the 1986 Code (relating to disposition of interests in passive activities in fully taxable transactions) is amended to read as follows:

"(A) In general.—If all gain or loss realized on such disposition is recognized, the excess of—

"(i) the sum of—

"(I) any loss from such activity for such taxable year (determined after application of subsection (b)), plus

"(II) any loss realized on such disposition, over

"(ii) net income or gain for such taxable year from all passive activities (determined without regard to losses described in clause (i)), shall be treated as a loss which is not from a passive activity."

(B) Subparagraph (C) of section 469(g)(1) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(C) INCOME FROM PRIOR YEARS.—To the extent provided in regulations, income or gain from the activity for preceding taxable years shall be taken into account under subparagraph (A)(ii) for the taxable year to the extent necessary to prevent the avoidance of this section."

(3) Subparagraph (A) of section 469(g)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "paragraph (1)" and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph (1)(A)"; and

(B) by striking out "such losses" the first place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "losses described in paragraph (1)(A)".

(4) Section 469(g)(3) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "realized (or to be realized)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(realized or to be realized", and

(B) by inserting a closing parenthesis after "completed".

(5) Paragraph (4) of section 469(h) of the 1986 Code (relating to certain closely held C corporations and personal service corporations) is amended by inserting "only" before "if".

(6) Paragraph (1) of section 469(i) of the 1986 Code (relating to $25,000 offset for rental real estate activities) is amended by striking out "in the taxable year in which such portion of such loss or credit arose" and inserting in lieu thereof "in such taxable year (and if any portion of such loss or credit arose in another taxable year, in such other taxable year)".

(7) Subparagraph (C) of section 469(i)(6) of the 1986 Code (relating to interest as a limited partner) is amended by striking out "No" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in regulations, no".

(8) Subparagraph (A) of section 469(j)(6) of the 1986 Code (relating to special rule for gifts) is amended by inserting "with respect to which a deduction has not been allowed by reason of subsection (a)" before ", and".

(9) Section 469(j) of the 1986 Code (relating to definitions and special rules) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(10) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 280A.—If a passive activity involves the use of a dwelling unit to which section 280A(c)(5) applies for any taxable year, any income, deduction, gain, or loss allocable to such use shall not be taken into account for purposes of this section for such taxable year.

"(11) AGGREGATION OF MEMBERS OF AFFILIATED GROUPS.—Except as provided in regulations, all members of an affiliated group which files a consolidated return shall be treated as 1 corporation."

(10) Section 501(c) of the Reform Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) INCOME FROM SALES OF PASSIVE ACTIVITIES IN TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING BEFORE JANUARY 1, 1987.—If—

"(A) gain is recognized in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, from a sale or exchange of an interest in an activity in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987, and

"(B) such gain would have been treated as gain from a passive activity had section 469 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as added by this section) been in effect for the taxable year in which the sale or exchange occurred and for all succeeding taxable years, then such gain shall be treated as gain from a passive activity for purposes of such section."

(11) Subsection (j) of section 469 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(12) SPECIAL RULE FOR DISTRIBUTIONS BY ESTATES OR TRUSTS.—If any interest in a passive activity is distributed by an estate or trust—

"(A) the basis of such interest immediately before such distribution shall be increased by the amount of any passive activity losses allocable to such interest, and

"(B) such losses shall not be allowable as a deduction for any taxable year."

(12) Subsection (m) of section 469 of the 1986 Code, as redesignated by section 10211 of the Revenue Act of 1987, is amended by striking all that precedes subparagraph (B) of paragraph (3) thereof and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(m) PHASE-IN OF DISALLOWANCE OF LOSSES AND CREDITS FOR INTEREST HELD BEFORE DATE OF ENACTMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any passive activity loss or passive activity credit for any taxable year beginning in calendar years 1987 through 1990, subsection (a) shall not apply to the applicable percentage of that portion of such loss (or such credit) which is attributable to pre-enactment interests.

"(2) APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE.—For purposes of this subsection, the applicable percentage shall be determined in accordance with the following table:

"In the case of taxable years beginning in:	The applicable percentage is:
1987	65
1988	40
1989	20
1990	10.

"(3) PORTION OF LOSS OR CREDIT ATTRIBUTABLE TO PRE-ENACTMENT INTERESTS.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The portion of the passive activity loss (or passive activity credit) for any taxable year which is attributable to preenactment interests is the lesser of—

"(i) the amount of the passive activity loss (or passive activity credit) which is disallowed for the taxable year under subsection (a) (without regard to this subsection), or

"(ii) the amount of the passive activity loss (or passive activity credit) which would be disallowed for the taxable year (without regard to this subsection and without regard to any amount allocable to an activity for the taxable year under subsection (b)) taking into account only pre-enactment interests."

(b) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 502 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subparagraph (A) of section 502(d)(1) of the Reform Act (defining qualified investor) is amended to read as follows:

"(A) if—

"(i) in the case of a project placed in service on or before August 16, 1986, such person held an interest in such project on August 16, 1986, and such person made his initial investment after December 31, 1983, or

"(ii) in the case of a project placed in service after August 16, 1986, such person made his initial investment after December 31, 1983, and such person held an interest in such project on December 31, 1986, and".

(2) Subsection (d) of section 502 of the Reform Act (defining qualified investor) is amended by adding after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

"(3) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN PARTNERSHIPS.—In the case of any property which is held by a partnership—

"(A) which placed such property in service on or after December 31, 1985, and before August 17, 1986, and continuously held such property through the close of the taxable year for which the determination is being made, and

"(B) which was not treated as a new partnership or as terminated at any time on or after the date on which such property was placed in service and through the close of the taxable year for which the determination is being made, paragraph (1)(A)(i) shall be applied by substituting 'December 31, 1988' for 'August 16, 1986' the 2nd place it appears."

(3) The subsection (d) of section 502 of the Reform Act which relates to special rules is redesignated as subsection (e).

(c) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 511 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subparagraph (A) of section 163(d)(3) of the 1986 Code (defining investment interest) is amended by striking out "incurred or continued to purchase or carry" and inserting in lieu thereof "properly allocable to".

(2) Subparagraph (B) of section 163(d)(4) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(B) INVESTMENT INCOME.—The term 'investment income' means the sum of—

"(i) gross income (other than gain taken into account under clause (ii)) from property held for investment, and

"(ii) any net gain attributable to the disposition of property held for investment."

(3) Subparagraph (A) of section 163(d)(6) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The amount of interest paid or accrued during any such taxable year which is disallowed under this subsection shall not exceed the sum of—

"(i) the amount which would be disallowed under this subsection if—

"(I) paragraph (1) were applied by substituting 'the sum of the ceiling amount and the net investment income' for 'the net investment income', and

"(II) paragraphs (4)(E) and (5)(A)(ii) did not apply, and

"(ii) the applicable percentage of the excess of—

"(I) the amount which (without regard to this paragraph) is not allowable as a deduction under this subsection for the taxable year, over

"(II) the amount described in clause (i).

The preceding sentence shall not apply to any interest treated as paid or accrued during the taxable year under paragraph (2)."

(4) Subparagraph (A) of section 163(h)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "incurred or continued in connection with the conduct of" and inserting in lieu thereof "properly allocable to".

(5) Subparagraph (C) of section 163(h)(3) of the 1986 Code (defining qualified residence interest) is amended to read as follows:

"(C) COST NOT LESS THAN BALANCE OF INDEBTEDNESS INCURRED ON OR BEFORE AUGUST 16, 1986.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The amount under subparagraph (B)(ii)(I) at any time after August 16, 1986, shall not be less than the outstanding principal amount (as of such time) of indebtedness—

"(I) which was incurred on or before August 16, 1986, and which was secured by the qualified residence on August 16, 1986, or

"(II) which is secured by the qualified residence and was incurred after August 16, 1986, to refinance indebtedness described in subclause (I) (or refinanced indebtedness meeting the requirements of this subclause) to the extent (immediately after the refinancing) the principal amount of the indebtedness resulting from the refinancing does not exceed the principal amount of the refinanced indebtedness (immediately before the refinancing).

"(ii) LIMITATION ON PERIOD OF REFINANCING.—Subclause (II) of clause (i) shall not apply to any indebtedness after—

"(I) the expiration of the term of the indebtedness described in clause (i)(I), or

"(II) if the principal of the indebtedness described in clause (i)(I) is not amortized over its term, the expiration of the term of the 1st refinancing of such indebtedness (or if earlier, the date which is 30 years after the date of such refinancing)."

(6)(A) The heading for section 163(h)(5) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(5) OTHER DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this subsection—".

(B) Paragraph (5) of section 163(h) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(i) by striking out "For purposes of this subsection—" in subparagraph (A), and

(ii) by striking out "For purposes of this paragraph, any" in subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof "Any".

(7) Clause (iii) of section 163(h)(5)(A) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "USED OR" in the heading thereof and by striking out "or use".

(8) Section 163(h)(5) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraphs:

"(C) UNENFORCEABLE SECURITY INTERESTS.—Indebtedness shall not fail to be treated as secured by any property solely because, under any applicable State or local homestead or other debtor protection law in effect on August 16, 1986, the security interest is ineffective or the enforceability of the security interest is restricted.

"(D) SPECIAL RULES FOR ESTATES AND TRUSTS.—For purposes of determining whether any interest paid or accrued by an estate or trust is qualified residence interest, any residence held by such estate or trust shall be treated as a qualified residence of such estate or trust if such estate or trust establishes that such residence is a qualified residence of a beneficiary who has a present interest in such estate or trust or an interest in the residuary of such estate or trust."

(9) Paragraph (6) of section 163(h) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "subsection" the 3rd place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph".

(10) Paragraph (2)(A) of section 511(d) of the Reform Act is amended to read as follows:

"(2)(A) Sections 467(c)(5) and 1255(b)(2) are each amended by striking out '163(d),'."

(11) If—

(A) any amount was disallowed as a deduction under section 163(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of the Reform Act),

(B) such amount would (but for this paragraph) be treated as investment interest paid or accrued by the taxpayer in the taxpayer's first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, and

(C) the taxpayer makes an election under this paragraph at such time and in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate shall prescribe, to the extent such amount is attributable to an activity subject to the limitations of section 469 of the 1986 Code, such amount shall not be treated as investment interest but shall be treated as a deduction allocable to such activity for such first taxable year. Subsection (m) of section 469 of the 1986 Code and section 501(c)(2) of the Reform Act shall not apply to any amount so treated.

(12) Subparagraph (E) of section 163(h)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting before the period "or under section 6166A (as in effect before its repeal by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981)".

(13) For purposes of applying the amendments made by this subsection and the amendments made by section 10102 of the Revenue Act of 1987, the provisions of this subsection shall be treated as having been enacted immediately before the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1987.

(14)(A) For purposes of applying section 163(h) of the 1986 Code to any taxable year beginning during 1987, if, incident to a divorce or legal separation—

(i) an individual acquires the interest of a spouse or former spouse in a qualified residence in a transfer to which section 1041 of the 1986 Code applies, and

(ii) such individual incurs indebtedness which is secured by such qualified residence, the amount determined under paragraph (3)(B)(ii)(I) of section 163(h) of the 1986 Code (as in effect before the amendments made by the Revenue Act of 1987) with respect to such qualified residence shall be increased by the amount determined under subparagraph (B).

(B) The amount determined under this subparagraph shall be equal to the excess (if any) of—

(i) the lesser of the amount of the indebtedness described in subparagraph (A)(ii), or the fair market value of the spouse's or former spouse's interest in the qualified residence as of the time of the transfer, over

(ii) the basis of the spouse or former spouse in such interest in such residence (adjusted only by the cost of any improvements to such residence).

(15) Clause (i) of section 7872(d)(1)(E) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "section 163(d)(3)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 163(d)(4)".

SEC. 106. AMENDMENTS RELATED TO TITLE VI OF THE REFORM ACT.

(a) AMENDMENT RELATED TO SECTION 601 OF THE REFORM ACT.—Section 15 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) REFERENCES TO HIGHEST RATE.—If the change referred to in subsection (a) involves a change in the highest rate of tax imposed by section 1 or 11(b), any reference in this chapter to such highest rate (other than in a provision imposing a tax by reference to such rate) shall be treated as a reference to the weighted average of the highest rates before and after the change determined on the basis of the respective portions of the taxable year before the date of the change and on or after the date of the change."

(b) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTIONS 611 AND 612 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) In the case of dividends received or accrued during 1987—

(A) subparagraph (B) of section 245(c)(1) of the 1986 Code shall be applied by substituting "80 percent" for the percentage specified therein, and

(B) subparagraph (B) of section 861(a)(2) of the 1986 Code shall be applied by substituting "$^{100}/_{80}$ths" for the fraction specified therein.

(2) Paragraph (3) of section 854(b) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(3) AGGREGATE DIVIDENDS.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In computing the amount of aggregate dividends received, there shall only be taken into account dividends received from domestic corporations.

"(B) DIVIDENDS.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'dividend' shall not include any distribution from—

"(i) a corporation which, for the taxable year of the corporation in which the distribution is made, or for the next preceding taxable year of the corporation, is a corporation exempt from tax under section 501 (relating to certain charitable, etc., organizations) or section 521 (relating to farmers' cooperative associations), or

"(ii) a real estate investment trust which, for the taxable year of the trust in which the dividend is paid, qualifies under part II of subchapter M (section 856 and following).

"(C) LIMITATIONS ON DIVIDENDS FROM REGULATED INVESTMENT COMPANIES.—In determining the amount of any dividend for purposes of this paragraph, a dividend received from a regulated investment company shall be subject to the limitations prescribed in this section."

(c) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 614 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Section 1059(d) of the 1986 Code (relating to extension to certain property distributions) is amended by striking out paragraph (5) and redesignating paragraphs (6) and (7) as paragraphs (5) and (6), respectively.

(2) Section 1059(d)(5) of the 1986 Code (defining dividend announcement date), as redesignated by paragraph (1), is amended by inserting "amount or" before "payment".

(3) Section 1059(d)(6) of the 1986 Code (relating to exception where stock held during entire existence of corporation), as redesignated by paragraph (1), is amended to read as follows:

"(6) EXCEPTION WHERE STOCK HELD DURING ENTIRE EXISTENCE OF CORPORATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to any extraordinary dividend with respect to any share of stock of a corporation if—

"(i) such stock was held by the taxpayer during the entire period such corporation was in existence, and

"(ii) except as provided in regulations, no earnings and profits of such corporation were attributable to transfers of property from (or earnings and profits of) a corporation which is not a qualified corporation.

"(B) QUALIFIED CORPORATION.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'qualified corporation' means any corporation (including a predecessor corporation)—

"(i) with respect to which the taxpayer holds directly or indirectly during the entire period of such corporation's existence at least the same ownership interest as the taxpayer holds in the corporation distributing the extraordinary dividend, and

"(ii) which has no earnings and profits—

"(I) which were earned by, or

"(II) which are attributable to gain on property which accrued during a period the corporation holding the property was, a corporation not described in clause (i).

"(C) APPLICATION OF PARAGRAPH.—This paragraph shall not apply to any extraordinary dividend to the extent such application is inconsistent with the purposes of this section."

(4) Paragraph (1) of section 1059(e) of the 1986 Code (relating to treatment of partial liquidation) is amended by striking out "for purposes of this section (without regard to the holding period of the stock)" and inserting in lieu thereof: "to which paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a) apply without regard to the period the taxpayer held such stock".

(5) Paragraph (2) of section 1059(e) of the 1986 Code (relating to qualifying dividends) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) QUALIFYING DIVIDENDS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in regulations, the term 'extraordinary dividend' does not include any qualifying dividend (within the meaning of section 243).

"(B) EXCEPTION.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any portion of a dividend which is attributable to earnings and profits which—

"(i) were earned by a corporation during a period it was not a member of the affiliated group, or

"(ii) are attributable to gain on property which accrued during a period the corporation holding the property was not a member of the affiliated group."

(6) Subparagraph (A) of section 1059(e)(3) of the 1986 Code (relating to qualified preferred dividends) is amended to read as follows:

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of 1 or more qualified preferred dividends with respect to any share of stock—

"(i) this section shall not apply to such dividends if the taxpayer holds such stock for more than 5 years, and

"(ii) if the taxpayer disposes of such stock before it has been held for more than 5 years, the aggregate reduction under subsection (a)(1) with respect to such dividends shall not be greater than the excess (if any) of—

"(I) the qualified preferred dividends paid with respect to such stock during the period the taxpayer held such stock, over

"(II) the qualified preferred dividends which would have been paid during such period on the basis of the stated rate of return."

(7) Clause (i) of section 1059(e)(3)(C) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "any dividend payable" and inserting in lieu thereof "any fixed dividend payable", and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

(8)(A) Part VII of subchapter C of chapter 1 of the 1986 Code is hereby repealed.

(B) Subsection (b) of section 311 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN DISTRIBUTIONS OF PARTNERSHIP OR TRUST INTERESTS.—If the property distributed consists of an interest in a partnership or trust, the Secretary may by regulations provide that the amount of the gain recognized under paragraph (1) shall be computed without regard to any loss attributable to property contributed to the partnership or trust for the principal purpose of recognizing such loss on the distribution."

(C) The table of parts for subchapter C of chapter 1 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out the item relating to part VII.

(9) Paragraph (1) of section 267(a) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "(other than a loss in case of a distribution in corporate liquidation)", and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The preceding sentence shall not apply to any loss of the distributing corporation (or the distributee) in the case of a distribution in complete liquidation."

(10) Paragraph (1) of section 301(b) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(1) GENERAL RULE.—For purposes of this section, the amount of any distribution shall be the amount of money received, plus the fair market value of the other property received."

(11) Subsection (d) of section 301 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(d) BASIS.—The basis of property received in a distribution to which subsection (a) applies shall be the fair market value of such property."

(12) Section 301 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out subsection (e) and by redesignating subsections (f) and (g) as subsections (e) and (f), respectively.

(13)(A) Subsection (a) of section 367 of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating paragraph (5) as paragraph (6) and by inserting after paragraph (4) the following new paragraph:

"(5) PARAGRAPHS (2) AND (3) NOT TO APPLY TO CERTAIN SECTION 361 TRANSACTIONS.—Paragraphs (2) and (3) shall not apply in the case of an exchange described in section 361. Subject to such basis adjustments and such other conditions as shall be provided in regulations, the preceding sentence shall not apply if the transferor corporation is controlled (within the meaning of section 368(c)) by 5 or fewer domestic corporations. For purposes of the preceding sentence, all members of the same affiliated group (within the meaning of section 1504) shall be treated as 1 corporation."

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall apply to exchanges on or after June 11, 1987.

(C) Section 367(e)(2) of the 1986 Code (as amended by the Reform Act) shall not apply in the case of any corporation completely liquidated before June 10, 1987, into a corporation organized in a country which has an income tax treaty with the United States.

(14)(A) Subsection (d) of section 1248 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out paragraph (2).

(B) Subparagraph (B) of section 1248(f)(1) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(B) such domestic corporation distributes stock of such foreign corporation in a distribution to which section 311(a), 337, or 361(c)(1) applies,".

(B) The heading of paragraph (2) of section 311(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "IN EXCESS OF BASIS".

(22) Section 453B of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) CERTAIN LIQUIDATING DISTRIBUTIONS BY S CORPORATIONS.—If—

"(1) an installment obligation is distributed by an S corporation in a complete liquidation, and

"(2) receipt of the obligation is not treated as payment for the stock by reason of section 453(h)(1), then, except for purposes of any tax imposed by subchapter S, no gain or loss with respect to the distribution of the obligation shall be recognized by the distributing corporation. Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, the character of the gain or loss to the shareholder shall be determined in accordance with the principles of section 1366(b)."

(f) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 632 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subsection (a) of section 1374 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "a recognized built-in gain" and inserting in lieu thereof "a net recognized built-in gain".

(2) Subsection (b) of section 1374 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out paragraphs (1) and (2) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The amount of the tax imposed by subsection (a) shall be computed by applying the highest rate of tax specified in section 11(b) to the net recognized built-in gain of the S corporation for the taxable year.

"(2) NET OPERATING LOSS CARRYFORWARDS FROM C YEARS ALLOWED.—Notwithstanding section 1371(b)(1), any net operating loss carryforward arising in a taxable year for which the corporation was a C corporation shall be allowed for purposes of this section as a deduction against the net recognized built-in gain of the S corporation for the taxable year. For purposes of determining the amount of any such loss which may be carried to subsequent taxable years, the amount of the net recognized built-in gain shall be treated as taxable income. Rules similar to the rules of the preceding sentences of this paragraph shall apply in the case of a capital loss carryforward arising in a taxable year for which the corporation was a C corporation."

(3) Subparagraph (B) of section 1374(b)(4) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(B) the amount of the net recognized built-in gain shall be treated as the taxable income."

(4) Paragraph (2) of section 1374(c) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "recognized built-in gains" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "net recognized built-in gain".

(5)(A) Section 1374 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out all that follows paragraph (1) of subsection (d) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(2) NET RECOGNIZED BUILT-IN GAIN.—The term 'net recognized built-in gain' means, with respect to any taxable year in the recognition period, the amount which would be the taxable income of the S corporation for such taxable year if (except as provided in subsection (b)(2)) only recognized built-in gains and recognized built-in losses were taken into account. If the S corporation is treated as an S corporation by reason of an election made before March 31, 1988, the net recognized built-in gain for any taxable year shall not exceed such corporation's taxable income for such taxable year (determined as provided in section 1375(b)(1)(B)).

"(3) RECOGNIZED BUILT-IN GAIN.—The term 'recognized built-in gain' means any gain recognized during the recognition period on the disposition of any asset except to the extent that the S corporation establishes that—

"(A) such asset was not held by the S corporation as of the beginning of the 1st taxable year for which it was an S corporation, or

"(B) such gain exceeds the excess (if any) of—

"(i) the fair market value of such asset as of the beginning of such 1st taxable year, over

"(ii) the adjusted basis of the asset as of such time.

"(4) RECOGNIZED BUILT-IN LOSSES.—The term 'recognized built-in loss' means any loss recognized during the recognition period on the disposition of any asset to the extent that the S corporation establishes that—

"(A) such asset was held by the S corporation as of the beginning of the 1st taxable year referred to in paragraph (3), and

"(B) such loss does not exceed the excess of—

"(i) the adjusted basis of such asset as of the beginning of such 1st taxable year, over

"(ii) the fair market value of such asset as of such time.

"(5) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN BUILT-IN ITEMS.—

"(A) INCOME ITEMS.—Any item of income which is properly taken into account during the recognition period but which is attributable to periods before the 1st taxable year for which the corporation was an S corporation shall be treated as a recognized built-in gain for the taxable year in which it is properly taken into account.

"(B) DEDUCTION ITEMS.—Any amount which is allowable as a deduction during the recognition period but which is attributable to periods before the 1st taxable year referred to in subparagraph (A) shall be treated as a recognized built-in loss for the taxable year for which it is allowable as a deduction.

"(C) ADJUSTMENT TO NET UNREALIZED BUILT-IN GAIN.—The amount of the net unrealized built-in gain shall be properly adjusted for amounts treated as recognized built-in gains or losses under this paragraph.

"(6) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN PROPERTY.—If the adjusted basis of any asset is determined (in whole or in part) by reference to the adjusted basis of any other asset held by the S corporation as of the beginning of the 1st taxable year referred to in paragraph (3)—

"(A) such asset shall be treated as held by the S corporation as of the beginning of such 1st taxable year, and

"(B) any determination under paragraph (3)(B) or (4)(B) with respect to such asset shall be made by reference to the fair market value and adjusted basis of such other asset as of the beginning of such 1st taxable year.

"(7) RECOGNITION PERIOD.—The term 'recognition period' means the 10-year period beginning with the 1st day of the 1st taxable year for which the corporation was an S corporation.

"(8) TREATMENT OF TRANSFER OF ASSETS FROM C CORPORATION TO S CORPORATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except to the extent provided in regulations, if—

"(i) an S corporation acquires any asset, and

"(ii) the S corporation's basis in such asset is determined (in whole or in part) by reference to the basis of such asset (or any other property) in the hands of a C corporation, then a tax is hereby imposed on any net recognized built-in gain attributable to any such assets for any taxable year beginning in the recognition period. The amount of such tax shall be determined under the rules of this section as modified by subparagraph (B).

"(B) MODIFICATIONS.—For purposes of this paragraph, the modifications of this subparagraph are as follows:

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The preceding paragraphs of this subsection shall be applied by taking into account the day on which the assets were acquired by the S corporation in lieu of the beginning of the 1st taxable year for which the corporation was an S corporation.

"(ii) SUBSECTION (C)(1) NOT TO APPLY.—Subsection (c)(1) shall not apply.

"(9) REFERENCE TO 1ST TAXABLE YEAR.—Any reference in this section to the 1st taxable year for which the corporation was an S corporation shall be treated as a reference to the 1st taxable year for which the corporation was an S corporation pursuant to its most recent election under section 1362.

"(e) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this section including regulations providing for the appropriate treatment of successor corporations."

(B) Subparagraph (B) of section 1375(b)(1) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(B) LIMITATION.—The amount of the excess net passive income for any taxable year shall not exceed the amount of the corporation's taxable income for such taxable year as determined under section 63(a)—

"(i) without regard to the deductions allowed by part VIII of subchapter B (other than the deduction allowed by section 248, relating to organization expenditures), and

"(ii) without regard to the deduction under section 172."

(C) Subsection (b) of section 1375 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 1374.—Notwithstanding paragraph (3), the amount of passive investment income shall be determined by not taking into account any recognized built-in gain or loss of the S corporation for any taxable year in the recognition period. Terms used in the preceding sentence shall have the same respective meanings as when used in section 1374."

(D) Subsection (c) of section 1375 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(c) CREDITS NOT ALLOWABLE.—No credit shall be allowed under part IV of subchapter A of this chapter (other than section 34) against the tax imposed by subsection (a)."

(E) Paragraph (2) of section 1366(f) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "as defined in section 1374(d)(2)" and inserting in lieu thereof "within the meaning of section 1374".

(6) Paragraph (3) of section 1362(d) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out clause (v) of subparagraph (D), and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(E) SPECIAL RULE FOR OPTIONS AND COMMODITY DEALINGS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any options dealer or commodities dealer, passive investment income shall be determined by not taking into account any gain or loss (in the normal course of the taxpayer's activity of dealing in or trading section 1256 contracts) from any section 1256 contract or property related to such a contract.

"(ii) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subparagraph—

"(I) OPTIONS DEALER.—The term 'options dealer' has the meaning given such term by section 1256(g)(8).

"(II) COMMODITIES DEALER.—The term 'commodities dealer' means a person who is actively engaged in trading section 1256 contracts and is registered with a domestic board of trade which is designated as a contract market by the Commodities Futures Trading Commission.

"(III) SECTION 1256 CONTRACT.—The term 'section 1256 contract' has the meaning given to such term by section 1256(b)."

(7) The subsection (d) of section 1363 of the 1986 Code which relates to distributions of appreciated property, and subsection (e) of section 1363 of the 1986 Code, are hereby repealed.

(g) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 633 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subsection (b) of section 633 of the Reform Act is amended to read as follows:

"(b) BUILT-IN GAINS OF S CORPORATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by section 632 (other than subsection (b) thereof) shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, but only in cases where the return for the taxable year is filed pursuant to an S election made after December 31, 1986.

"(2) APPLICATION OF PRIOR LAW.—In the case of any taxable year of an S corporation which begins after December 31, 1986, and to which the amendments made by section 632 (other than subsection (b) thereof) do not apply, paragraph (1) of section 1374(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (as in effect on the date before the date of the enactment of this Act) shall be applied as if it read as follows:

" '(1) an amount equal to 34 percent of the amount by which the net capital gain of the corporation for the taxable year exceeds $25,000, or' ".

(2) Subparagraph (B) of section 633(c)(1) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "50 percent or more" and inserting in lieu thereof "more than 50 percent".

(3) Paragraph (1) of section 633(d) of the Reform Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "this section" and inserting in lieu thereof "this subtitle",

(B) by striking out "would be recognized and inserting in lieu thereof "would be recognized by the liquidating corporation", and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Section 333 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act) shall continue to apply to any complete liquidation described in the preceding sentence.".

(4) Subparagraph (C) of section 633(d)(2) of the Reform Act is amended to read as follows:

"(C) any gain on an asset acquired by the qualified corporation if—

"(i) the basis of such asset in the hands of the qualified corporation is determined (in whole or in part) by reference to the basis of such asset in the hands of the person from whom acquired, and

"(ii) a principal purpose for the transfer of such asset to the qualified corporation was to secure the benefits of this subsection."

(5)(A) Subparagraph (A) of section 633(d)(5) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "10 or fewer qualified persons" and inserting in lieu thereof "a qualified group".

(B) Paragraph (6) of section 633(d) of the Reform Act is amended to read as follows:

"(6) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) QUALIFIED GROUP.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), the term 'qualified group' means any group of 10 or fewer qualified persons who at all times during the 5-year period ending on the date of the adoption of the plan of complete liquidation (or, if shorter, the period during which the corporation or any predecessor was in existence) owned (or was treated as owning under the rules of subparagraph (C)) more than 50 percent (by value) of the stock in such corporation.

"(ii) 5-YEAR OWNERSHIP REQUIREMENT NOT TO APPLY IN CERTAIN CASES.—In the case of—

"(I) any complete liquidation pursuant to a plan of liquidation adopted before March 31, 1988,

"(II) any distribution not in liquidation made before March 31, 1988,

"(III) an election to be an S corporation filed before March 31, 1988, or

"(IV) a transaction described in section 338 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 where the acquisition date (within the meaning of such section 338) is before March 31, 1988, the term 'qualified group' means any group of 10 or fewer qualified persons.

"(B) QUALIFIED PERSON.—The term 'qualified person' means—

"(i) an individual,

"(ii) an estate, or

"(iii) any trust described in clause (ii) or clause (iii) of section 1361(c)(2)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

"(C) ATTRIBUTION RULES.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Any stock owned by a corporation, trust (other than a trust referred to in subparagraph (B)(iii), or partnership shall be treated as owned proportionately by its shareholders, beneficiaries, or partners, and shall not be treated as owned by such corporation, trust, or partnership. Stock considered to be owned by a person by reason of the application of the preceding sentence shall, for purposes of applying such sentence, be treated as actually owned by such person.

"(ii) FAMILY MEMBERS.—Stock owned (or treated as owned) by members of the same family (within the meaning of section 318(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) shall be treated as owned by 1 person, and shall be treated as owned by such 1 person for any period during which it was owned (or treated as owned) by any such member.

"(iii) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN TRUSTS.—Stock owned (or treated as owned) by the estate of any decedent or by any trust referred to in subparagraph (B)(iii) with respect to such decedent shall be treated as owned by 1 person and shall be treated as owned by such 1 person for the period during which it was owned (or treated as owned) by such estate or any such trust or by the decedent.

"(D) SPECIAL HOLDING PERIOD RULES.—Any property acquired by reason of the death of an individual shall be treated as owned at all times during which such property was owned (or treated as owned) by the decedent.

"(E) CONTROLLED GROUP OF CORPORATIONS.—All members of the same controlled group (as defined in section 267(f)(1) of such Code) shall be treated as 1 corporation for purposes of determining whether any of such corporations met the requirement of paragraph (5)(B) and for purposes of determining the applicable percentage with respect to any of such corporations. For purposes of the preceding sentence, an S corporation shall not be treated as a member of a controlled group unless such corporation was a C corporation for its taxable year which includes August 1, 1986, or it was not described for such taxable year in paragraph (1) or (2) of section 1374(c) of such Code (as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act)."

(6) Subsection (d) of section 633 of the Reform Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9) APPLICATION TO NONLIQUIDATING DISTRIBUTIONS.—The provisions of this subsection shall also apply in the case of any distribution (not in complete liquidation) made by a qualified corporation before January 1, 1989, without regard to whether such corporation is completely liquidated."

(7) Paragraph (8) of the section 633(d) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "becomes an S corporation for a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1989" and inserting in lieu thereof "makes an election to be an S corporation under section 1362 of such Code before January 1, 1989, without regard to whether such corporation is completely liquidated".

(8) Section 633 of the Reform Act is amended by redesignating the subsections following the first subsection (d) as subsections (e), (f), and (g), respectively.

(9) Subsection (f)(2) of section 633 of the Reform Act (as so redesignated) is amended by striking out "May 9, 1929" and inserting in lieu thereof "May 9, 1929 (or any direct or indirect subsidiary of such corporation)".

(10) Paragraph (3) of section 633(f) of the Reform Act (as so redesignated) is amended by striking out "of such Code)" in the last sentence thereof and inserting in lieu thereof "of such Code".

(11) Subclause (I) of section 633(f)(4)(A)(i) of the Reform Act (as so redesignated) is amended by striking out "binding on the selling corporation to sell substantially all its assets" and inserting in lieu thereof "to sell substantially all of the assets of a selling corporation organized under the laws of Massachusetts on October 20, 1976,".

(12) Subparagraph (A) of section 633(f)(5) of the Reform Act (as so redesignated) is amended to read as follows:

"(A) a voting trust established not later than December 31, 1987, shall qualify as a trust permitted as a shareholder of an S corporation and shall be treated as only 1 shareholder if the holders of beneficial interests in such voting trust are—

"(i) employees or retirees of such corporation, or

"(ii) in the case of stock or voting trust certificates acquired from an employee or retiree of such corporation, the spouse, child, or estate of such employee or retiree or a trust created by such employee or retiree which is described in section 1361(c)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (or treated as described in such section by reason of section 1361(d) of such Code), and".

(h) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 641 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Paragraph (3) of section 1060(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "the Secretary may find necessary" and inserting in lieu thereof "the Secretary deems necessary".

(2) Section 1060 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN PARTNERSHIP TRANSACTIONS.—In the case of a distribution of partnership property or a transfer of an interest in a partnership—

"(1) the rules of subsection (a) shall apply but only for purposes of determining the value of goodwill or going concern value (or similar items) for purposes of applying section 755, and

"(2) if section 755 applies, such distribution or transfer (as the case may be) shall be treated as an applicable asset acquisition for purposes of subsection (b)."

(3)(A) Subparagraph (B) of section 6724(d)(1) of the 1986 Code (defining information return) is amended by striking out "or" at the end of clause (ix), by striking out the period at the end of clause (x) and inserting in lieu thereof ", or", and by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(xi) section 1060(b) (relating to reporting requirements of transferors and transferees in certain asset acquisitions)."

(B) Section 1060 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) CROSS REFERENCE.—

"For provisions relating to penalties for failure to file a return required by this section, see section 6721."

(i) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 642 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 453(g) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out subparagraphs (A) and (B) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(A) subsection (a) shall not apply,

"(B) for purposes of this title—

"(i) except as provided in clause (ii), all payments to be received shall be treated as received in the year of the disposition, and

"(ii) in the case of any payments which are contingent as to the amount but with respect to which the fair market value may not be reasonably ascertained, the basis shall be recovered ratably, and

"(C) the purchaser may not increase the basis of any property acquired in such sale by any amount before the time such amount is includible in the gross income of the seller."

(2)(A) Section 453(g) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) RELATED PERSONS.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'related persons' has the meaning given to such term by section 1239(b), except that such term shall include 2 or more partnerships having a relationship to each other described in section 707(b)(1)(B)."

(B) Section 453(g)(1) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "(within the meaning of section 1239(b))".

(3) The heading of paragraph (2) of section 642(c) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "TRADITIONAL" and inserting in lieu thereof "TRANSITIONAL".

(j) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 643 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1)(A) Subsection (e) of section 171 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(e) TREATMENT AS OFFSET TO INTEREST PAYMENTS.—Except as provided in regulations, in the case of any taxable bond—

"(1) the amount of any bond premium shall be allocated among the interest payments on the bond under rules similar to the rules of subsection (b)(3), and

"(2) in lieu of any deduction under subsection (a), the amount of any premium so allocated to any interest payment shall be applied against (and operate to reduce) the amount of such interest payment.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term 'taxable bond' means any bond the interest of which is not excludable from gross income."

(B) Paragraph (5) of section 1016(a) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "allowable pursuant to section 171(a)(1)" and inserting in lieu thereof "allowable pursuant to section 171(a)(1) (or the amount applied to reduce interest payments under section 171(e)(2))".

(C) The amendments made by this paragraph shall apply in the case of obligations acquired after December 31, 1987; except that the taxpayer may elect to have such amendment apply to obligations acquired after October 22, 1986.

(2) Paragraph (2) of section 643(b) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "issued after" and inserting in lieu thereof "acquired after".

(k) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 646 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Paragraph (2) of section 646(b) of the Reform Act is amended to read as follows:

"(2) such entity is exclusively engaged in the leasing of mineral property and activities incidental thereto, and".

(2) Paragraph (3) of section 646(b) of the Reform Act is amended by inserting "as of October 22, 1986," after "publicly traded".

(3) Subparagraph (A) of section 646(c)(1) of the Reform Act is amended by inserting "before January 1, 1991" after "entity".

(4) Paragraph (2) of section 646(c) of the Reform Act is amended to read as follows:

"(2) AGREEMENT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The agreement described in this paragraph is a written agreement signed by the board of trustees of the entity which provides that the entity will not acquire any additional property other than property described in subparagraph (B).

"(B) PERMISSIBLE ACQUISITIONS.—Property is described in this paragraph if it is—

"(i) surface rights to property the acquisition of which—

"(I) is necessary to mine mineral rights held on October 22, 1986, and

"(II) is required by a written binding agreement between the entity and an unrelated person entered into on or before October 22, 1986,

"(ii) surface rights to property which are not described in clause (i) and which—

"(I) are acquired in an exchange to which section 1031 applies, and

"(II) are necessary to mine mineral rights held on October 22, 1986,

"(iii) tangible personal property incidental to the leasing of mineral property and activities incidental thereto, or

"(iv) part of any required reserves of the entity."

(5) Paragraph (1) of section 646(d) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof:

"(B) for purposes of section 333 of such Code (as so in effect)—

"(i) any person holding an income interest in such entity as of such time shall be treated as a qualified electing shareholder, and

"(ii) the earnings and profits, and the value of money or stock or securities, of such entity shall be apportioned ratably among persons described in clause (i).

The amendments made by subtitle D of this title and section 1804 of this Act shall not apply to any liquidation under this paragraph."

(6)(A) Paragraph (2) of section 646(d) of the Reform Act is amended to read as follows:

"(2) TERMINATION OF ELECTION.—If an entity ceases to be described in subsection (b) or violates any term of the agreement described in subsection (c)(2), the entity shall, for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, be treated as a corporation for the taxable year in which such cessation or violation occurs and for all subsequent taxable years."

(B) Paragraph (3) of section 646(c) of the Reform Act is amended to read as follows:

"(3) BEGINNING OF PERIOD FOR WHICH ELECTION IS IN EFFECT.—The period during which an election is in effect under this subsection shall begin on the 1st day of the 1st taxable year beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act and following the taxable year in which the election is made."

(7)(A) Subsection (e) of section 646 of the Reform Act is amended to read as follows:

"(e) SPECIAL RULE FOR PERSONS HOLDING INCOME INTERESTS.—In applying subpart E of part I of subchapter J of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to any entity to which this section applies—

"(1) a reversionary interest shall not be taken into account until it comes into possession, and

"(2) all items of income, gain, loss, deduction, and credit shall be allocated to persons holding income interests for the period of the allocation."

(B) Section 646(d)(3) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "or by reason of subsection (e)".

(l) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 651 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1)(A) Paragraph (6) of section 852(b) of the 1986 Code (as added by section 651(b)(1)(A) of the Reform Act) is redesignated as paragraph (7).

(B) Subsection (b) of section 855 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "section 852(b)(6)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 852(b)(7)".

(2) Paragraph (2) of section 4982(e) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(2) CAPITAL GAIN NET INCOME.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the term 'capital gain net income' has the meaning given such term by section 1222(9) (determined by treating the 1-year period ending on October 31 of any calendar year as the company's taxable year).

"(B) REDUCTION BY NET ORDINARY LOSS FOR CALENDAR YEAR.—The amount determined under subparagraph (A) shall be reduced (but not below the net capital gain) by the amount of the company's net ordinary loss for the calendar year.

"(C) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) NET CAPITAL GAIN.—The term 'net capital gain' has the meaning given such term by section 1222(11) (determined by treating the 1-year period ending on October 31 of the calendar year as the company's taxable year).

"(ii) NET ORDINARY LOSS.—The net ordinary loss for the calendar year is the amount which would be the net operating loss of the company for the calendar year if the amount of such loss were determined in the same manner as ordinary income is determined under paragraph (1)."

(3) Paragraph (2) of section 852(c) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(2) COORDINATION WITH TAX ON UNDISTRIBUTED INCOME.—For purposes of applying this chapter to distributions made by a regulated investment company with respect to any calendar year, the earnings and profits of such company shall be determined without regard to any net capital loss (or net foreign currency loss) attributable to transactions after October 31 of such year and with such other adjustments as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe. The preceding sentence shall apply—

"(A) only to the extent that the amount distributed by the company with respect to the calendar year does not exceed the required distribution for such calendar year (as determined under section 4982 by substituting '100 percent' for each percentage set forth in section 4982(b)(1)), and

"(B) except as provided in regulations, only if an election under section 4982(e)(4) is not in effect with respect to such company."

(4) Subparagraph (C) of section 852(b)(3) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "net capital loss" each place it appears in the 3rd sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "net capital loss or net long-term capital loss", and

(B) by striking out "regulated investment company taxable income" in the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "the taxable income of the regulated investment company".

(5) Subsection (e) of section 4982 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) TREATMENT OF FOREIGN CURRENCY GAINS AND LOSSES AFTER OCTOBER 31 OF CALENDAR YEAR.—Any foreign currency gain or loss which is attributable to a section 988 transaction and which is properly taken into account for the portion of the calendar year after October 31 shall not be taken into account in determining the amount of the ordinary income of the regulated investment company for such calendar year but shall be taken into account in determining the ordinary income of the investment company for the following calendar year. In the case of any company making an election under paragraph (4), the preceding sentence shall be applied by substituting the last day of the company's taxable year for October 31."

(6) Section 4982 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN REGULATED INVESTMENT COMPANIES.—This section shall not apply to any regulated investment company for any calendar year if at all times during such calendar year each shareholder in such company was either—

"(1) a trust described in section 401(a) and exempt from tax under section 501(a), or

"(2) a segregated asset account of a life insurance company held in connection with variable contracts (as defined in section 817(d)).

For purposes of the preceding sentence, any shares attributable to an investment in the regulated investment company (not exceeding $250,000) made in connection with the organization of such company shall not be taken into account."

(7) Subsection (b) of section 852 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) SPECIAL RULE FOR TREATMENT OF CERTAIN FOREIGN CURRENCY LOSSES.—To the extent provided in regulations, the taxable income of a regulated investment company (other than a company to which an election under section 4982(e)(4) applies) shall be computed without regard to any net foreign currency loss attributable to transactions after October 31 of such year, and any such net foreign currency loss shall be treated as arising on the 1st day of the following taxable year."

(8) Subsection (a) of section 852 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"The Secretary may waive the requirements of paragraph (1) for any taxable year if the regulated investment company establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that it was unable to meet such requirements by reason of distributions previously made to meet the requirements of section 4982."

(9) Effective with respect to dividends declared in 1988 and subsequent calendar years, paragraph (7) of section 852(b) of the 1986 Code (as redesignated by paragraph (1)) is amended—

(A) by striking out "in December" and inserting in lieu thereof "in October, November, or December",

(B) by striking out "in such month" and inserting in lieu thereof "in such a month",

(C) by striking out "on such date" in subparagraphs (A) and (B) and inserting in lieu thereof "on December 31 of such calendar year", and

(D) by striking out "before February 1" and inserting in lieu thereof "during January".

(10) Paragraph (1) of section 852(e) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "subsection (a)(3)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (a)(2)".

(m) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 652 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 851(a) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(1) which, at all times during the taxable year—

"(A) is registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended (15 U.S.C. 80a-1 to 80b-2) as a management company or unit investment trust, or

"(B) has in effect an election under such Act to be treated as a business development company, or".

(2) Paragraph (1) of section 851(e) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "a registered management company or registered business development company" and inserting in lieu thereof "a management company or a business development company described in subsection (a)(1)".

(n) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 653 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subsection (b) of section 851 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Income derived from a partnership or trust shall be treated as described in paragraph (2) only to the extent such income is attributable to items of income of the partnership or trust (as the case may be) which would be described in paragraph (2) if realized by the regulated investment company in the same manner as realized by the partnership or trust."

(2)(A) Paragraph (3) of section 851(b) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(3) less than 30 percent of its gross income is derived from the sale or disposition of any of the following which was held for less than 3 months:

"(A) stock or securities (as defined in section 2(a)(36) of the Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended),

"(B) options, futures, or forward contracts (other than options, futures, or forward contracts on foreign currencies), or

"(C) foreign currencies (or options, futures, or forward contracts on foreign currencies) but only if such currencies (or options, futures, or forward contracts) are not directly related to the company's principal business of investing in stock or securities (or options and futures with respect to stocks or securities), and".

(B) Subsection (b) of section 851 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "which are not ancillary" in the material following paragraph (4), and inserting in lieu thereof "which are not directly related".

(C) Subparagraph (C) of section 851(b)(3) of the 1986 Code (as amended by subparagraph (A)), and the amendment made by subparagraph (B), shall apply to taxable years beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(4) Clause (i) of section 851(g)(2)(A) of the 1986 Code (defining designated hedge) is amended by striking out "contractual option" and inserting in lieu thereof "contractual obligation".

(5) Subsection (b) of section 851 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "In the case of the taxable year in which a regulated investment company is completely liquidated, there shall not be taken into account under paragraph (3) any gain from the sale, exchange, or distribution of any property after the adoption of the plan of complete liquidation."

(o) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 654 OF THE REFORM ACT.—Subsection (q) of section 851 of the 1986 Code (as added by section 654 of the Reform Act)—

(1) is redesignated as subsection (h), and

(2) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) SPECIAL RULE FOR ABNORMAL REDEMPTIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Any fund treated as a separate corporation under paragraph (1) shall not be disqualified under subsection (b)(3) for any taxable year by reason of sales resulting from abnormal redemptions on any day and occurring before the close of the 5th business day after such day if—

"(i) the sum of the percentages determined under subparagraph (B) for the abnormal redemptions on such day and for abnormal redemptions on prior days during such taxable year exceeds 30 percent; and

"(ii) the regulated investment company of which such fund is a part would meet the requirements of subsection (b)(3) for such taxable year if all the funds which are part of such company were treated as a single company.

"(B) ABNORMAL REDEMPTIONS.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'abnormal redemptions' means redemptions occurring on any day if the net redemptions on such day exceed 1 percent of the fund's net asset value.

"(C) DETERMINATION OF NET ASSET VALUE.—For purposes of this paragraph, net asset value for any day shall be determined as of the close of the preceding day.

"(D) LIMITATION.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), any sale or other disposition of stock or securities held less than 3 months occurring during any day shall be deemed to result from abnormal redemptions until the cumulative proceeds from such sales or dispositions occurring during such day, plus the cumulative net positive cash flow of the fund for preceding business days (if any) following the day with abnormal redemptions, exceed the amount of net redemptions on the day with abnormal redemptions."

(p) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 662 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subclause (I) of section 856(c)(6)(D)(i) of the 1986 Code (as added by section 662 of the Reform Act) is amended by striking out "debt instrument" and inserting in lieu thereof "debt instrument (within the meaning of section 1275(a)(1))".

(2) Notwithstanding section 669 of the Reform Act, the amendment made by section 662(c) of the Reform Act shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, but only in the case of obligations acquired after October 22, 1986.

(3) Subsection (c) of section 856 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) TREATMENT OF LIQUIDATING GAINS.—In the case of the taxable year in which a real estate investment trust is completely liquidated, there shall not be taken into account under paragraph (4) any gain from the sale, exchange, or distribution of any property after the adoption of the plan of complete liquidation."

(4)(A) Paragraph (6) of section 856(c) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(G) TREATMENT OF INCOME RECEIVED UNDER CERTAIN AGREEMENTS LIMITING INTEREST RATE RISK.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any agreement described in clause (ii)—

"(I) any payment to the real estate investment trust under such agreement (and any gain from the sale or other disposition of such agreement) shall be treated as income qualifying under paragraph (2), and

"(II) such agreement shall be treated as a security for purposes of paragraph (4)(A).

"(ii) DESCRIPTION OF AGREEMENT.—An agreement is described in this clause if such agreement is a bona fide interest rate swap or interest rate cap agreement which protects the real estate investment trust from interest rate fluctuations under any variable rate indebtedness of such trust incurred to acquire (or carry) real property or interests in real property or committed to such an acquisition."

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall apply to taxable years ending after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(5) Subclause (I) of section 856(c)(6)(D)(ii) of the 1986 Code (as added by section 662 of the Reform Act) is amended by striking out "stock in" and inserting in lieu thereof "stock (or certificates of beneficial interests) in".

(q) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 663 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subparagraph (A) of section 856(d)(6) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If—

"(i) a real estate investment trust receives or accrues, with respect to real or personal property, amounts from a tenant which derives substantially all of its income with respect to such property from the subleasing of substantially all of such property, and

"(ii) a portion of the amount such tenant receives or accrues, directly or indirectly, from subtenants consists of qualified rents, then the amounts which the trust receives or accrues from the tenant shall not be excluded from the term 'rents from real property' by reason of being based on the income or profits of such tenant to the extent the amounts so received or accrued are attributable to qualified rents received or accrued by such tenant."

(2) Subsection (f) of section 856 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(f) INTEREST.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of paragraphs (2)(B) and (3)(B) of subsection (c), the term 'interest' does not include any amount received or accrued, directly or indirectly, if the determination of such amount depends in whole or in part on the income or profits of any person except that—

"(A) any amount so received or accrued shall not be excluded from the term 'interest' solely by reason of being based on a fixed percentage or percentages of receipts or sales, and

"(B) where a real estate investment trust receives any amount which would be excluded from the term 'interest' solely because the debtor of the real estate investment trust receives or accrues any amount the determination of which depends in whole or in part on the income or profits of any person, only a proportionate part (determined pursuant to regulations prescribed by the Secretary) of the amount received or accrued by the real estate investment trust from the debtor will be excluded from the term 'interest'.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—If—

"(A) a real estate investment trust receives or accrues with respect to an obligation secured by a mortgage on real property or an interest in real property amounts from a debtor which derives substantially all of its gross income with respect to such property (not taking into account any gain on any disposition) from the leasing of substantially all of its interests in such property to tenants, and

"(B) a portion of the amount which such debtor receives or accrues, directly or indirectly, from tenants consists of qualified rents (as defined in subsection (d)(6)(B)), then the amounts which the trust receives or accrues from such debtor shall not be excluded from the term 'interest' by reason of being based on the income or profits of such debtor to the extent the amounts so received are attributable to qualified rents received or accrued by such debtor."

(r) AMENDMENT RELATED TO SECTION 664 OF THE REFORM ACT.—Clause (i) of section 857(e)(2)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "as original issue discount on instruments" and inserting "with respect to instruments".

(s) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 668 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Paragraph (2) of section 4981(e) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(2) CAPITAL GAIN NET INCOME.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'capital gain net income' has the meaning given such term by section 1222(9) (determined by treating the calendar year as the trust's taxable year).

"(B) REDUCTION FOR NET ORDINARY LOSS.—The amount determined under subparagraph (A) shall be reduced by the amount of the trust's net ordinary loss for the taxable year.

"(C) NET ORDINARY LOSS.—For purposes of this paragraph, the net ordinary loss for the calendar year is the amount which would be net operating loss of the trust for the calendar year if the amount of such loss were determined in the same manner as ordinary income is determined under paragraph (1)."

(2) Subparagraph (C) of section 857(b)(3) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "real estate investment trust taxable income" in the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "the taxable income of the real estate investment trust".

(3) Subparagraph (A) of section 4981(c)(1) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "such calendar year" and inserting in lieu thereof "such calendar year (but computed without regard to that portion of such deduction which is attributable to the amount excluded under section 857(b)(2)(D))".

(4) Subsection (a) of section 857 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"The Secretary may waive the requirements of paragraph (1) for any taxable year if the real estate investment trust establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that it was unable to meet such requirements by reason of distributions previously made to meet the requirements of section 4981."

(5) Effective with respect to dividends declared in 1988 and subsequent calendar years, paragraph (8) of section 857(b) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "in December" and inserting in lieu thereof "in October, November, or December",

(B) by striking out "in such month" and inserting in lieu thereof "in such a month",

(C) by striking out "on such date" in subparagraphs (A) and (B) and inserting in lieu thereof "on December 31 of such calendar year", and

(D) by striking out "before February 1" and inserting in lieu thereof "during January".

(t) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 671 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 860C(e) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(1) AMOUNTS TREATED AS ORDINARY.—Any amount taken into account under subsection (a) by any holder of a residual interest in a REMIC shall be treated as ordinary income or ordinary loss, as the case may be."

(2)(A) Paragraph (4) of section 860D(a) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(i) by striking out "4th month ending after" and inserting in lieu thereof "3rd month beginning after", and

(ii) by striking out "and each quarter ending thereafter" and inserting in lieu thereof "and at all times thereafter".

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A)(ii) shall take effect on January 1, 1988.

(3)(A) Clause (i) of section 860F(a)(2)(A) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(i) the substitution of a qualified replacement mortgage for a qualified mortgage (or the repurchase in lieu of substitution of a defective obligation),".

(B)(i) Paragraph (2) of section 860F(a) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out the last sentence of subparagraph (A).

(ii) Subsection (a) of section 860F of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) EXCEPTIONS.—Notwithstanding subparagraphs (A) and (D) of paragraph (1), the term 'prohibited transaction' shall not include any disposition—

"(A) required to prevent default on a regular interest where the threatened default resulted from a default on 1 or more qualified mortgages, or

"(B) to facilitate a clean-up call (as defined in regulations)."

(C) Subparagraph (D) of section 860F(a)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "described in subsection (b)".

(4) Subparagraph (A) of section 860F(b)(1) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "the transfer of any property to a REMIC" and inserting in lieu thereof "the transfer of any property to a REMIC in exchange for regular or residual interests in such REMIC".

(5)(A) Paragraph (1) of section 860G(a) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(1) REGULAR INTEREST.—The term 'regular interest' means any interest in a REMIC which is issued on the startup day with fixed terms and which is designated as a regular interest if—

"(A) such interest unconditionally entitles the holder to receive a specified principal amount (or other similar amount), and

"(B) interest payments (or other similar amount), if any, with respect to such interest at or before maturity—

"(i) are payable based on a fixed rate (or to the extent provided in regulations, at a variable rate), or

"(ii) consist of a specified portion of the interest payments on qualified mortgages and such portion does not vary during the period such interest is outstanding.

The interest shall not fail to meet the requirements of subparagraph (A) merely because the timing (but not the amount) of the principal payments (or other similar amounts) may be contingent on the extent of prepayments on qualified mortgages and the amount of income from permitted investments."

(B) Paragraph (2) of section 860G(a) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(2) RESIDUAL INTEREST.—The term 'residual interest' means an interest in a REMIC which is issued on the startup day, which is not a regular interest, and which is designated as a residual interest."

(C) Paragraph (3) of section 860G(a) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(i) by striking out "on or before the startup day" in subparagraph (A)(i) and inserting in lieu thereof "on the startup day in exchange for regular or residual interests in the REMIC",

(ii) by inserting "if, except as provided in regulations, such purchase is pursuant to a fixed-price contract in effect on the startup day" before the comma at the end of subparagraph (A)(ii), and

(iii) by striking out "on or before the startup day" in subparagraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof "on the startup day in exchange for regular or residual interests in the REMIC".

(D) Subparagraph (A) of section 860G(a)(4) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(A) which would be a qualified mortgage if transferred on the startup day in exchange for regular or residual interests in the REMIC, and".

(E) Paragraph (9) of section 860G(a) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(9) STARTUP DAY.—The term 'startup day' means the day on which the REMIC issues all of its regular and residual interests. To the extent provided in regulations, all interests issued (and all transfers to the REMIC) during any period (not exceeding 10 days) permitted in such regulations shall be treated as occurring on the day during such period selected by the REMIC for purposes of this paragraph."

(F) The amendments made by this paragraph shall not apply to any REMIC where the startup day (as defined in section 860G(a)(9) of the 1986 Code as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act) is before July 1, 1987.

(6) Paragraph (3) of section 860G(a) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "directly or indirectly," in subparagraph (A), and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"For purposes of this subparagraph, any obligation secured by stock held by a person as a tenant-stockholder (as defined in section 216) in a cooperative housing corporation (as so defined) shall be treated as secured by an interest in real property."

(7) Subparagraph (B) of section 860G(a)(7) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting before the period at the end of the 1st sentence the following: "or lower than expected returns on cash flow investments".

(8)(A) Paragraph (8) of section 860G(a) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(i) by striking out "section 856(e)" in subparagraph (A) and inserting in lieu thereof "section 856(e) (without regard to paragraph (5) thereof)", and

(ii) by striking out the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"Solely for purposes of section 860D(a), the determination of whether any property is foreclosure property shall be made without regard to section 856(e)(4)."

(B) Section 860G of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d) and by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c) TAX ON INCOME FROM FORECLOSURE PROPERTY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A tax is hereby imposed for each taxable year on the net income from foreclosure property of each REMIC. Such tax shall be computed by multiplying the net income from foreclosure property by the highest rate of tax specified in section 11(b).

"(2) NET INCOME FROM FORECLOSURE PROPERTY.—For purposes of this part, the term 'net income from foreclosure property' means the amount which would be the REMIC's net income from foreclosure property under section 857(b)(4)(B) if the REMIC were a real estate investment trust."

(C) Paragraph (1) of section 860C(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (C), by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (D) and inserting in lieu thereof ", and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(E) the amount of the net income from foreclosure property (if any) shall be reduced by the amount of the tax imposed by section 860G(c)."

(9)(A) Section 860G of the 1986 Code (as amended by paragraph (8)) is amended by redesignating subsection (d) as subsection (e) and by inserting after subsection (c) the following new subsection:

"(d) TAX ON CONTRIBUTIONS AFTER STARTUP DATE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), if any amount is contributed to a REMIC after the startup day, there is hereby imposed a tax for the taxable year of the REMIC in which the contribution is received equal to 100 percent of the amount of such contribution.

"(2) EXCEPTIONS.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any contribution which is made in cash and is described in any of the following subparagraphs:

"(A) Any contribution to facilitate a clean-up call (as defined in regulations) or a qualified liquidation.

"(B) Any payment in the nature of a guarantee.

"(C) Any contribution during the 3-month period beginning on the startup day.

"(D) Any contribution to a qualified reserve fund by any holder of a residual interest in the REMIC.

"(E) Any other contribution permitted in regulations."

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any REMIC where the startup day (as defined in section 860G(a)(9) of the 1986 Code as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act) is before July 1, 1987.

(10) Subsection (e) of section 860G of the 1986 Code (as redesignated by paragraph (9)) is amended by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (2), by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof a comma, and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(4) providing appropriate rules for treatment of transfers of qualified replacement mortgages to the REMIC where the transferor holds any interest in the REMIC, and

"(5) providing that a mortgage will be treated as a qualified replacement mortgage only if it is part of a bona fide replacement (and not part of a swap of mortgages)."

(11) Paragraph (6) of section 856(c) of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating the last subparagraph as subparagraph (F) and by striking out the subparagraph (D) added by section 671(b)(1) of the Reform Act and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(E) A regular or residual interest in a REMIC shall be treated as a real estate asset, and any amount includible in gross income with respect to such an interest shall be treated as interest on an obligation secured by a mortgage on real property; except that, if less than 95 percent of the assets of such REMIC are real estate assets (determined as if the real estate investment trust held such assets), such real estate investment trust shall be treated as holding directly (and as receiving directly) its proportionate share of the assets and income of the REMIC. For purposes of determining whether any interest in a REMIC qualifies under the preceding sentence, any interest held by such REMIC in another REMIC shall be treated as a real estate asset under principles similar to the principles of the preceding sentence, except that, if such REMIC's are part of a tiered structure, they shall be treated as one REMIC for purposes of this subparagraph."

(12) Clause (xi) of section 7701(a)(19)(C) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "are loans described" and inserting in lieu thereof "are assets described".

(13) Subparagraph (B) of section 860E(c)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "issue price of residual interest" and inserting in lieu thereof "issue price of the residual interest".

(14) Clause (ii) of section 860F(b)(1)(D) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "the real estate mortgage pool" and inserting in lieu thereof "the REMIC".

(15) Subsection (a) of section 860E of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(3) SPECIAL RULE FOR AFFILIATED GROUPS.—All members of an affiliated group filing a consolidated return shall be treated as 1 taxpayer for purposes of this subsection, except that paragraph (2) shall be applied separately with respect to each corporation which is a member of such group and to which section 593 applies.

"(4) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN SUBSIDIARIES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this subsection, a corporation to which section 593 applies and each qualified subsidiary of such corporation shall be treated as a single corporation to which section 593 applies.

"(B) QUALIFIED SUBSIDIARY.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualified subsidiary' means any corporation—

"(i) all the stock of which, and substantially all the indebtedness of which, is held directly by the corporation to which section 593 applies, and

"(ii) which is organized and operated exclusively in connection with the organization and operation of 1 or more REMIC's."

(16)(A) Subsection (a) of section 860D of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (4), by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting in lieu thereof ", and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) with respect to which there are reasonable arrangements designed to ensure that—

"(A) residual interests in such entity are not held by disqualified organizations (as defined in section 860E(e)(5)), and

"(B) information necessary for the application of section 860E(e) will be made available by the entity."

(B) Section 860E of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) TAX ON TRANSFERS OF RESIDUAL INTERESTS TO CERTAIN ORGANIZATIONS, ETC.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A tax is hereby imposed on any transfer of a residual interest in a REMIC to a disqualified organization.

"(2) AMOUNT OF TAX.—The amount of the tax imposed by paragraph (1) on any transfer of a residual interest shall be equal to the product of—

"(A) the amount (determined under regulations) equal to the present value of the total anticipated excess inclusions with respect to such interest for periods after such transfer, multiplied by

"(B) the highest rate of tax specified in section 11(b)(1).

"(3) LIABILITY.—The tax imposed by paragraph (1) on any transfer shall be paid by the transferor; except that, where such transfer is through an agent for a disqualified organization, such tax shall be paid by such agent.

"(4) TRANSFEREE FURNISHES AFFIDAVIT.—The person (otherwise liable for any tax imposed by paragraph (1)) shall be relieved of liability for the tax imposed by paragraph (1) with respect to any transfer if—

"(A) the transferee furnishes to such person an affidavit that the transferee is not a disqualified organization, and

"(B) as of the time of the transfer, such person does not have actual knowledge that such affidavit is false.

"(5) DISQUALIFIED ORGANIZATION.—For purposes of this section, the term 'disqualified organization' means—

"(A) the United States, any State or political subdivision thereof, any foreign government, any international organization, or any agency or instrumentality of any of the foregoing,

"(B) any organization (other than a cooperative described in section 521) which is exempt from tax imposed by this chapter unless such organization is subject to the tax imposed by section 511, and

"(C) any organization described in section 1381(a)(2)(C).

For purposes of subparagraph (A), the rules of section 168(h)(2)(D) (relating to treatment of certain taxable instrumentalities) shall apply; except that, in the case of the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation, clause (ii) of such section shall not apply.

"(6) TREATMENT OF PASS-THRU ENTITIES.—

"(A) IMPOSITION OF TAX.—If, at any time during any taxable year of a pass-thru entity, a disqualified organization is the record holder of an interest in such entity, there is hereby imposed on such entity for such taxable year a tax equal to the product of—

"(i) the amount of excess inclusions for such taxable year allocable to the interest held by such disqualified organization, multiplied by

"(ii) the highest rate of tax specified in section 11(b)(1).

"(B) PASS-THRU ENTITY.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'pass-thru entity' means—

"(i) any regulated investment company, real estate investment trust, or common trust fund,

"(ii) any partnership, trust, or estate, and

"(iii) any organization to which part I of subchapter T applies.

Except as provided in regulations, a person holding an interest in a pass-thru entity as a nominee for another person shall, with respect to such interest, be treated as a pass-thru entity.

"(C) TAX TO BE DEDUCTIBLE.—Any tax imposed by this paragraph with respect to any excess inclusion of any pass-thru entity for any taxable year shall, for purposes of this title (other than this subsection), be applied against (and operate to reduce) the amount included in gross income with respect to the residual interest involved.

"(D) EXCEPTION WHERE HOLDER FURNISHES AFFIDAVIT.—No tax shall be imposed by subparagraph (A) with respect to any interest in a pass-thru entity for any period if—

"(i) the record holder of such interest furnishes to such pass-thru entity an affidavit that such record holder is not a disqualified organization, and

"(ii) during such period, the pass-thru entity does not have actual knowledge that such affidavit is false.

"(7) WAIVER.—The Secretary may waive the tax imposed by paragraph (1) on any transfer if—

"(A) within a reasonable time after discovery that the transfer was subject to tax under paragraph (1), steps are taken so that the interest is no longer held by the disqualified organization, and

"(B) there is paid to the Secretary such amounts as the Secretary may require."

(C) Paragraph (2) of section 26(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (J), by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (K) and inserting in lieu thereof ", and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(L) section 860E(e) (relating to taxes with respect to certain residual interests)."

(D)(i) The amendments made by subparagraph (A) shall apply in the case of any REMIC where the start-up day (as defined in section 860G(a)(9) of the 1986 Code, as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act) is after March 31, 1988; except that such amendments shall not apply in the case of a REMIC formed pursuant to a binding written contract in effect on such date.

(ii) The amendments made by subparagraphs (B) and (C) (except to the extent they relate to paragraph (6) of section 860E(e) of the 1986 Code as added by such amendments) shall apply to transfers after March 31, 1988; except that such amendments shall not apply to any transfer pursuant to a binding written contract in effect on such date.

(iii) Except as provided in clause (iv), the amendments made by subparagraphs (B) and (C) (to the extent they relate to paragraph (6) of section 860E(e) of the 1986 Code as so added) shall apply to excess inclusions for periods after March 31, 1988 but only to the extent such inclusions are—

(I) allocable to an interest in a pass-thru entity acquired after March 31, 1988, or

(II) allocable to an interest in a pass-thru entity acquired on or before March 31, 1988, but attributable to a residual interest acquired by the pass-thru entity after March 31, 1988.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, any interest in a pass-thru entity (or residual interest) acquired after March 31, 1988, pursuant to a binding written contract in effect on such date shall be treated as acquired before such date.

(iv) In the case of any real estate investment trust, regulated investment company, common trust fund, or publicly traded partnership, no tax shall be imposed under section 860E(e)(6) of the 1986 Code (as added by the amendment made by subparagraph (B)) for any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1989.

(17) Subparagraph (B) of section 860E(c)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by inserting "(adjusted for contributions)" after "residual interest" the second place it appears, and

(B) by striking "decreased by" in clause (ii) and inserting in lieu thereof "decreased (but not below zero) by".

(18)(A) Subsection (e) of section 860F of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentences: "Such return shall be filed by the REMIC. The determination of who may sign such return shall be made without regard to the first sentence of this subsection."

(B) Unless the REMIC otherwise elects, the amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any REMIC where the start-up day (as defined in section 860G(a)(9) of the 1986 Code as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act) is before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(19) Subsection (a) of section 860D of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"In the case of a qualified liquidation (as defined in section 860F(a)(4)(A)), paragraph (4) shall not apply during the liquidation period (as defined in section 860F(a)(4)(B)."

(20) Subsection (a) of section 860A of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "this chapter" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "this subtitle".

(21) Paragraph (1) of section 860C(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "and in the same manner" and inserting in lieu thereof "and, except as provided in regulations, in the same manner".

(22) The following sections of the 1986 Code are each amended by striking out "real estate mortgage pool" and inserting in lieu thereof "REMIC":

(A) Section 382(l)(4)(B)(ii).
(B) Section 860F(a)(2)(A)(iii).
(C) Section 860F(a)(2)(C).
(D) Section 860F(b)(1)(C)(ii).
(E) Section 860F(b)(1)(D)(ii).

(23) Subsection (d) of section 860E of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"Rules similar to the rules of the preceding sentence shall apply also in the case of regulated investment companies, common trust funds, and organizations to which part I of subchapter T applies."

(24) Subparagraph (C) of section 6049(d)(7) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "the issue price" and inserting in lieu thereof "the adjusted issue price".

(25)(A) Paragraph (19) of section 7701(a) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For purposes of determining whether any interest in a REMIC qualifies under clause (xi), any regular interest in another REMIC held by such REMIC shall be treated as a loan described in a preceding clause under principles similar to the principles of clause (xi); except that, if such REMIC's are part of a tiered structure, they shall be treated as 1 REMIC for purposes of clause (xi)."

(B) Paragraph (4) of section 593(d) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For purposes of determining whether any interest in a REMIC qualifies under the preceding sentence, any interest in another REMIC held by such REMIC shall be treated as a qualifying real property loan under principles similar to the principles of the preceding sentence, except that if such REMIC's are part of a tiered structure, they shall be treated as 1 REMIC for purposes of this paragraph."

(26) Section 860E of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) TREATMENT OF VARIABLE INSURANCE CONTRACTS.—Except as provided in regulations, with respect to any variable contract (as defined in section 817), there shall be no adjustment in the reserve to the extent of any excess inclusion."

(27) Subsection (a) of section 860E of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 172.—Any excess inclusion for any taxable year shall not be taken into account—

"(A) in determining under section 172 the amount of any net operating loss for such taxable year, and

"(B) in determining taxable income for such taxable year for purposes of the 2nd sentence of section 172(b)(2)."

(u) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 672 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subparagraph (B) of section 163(e)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "paragraph (6)" and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph (7)".

(2) Subparagraph (B) of section 1278(a)(4) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "section 1272(a)(6)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 1272(a)(7)".

(7) The last sentence of section 56(f)(2)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "any such taxes" and inserting in lieu thereof "any such taxes (otherwise eligible for the credit provided by section 901 without regard to section 901(j))".

(8) Clause (iii) of section 56(f)(3)(A) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "an income statement" and inserting in lieu thereof "an income statement for a substantial nontax purpose".

(9) Subparagraph (B) of section 56(f)(3) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "paragraph (3)(A)" and inserting in lieu thereof "this subsection".

(10) Subparagraph (C) of section 56(f)(3) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "If the taxpayer has 2 or more statements described in the clause (or subclause) with the lowest number designation, the applicable financial statement shall be the one of such statements specified in regulations."

(11)(A) Subparagraph (F) of section 56(f)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(F) TREATMENT OF TAXES ON DIVIDENDS FROM 936 CORPORATIONS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of determining the alternative minimum tax foreign tax credit, 50 percent of any withholding tax or income tax paid to a possession of the United States with respect to dividends received from a corporation eligible for the credit provided by section 936 shall be treated as a tax paid to a foreign country by the corporation receiving the dividend.

"(ii) LIMITATION.—If the aggregate amount of the dividends referred to in clause (i) for any taxable year exceeds the excess referred to in paragraph (1), the amount treated as a tax paid to a foreign country under clause (i) shall not exceed the amount which would be so treated without regard to this clause multiplied by a fraction—

"(I) the numerator of which is the excess referred to in paragraph (1), and

"(II) the denominator of which is the aggregate amount of such dividends.

"(iii) TREATMENT OF TAXES IMPOSED ON 936 CORPORATION.—For purposes of this subparagraph, taxes paid by any corporation eligible for the credit provided by section 936 to a possession of the United States shall be treated as a withholding tax paid with respect to any dividend paid by such corporation to the extent such taxes would be treated as paid by the corporation receiving the dividend under rules similar to the rules of section 902 (and the amount of any such dividend shall be increased by the amount so treated)."

(B) Clause (iii) of section 56(g)(4)(C) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "clause (ii)(I)" and inserting in lieu thereof "clause (i)".

(12) Clause (iii) of section 56(g)(4)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The preceding sentence shall not apply to any annuity contract held under a plan described in section 403(a)."

(13) Paragraph (1) of section 56(c) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "ADJUSTED EARNINGS AND PROFITS" in the paragraph heading and inserting in lieu thereof "ADJUSTED CURRENT EARNINGS", and

(B) by striking out "ADJUSTED EARNINGS AND PROFITS" in the heading of subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof "ADJUSTED CURRENT EARNINGS".

(14)(A) Subsection (b) of section 56 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) TREATMENT OF INCENTIVE STOCK OPTIONS.—Section 421 shall not apply to the transfer of stock acquired (in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986) pursuant to the exercise of an incentive stock option (as defined in section 422A). The adjusted basis of any stock so acquired shall be determined on the basis of the treatment prescribed by the preceding sentence."

(B) Paragraph (3) of section 57(a) of the 1986 Code is hereby repealed.

(C) The amendments made by this paragraph shall apply with respect to options exercised after October 16, 1987.

(15) Clause (i) of section 56(a)(1)(A) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "REAL" in the heading and inserting in lieu thereof "PERSONAL".

(17) Subparagraph (A) of section 56(g)(4) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new clauses:

"(vi) ELECTION TO HAVE CUMULATIVE LIMITATION.—

"(I) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any property placed in service during a taxable year to which an election under this clause applies, in lieu of applying clause (i), the depreciation deduction for such property for any taxable year shall be the lesser of the accumulated 168(g) depreciation or the accumulated book depreciation; reduced by the aggregate amount of the depreciation deductions determined under this subclause with respect to such property for prior taxable years.

"(II) ACCUMULATED 168(g) DEPRECIATION.—For purposes of this clause, the term 'accumulated section 168(g) depreciation' means the aggregate amount of the depreciation deductions determined under the alternative system of section 168(g) with respect to the property for all periods before the close of the taxable year.

"(III) ACCUMULATED BOOK DEPRECIATION.—For purposes of this clause, the term 'accumulated book depreciation' means the aggregate amount of the depreciation deductions determined under the method used for book purposes with respect to the property for all periods before the close of the taxable year.

"(IV) ELECTION.—The taxpayer may make an election under this clause for any taxable year beginning after 1989. Such an election, once made with respect to any such taxable year, shall apply to all property placed in service during such taxable year, and shall be irrevocable.

"(V) SIMILAR RULES FOR PROPERTY DESCRIBED IN CLAUSE (i), (iii), OR (iv).—Rules similar to the rules of the preceding provisions of this clause shall also apply in the case of property to which clause (ii), (iii), or (iv) applies.

"(vii) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN LEASED PROPERTY.—In the case of any property subject to a lease where the income of the taxpayer for book purposes with respect to such property is determined without an allowance for depreciation, the excess of—

"(I) the alternative minimum taxable income from the lease (determined without regard to this subsection and any allowance for depreciation), over

"(II) the income from such lease reported for book purposes, shall be treated as the depreciation deduction determined with respect to such property determined for book purposes. In the case of property described in the preceding sentence, the rules of clause (vi) shall apply whether or not the taxpayer makes an election under such clause.

"(viii) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN PROPERTY.—In the case of any property described in paragraph (1), (2), (3), or (4) of section 168(f), the amount of depreciation allowable for purposes of the regular tax shall be treated as the amount allowable under the alternative system of section 168(g)."

(18) Paragraph (4) of section 56(g) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(I) ADJUSTED BASIS.—The adjusted basis of any property with respect to which an adjustment under this paragraph applies shall be determined by applying the treatment prescribed in this paragraph."

(19) Subsection (a) of section 56 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) SECTION 87 NOT APPLICABLE.—Section 87 (relating to alcohol fuel credit) shall not apply."

(c) AMENDMENTS TO SECTION 57 OF THE 1986 CODE.—

(1) Clause (iii) of section 57(a)(5)(C) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting "(whether a current or advance refunding)" after "any refunding bond".

(2) Clause (i) of section 57(a)(5)(C) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(i) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this part, the term 'specified private activity bond' means any private activity bond (as defined in section 141) which is issued after August 7, 1986, and the interest on which is not includible in gross income under section 103."

(3) Subparagraph (A) of section 57(a)(6) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting "or 642(c)" after "section 170".

(d) AMENDMENTS TO SECTION 58 OF THE 1986 CODE.—

(1) Paragraph (2) of section 58(a) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "(as modified by section 461(i)(4)(A))", and

(B) by striking out "section 469(d), without regard to paragraph (1)(B) thereof" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 469(c)".

(2) Paragraph (3) of section 58(a) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "section 469(g)(1)(C)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 469(j)(2)".

(3) Subsection (a) of section 58 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) DETERMINATION OF LOSS.—In determining the amount of the loss from any tax shelter farm activity, the adjustments of sections 56 and 57 shall apply."

(4) Subsection (b) of section 58 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out paragraphs (1), (2), and (3), and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(1) the adjustments of sections 56 and 57 shall apply,

"(2) the provisions of section 469(m) (relating to phase-in of disallowance) shall not apply, and

"(3) in lieu of applying section 469(j)(7), the passive activity loss of a taxpayer shall be computed without regard to qualified housing interest (as defined in section 56(e))."

(e) AMENDMENTS TO SECTION 59 OF THE 1986 CODE.—

(1) Paragraph (2) of section 59(e) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "would have been allowable as a deduction" and inserting in lieu thereof "would have been allowable as a deduction (determined without regard to section 291)".

(2) Subsection (h) of section 59 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "taxable year—" and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof "taxable year with the adjustments of sections 56, 57, and 58."

(3) Paragraph (1) of section 59(a) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (B), by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof ", and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D) the determination of whether any income is high-taxed income for purposes of section 904(d)(2) were made on the basis of the applicable rate specified in section 55(b)(1)(A) in lieu of the highest rate of tax specified in section 1 or 11 (whichever applies)."

(4) Subsection (i) of section 59 of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "of this subtitle" and inserting in lieu thereof "of this subtitle (other than this part)", and

(B) by striking out "by this title" and inserting in lieu thereof "by this subtitle".

(f) TRANSITIONAL PROVISIONS.—

(1) In the case of the taxable year of an estate or trust which begins before January 1, 1987, and ends on or after such date, the items of tax preference apportioned to any beneficiary of such estate or trust under section 58(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1986) shall be taken into account for purposes of determining the amount of the tax imposed by section 55 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1986) on such beneficiary for such beneficiary's taxable year in which such taxable year of the estate or trust ends.

(2) The last sentence of subparagraph (B) of section 701(f)(6) of the Reform Act is amended to read as follows: "The aggregate amount of investment tax credits with respect to the unit in Mississippi allowed solely by reason of being described in this subparagraph shall not exceed $141,000,000."

(3) Subsection (f) of section 701 of the Reform Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7) AGREEMENT VESSEL DEPRECIATION ADJUSTMENT.—

"(A) For purposes of part VI of subchapter A of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, in the case of a qualified taxpayer, alternative minimum taxable income for the taxable year shall be reduced by an amount equal to the agreement vessel depreciation adjustment.

"(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the agreement vessel depreciation adjustment shall be an amount equal to the depreciation deduction that would have been allowable for such year under section 167 of such Code with respect to agreement vessels placed in service before January 1, 1987, if the basis of such vessels had not been reduced under section 607 of the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, as amended, and if depreciation with respect to such vessel had been computed using the 25-year straight-line method. The aggregate amount by which basis of a qualified taxpayer is treated as not reduced by reason of this subparagraph shall not exceed $100,000,000.

"(C) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified taxpayer' means a parent corporation incorporated in the State of Delaware on December 1, 1972, and engaged in water transportation, and includes any other corporation which is a member of the affiliated group of which the parent corporation is the common parent. No taxpayer shall be treated as a qualified corporation for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1991."

(4)(A) If any property to which this paragraph applies is placed in service in a taxable year which begins before January 1, 1987, and ends on or after August 1, 1986, the item of tax preference determined under section 57(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1986) with respect to such property shall be the excess of—

(i) the amount allowable as a deduction for depreciation or amortization for such taxable year, over

(ii) the amount which would be determined for such taxable year under the rules of paragraph (1) or (5) (whichever is appropriate) of section 56(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1986).

(B) This paragraph shall apply to any property—

(i) which is described in paragraph (4) or (12) of section 57(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (as so in effect), and

(ii) to which paragraph (1) or (5) of section 56(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 would apply if the taxable year referred to in subparagraph (A) began after December 31, 1986.

(5) In determining the amount of the alternative minimum tax foreign tax credit under section 59 of the 1986 Code, there shall not be taken into account any taxes paid or accrued in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, which are treated under section 904(c) of the 1986 Code as paid or accrued in a taxable year beginning on or before December 31, 1986.

(g) MISCELLANEOUS AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Subparagraph (K) of section 26(b)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out the comma at the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof ").".

(2)(A) So much of section 38(c) as precedes paragraph (4) thereof is amended to read as follows:

"(c) LIMITATION BASED ON AMOUNT OF TAX.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The credit allowed under subsection (a) for any taxable year shall not exceed the excess (if any) of the taxpayer's net income tax over the greater of—

"(A) the tentative minimum tax for the taxable year, or

"(B) 25 percent of so much of the taxpayer's net regular tax liability as exceeds $25,000.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term 'net income tax' means the sum of the regular tax liability and the tax imposed by section 55, reduced by the credits allowable under subparts A and B of this part, and the term 'net regular tax liability' means the regular tax liability reduced by the sum of the credits allowable under subparts A and B of this part.

"(2) REGULAR INVESTMENT TAX CREDIT MAY OFFSET 25 PERCENT OF MINIMUM TAX.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a C corporation, the amount determined under paragraph (1)(A) shall be reduced by the lesser of—

"(i) the portion of the regular investment tax credit not used against the normal limitation, or

"(ii) 25 percent of the taxpayer's tentative minimum tax for the taxable year.

"(B) PORTION OF REGULAR INVESTMENT TAX CREDIT NOT USED AGAINST NORMAL LIMIT.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the portion of the regular investment tax credit for any taxable year not used against the normal limitation is the excess (if any) of—

"(i) the portion of the credit under subsection (a) which is attributable to the application of the regular percentage under section 46, over

"(ii) the limitation of paragraph (1) (without regard to this paragraph) reduced by the portion of the credit under subsection (a) which is not so attributable.

"(C) LIMITATION.—In no event shall this paragraph permit the allowance of a credit which would result in a net chapter 1 tax less than an amount equal to 10 percent of the amount determined under section 55(b)(1)(A) without regard to the alternative tax net operating loss deduction. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term 'net chapter 1 tax' means the sum of the regular tax liability for the taxable year and the tax imposed by section 55 for the taxable year, reduced by the sum of the credits allowable under this part for the taxable year (other than under section 34)."

(B) Subsection (c) of section 38 of the 1986 Code is amended—

(i) by redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (3), and

(ii) by striking out "subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1)" each place it appears in such paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof "subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1).

(3)(A) Subsection (c) of section 47 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "or D" and inserting in lieu thereof "D, or G".

SEC. 108. AMENDMENTS RELATED TO TITLE VIII OF THE REFORM ACT.

(a) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 801 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1)(A) Subparagraph (B) of section 448(d)(2) of the 1986 Code (defining qualified personal service corporation) is amended by striking out "or indirectly" and inserting in lieu thereof "(or indirectly through 1 or more partnerships, S corporations, or qualified personal service corporations not described in paragraph (2) or (3) of subsection (a))".

(B) Section 448(d) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) USE OF RELATED PARTIES, ETC.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to prevent the use of related parties, pass-thru entities, or intermediaries to avoid the application of this section."

(2) Subparagraph (C) of section 448(d)(4) of the 1986 Code (relating to special rules for application of paragraph (2)) is amended by striking out "all such members" and inserting in lieu thereof "such group".

(3) Paragraph (2) of section 461(i) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR SPUDDING OF OIL OR GAS WELLS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a tax shelter, economic performance with respect to amounts paid during the taxable year for drilling an oil or gas well shall be treated as having occurred within a taxable year if drilling of the well commences before the close of the 90th day after the close of the taxable year.

"(B) DEDUCTION LIMITED TO CASH BASIS.—

"(i) TAX SHELTER PARTNERSHIPS.—In the case of a tax shelter which is a partnership, in applying section 704(d) to a deduction or loss for any taxable year attributable to an item which is deductible by reason of subparagraph (A), the term 'cash basis' shall be substituted for the term 'adjusted basis'.

"(ii) OTHER TAX SHELTERS.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, in the case of a tax shelter other than a partnership, the aggregate amount of the deductions allowable by reason of subparagraph (A) for any taxable year shall be limited in a manner similar to the limitation under clause (i).

"(C) CASH BASIS DEFINED.—For purposes of subparagraph (B), a partner's cash basis in a partnership shall be equal to the adjusted basis of such partner's interest in the partnership, determined without regard to—

"(i) any liability of the partnership, and

"(ii) any amount borrowed by the partner with respect to such partnership which—

"(I) was arranged by the partnership or by any person who participated in the organization, sale, or management of the partnership (or any person related to such person within the meaning of section 465(b)(3)(C)), or

"(II) was secured by any asset of the partnership."

"(4) MAJORITY INTEREST TAXABLE YEAR; LIMITATION ON REQUIRED CHANGES.—

"(A) MAJORITY INTEREST TAXABLE YEAR DEFINED.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(B)(i)—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The term 'majority interest taxable year' means the taxable year (if any) which, on each testing day, constituted the taxable year of 1 or more partners having (on such day) an aggregate interest in partnership profits and capital of more than 50 percent.

"(ii) TESTING DAYS.—The testing days shall be—

"(I) the 1st day of the partnership taxable year (determined without regard to clause (i)), or

"(II) the days during such representative period as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(B) FURTHER CHANGE NOT REQUIRED FOR 3 YEARS.—Except as provided in regulations necessary to prevent the avoidance of this section, if, by reason of paragraph (1)(B)(i), the taxable year of a partnership is changed, such partnership shall not be required to change to another taxable year for either of the 2 taxable years following the year of change."

(2) Clause (iii) of section 706(b)(1)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "or such other period as the Secretary may prescribe in regulations" and inserting in lieu thereof "unless the Secretary by regulations prescribes another period".

(3) Section 706(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) APPLICATION WITH OTHER SECTIONS.—Except as provided in regulations, for purposes of determining the taxable year to which a partnership is required to change by reason of this subsection, changes in taxable years of other persons required by this subsection, section 441(i), section 584(h), section 645, or section 1378(a) shall be taken into account."

(4) Paragraph (2) of section 441(i) of the 1986 Code (defining personal service corporation) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"A corporation shall not be treated as a personal service corporation unless more than 10 percent of the stock (by value) in such corporation is held by employee-owners (within the meaning of section 269A(b)(2), as modified by the preceding sentence). If a corporation is a member of an affiliated group filing a consolidated return, all members of such group shall be taken into account in determining whether such corporation is a personal service corporation."

(5)(A) Section 584 of the 1986 Code (relating to common trust funds) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) TAXABLE YEAR OF COMMON TRUST FUND.—For purposes of this subtitle, the taxable year of any common trust fund shall be the calendar year."

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall apply only to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1987. For purposes of section 806(e)(2) of the Reform Act—

"(2) SALES OF STOCK, ETC.—Section 453(k)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as added by subsection (a), shall apply to sales after December 31, 1986, in taxable years ending after such date."

(5) Paragraph (3) of section 812(c) of the Reform Act (as so redesignated) is amended by striking out subparagraphs (B) and (C) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(B) such change shall be treated as having been made with the consent of the Secretary,

"(C) the period for taking into account adjustments under section 481 of such Code by reason of such change shall be equal to 4 years, and

"(D) except as provided in paragraph (4), the amount taken into account in each of such 4 years shall be the applicable percentage (determined in accordance with the following table) of the net adjustment:

"In the case of the:	The applicable percentage is:
1st taxable year.......	15
2nd taxable year.....	25
3rd taxable year......	30
4th taxable year......	30.

If the taxpayer's last taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987, was the taxpayer's 1st taxable year in which sales were made under a revolving credit plan, all adjustments under section 481 of such Code shall be taken into account in the taxpayer's 1st taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986."

(6) Subsection (c) of section 812 of the Reform Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(4) ACCELERATION OF ADJUSTMENTS WHERE CONTRACTION IN AMOUNT OF INSTALLMENT OBLIGATIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If the percentage determined under subparagraph (B) for any taxable year in the adjustment period exceeds the percentage which would otherwise apply under paragraph (3)(D) for such taxable year (determined after the application of this paragraph for prior taxable years in the adjustment period)—

"(i) the percentage determined under subparagraph (B) shall be substituted for the applicable percentage which would otherwise apply under paragraph (3)(D), and

"(ii) any increase in the applicable percentage by reason of clause (i) shall be applied to reduce the applicable percentage determined under paragraph (3)(D) for subsequent taxable years in the adjustment period (beginning with the 1st of such subsequent taxable years).

"(B) DETERMINATION OF PERCENTAGE.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the percentage determined under this subparagraph for any taxable year in the adjustment period is the excess (if any) of—

"(i) the percentage determined by dividing the aggregate contraction in revolving installment obligations by the aggregate face amount of such obligations outstanding as of the close of the taxpayer's last taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987, over

"(ii) the sum of the applicable percentages under paragraph (3)(D) (as modified by this paragraph) for prior taxable years in the adjustment period.

"(C) AGGREGATE CONTRACTION IN REVOLVING INSTALLMENT OBLIGATIONS.—For purposes of subparagraph (B), the aggregate contraction in revolving installment obligations is the amount by which—

"(i) the aggregate face amount of the revolving installment obligations outstanding as of the close of the taxpayer's last taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987, exceeds

"(ii) the aggregate face amount of the revolving installment obligations outstanding as of the close of the taxable year involved.

"(D) REVOLVING INSTALLMENT OBLIGATIONS.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'revolving installment obligations' means installment obligations arising under a revolving credit plan.

"(E) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN OBLIGATIONS DISPOSED OF ON OR BEFORE OCTOBER 26, 1987.—For purposes of subparagraphs (B)(i) and (C)(i), in determining the aggregate face amount of revolving installment obligations outstanding as of the close of the taxpayer's last taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987, there shall not be taken into account any obligation—

"(i) which was disposed of to an unrelated person on or before October 26, 1987, or

"(ii) was disposed of to an unrelated person on or after such date pursuant to a binding written contract in effect on October 26, 1987, and at all times thereafter before such disposition.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term 'unrelated person' means any person who is not a related person (as defined in section 453(g) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986).

"(5) LIMITATION ON LOSSES FROM SALES OF OBLIGATIONS UNDER REVOLVING CREDIT PLANS.—If 1 or more obligations arising under a revolving credit plan and taken into account under paragraph (3) are disposed of during the adjustment period, then, notwithstanding any other provision of law—

"(A) no losses from such dispositions shall be recognized, and

"(B) the aggregate amount of the adjustment for taxable years in the adjustment period (in reverse order of time) shall be reduced by the amount of such losses.

"(6) ADJUSTMENT PERIOD.—For purposes of paragraphs (4) and (5), the adjustment period is the 4-year period under paragraph (3)."

(h) AMENDMENT RELATED TO SECTION 821 OF THE REFORM ACT.—Section 821(b)(3) of the Reform Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The preceding sentence shall also apply to any taxable year beginning after August 16, 1986, and before January 1, 1987, if the taxpayer treated such income in the same manner for the taxable year preceding such taxable year."

SEC. 109. AMENDMENTS RELATED TO TITLE IX OF THE REFORM ACT.

(a) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 901 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subparagraph (C) of section 46(e)(4) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentences: "Notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this subparagraph, any such election shall terminate effective with respect to the 1st taxable year of the organization making such election which begins after 1986 and during which such organization (or any successor organization) was not at any time the lessee under any lease of regular investment tax credit property. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term 'regular investment tax credit property' means any section 38 property if the regular percentage applied to such property and the amount of qualified investment with respect to such property would have been reduced under paragraph (1) but for an election under this subparagraph."

(2)(A) Paragraph (5) of section 585(c) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) ELECTION BINDING ON ALL MEMBERS OF GROUP.—Any election under this subsection made by a member of a parent-subsidiary controlled group shall be binding on all banks which are members of such group for the taxable year of the election."

(B) Subclause (I) of section 585(c)(3)(A)(iii) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "or such greater amount as the taxpayer may designate" and inserting in lieu thereof "or such higher percentage of such net amount as the taxpayer may elect".

(C) Clause (ii) of section 585(c)(3)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "designates an amount" and inserting in lieu thereof "elects a higher percentage".

(3) Paragraph (4) of section 585(c) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"If the amount of the reserve referred to in subparagraph (B) as of the close of any taxable year exceeds the outstanding balance (as of such time) of the loans referred to in subparagraph (B), such excess shall be included in gross income for such taxable year."

(b) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 902 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Paragraph (3) of section 902(f) of the Reform Act is amended—

(A) in subparagraph (F), by striking out "distribution company" and inserting in lieu thereof "distribution facility",

(B) in subparagraph (L), by striking out "waterfront project" and inserting in lieu thereof "2 Festival Market Place projects at Union Pier Terminal and 1 project at the Remount Road Container Yard, State Pier No. 15 at North Charleston Terminal",

(C) in subparagraph (M), by striking out "Pontabla" and inserting in lieu thereof "Pontalba",

(D) in subparagraph (P), by striking out "Birmingham, Alabama," and inserting in lieu thereof "Homewood, Alabama, the", and

(E) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraphs:

"(T) Bellows Falls, Vermont—building project.

"(U) East Broadway Project, Louisville, Kentucky.

"(V) O.K. Industries, Oklahoma."

(2) Paragraph (4) of section 902(f) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "subparagraph" and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph".

(3)(A) Paragraph (3) of section 265(b) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(3) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN TAX-EXEMPT OBLIGATIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Any qualified tax-exempt obligation acquired after August 7, 1986, shall be treated for purposes of paragraph (2) and section 291(e)(1)(B) as if it were acquired on August 7, 1986.

"(B) QUALIFIED TAX-EXEMPT OBLIGATION.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'qualified tax-exempt obligation' means a tax-exempt obligation—

"(I) which is issued after August 7, 1986, by a qualified small issuer,

"(II) which is not a private activity bond (as defined in section 141), and

"(III) which is designated by the issuer for purposes of this paragraph.

"(ii) CERTAIN BONDS NOT TREATED AS PRIVATE ACTIVITY BONDS.—For purposes of clause (i)(II), there shall not be treated as a private activity bond—

"(I) any qualified 501(c)(3) bond (as defined in section 145), or

"(II) any obligation issued to refund (or which is part of a series of obligations issued to refund) an obligation issued before August 8, 1986, which was not an industrial development bond (as defined in section 103(b)(2) as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1986) or a private loan bond (as defined in section 103(o)(2)(A), as so in effect, but without regard to any exemption from such definition other than section 103(o)(2)(A)).

"(C) QUALIFIED SMALL ISSUER.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of subparagraph (B), the term 'qualified small issuer' means, with respect to obligations issued during any calendar year, any issuer if the reasonably anticipated amount of tax-exempt obligations (other than obligations described in clause (ii)) which will be issued by such issuer during such calendar year does not exceed $10,000,000.

"(ii) OBLIGATIONS NOT TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT IN DETERMINING STATUS AS QUALIFIED SMALL ISSUER.—For purposes of clause (i), an obligation is described in this clause if such obligation is—

"(I) a private activity bond (other than a qualified 501(c)(3) bond, as defined in section 145),

"(II) an obligation to which section 141(a) does not apply by reason of section 1312, 1313, 1316(g), or 1317 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 and which would (if issued on August 15, 1986) have been an industrial development bond (as defined in section 103(b)(2) as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of such Act) or a private loan bond (as defined in section 103(o)(2)(A), as so in effect, but without regard to any exception from such definition other than section 103(o)(2)(A)), or

"(III) an obligation issued to refund (other than to advance refund within the meaning of section 149(d)(5)) any obligation to the extent the amount of the refunding obligation does not exceed the outstanding amount of the refunded obligation.

"(iii) ALLOCATION OF AMOUNT OF ISSUE IN CERTAIN CASES.—In the case of an issue under which more than 1 governmental entity receives benefits, if—

"(I) all governmental entities receiving benefits from such issue irrevocably agree (before the date of issuance of the issue) on an allocation of the amount of such issue for purposes of this subparagraph, and

"(II) such allocation bears a reasonable relationship to the respective benefits received by such entities, then the amount of such issue so allocated to an entity (and only such amount with respect to such issue) shall be taken into account under clause (i) with respect to such entity.

"(D) LIMITATION ON AMOUNT OF OBLIGATIONS WHICH MAY BE DESIGNATED.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Not more than $10,000,000 of obligations issued by an issuer during any calendar year may be designated by such issuer for purposes of this paragraph.

"(ii) CERTAIN REFUNDINGS OF DESIGNATED OBLIGATIONS DEEMED DESIGNATED.—Except as provided in clause (iii), in the case of a refunding (or series of refundings) of a qualified tax-exempt obligation, the refunding obligation shall be treated as a qualified tax-exempt obligation (and shall not be taken into account under clause (i)) if—

"(I) the refunding obligation was not taken into account under subparagraph (C) by reason of clause (ii)(III) thereof,

"(II) the average maturity date of the refunding obligations issued as part of the issue of which such refunding obligation is a part is not later than the average maturity date of the obligations to be refunded by such issue, and

"(III) the refunding obligation has a maturity date which is not later than the date which is 30 years after the date the original qualified tax-exempt obligation was issued.

Subclause (II) shall not apply if the average maturity of the issue of which the original qualified tax-exempt obligation was a part (and of the issue of which the obligations to be refunded are a part) is 3 years or less. For purposes of this clause, average maturity shall be determined in accordance with section 147(b)(2)(A).

"(iii) CERTAIN OBLIGATIONS MAY NOT BE DESIGNATED OR DEEMED DESIGNATED.—No obligation issued as part of an issue may be designated under this paragraph (or may be treated as designated under clause (ii)) if—

"(I) any obligation issued as part of such issue is issued to refund another obligation, and

"(II) the aggregate face amount of such issue exceeds $10,000,000.

"(E) AGGREGATION OF ISSUERS.—For purposes of subparagraphs (C) and (D)—

"(i) an issuer and all entities which issue obligations on behalf of such issuer shall be treated as 1 issuer,

"(ii) all obligations issued by a subordinate entity shall, for purposes of applying subparagraphs (C) and (D) to each other entity to which such entity is subordinate, be treated as issued by such other entity, and

"(iii) an entity formed (or, to the extent provided by the Secretary, availed of) to avoid the purposes of subparagraph (C) or (D) and all entities benefiting thereby shall be treated as 1 issuer.

"(F) TREATMENT OF COMPOSITE ISSUES.—In the case of an obligation which is issued as part of a direct or indirect composite issue, such obligation shall not be treated as a qualified tax-exempt obligation unless—

"(i) the requirements of this paragraph are met with respect to such composite issue (determined by treating such composite issue as a single issue), and

"(ii) the requirements of this paragraph are met with respect to each separate lot of obligations which are part of the issue (determined by treating each such separate lot as a separate issue)."

(B) In the case of any obligation issued after August 7, 1986, and before January 1, 1987, the time for making a designation with respect to such obligation under section 265(b)(3)(B)(iii) of the 1986 Code shall not expire before January 1, 1989.

(C) If—

(i) an obligation is issued on or after January 1, 1986, and on or before August 7, 1986,

(ii) when such obligation was issued, the issuer made a designation that it intended to qualify under section 802(e)(3) of H.R. 3838 of the 99th Congress as passed by the House of Representatives, and

(iii) the issuer makes an election under this subparagraph with respect to such obligation, for purposes of section 265(b)(3) of the 1986 Code, such obligation shall be treated as issued on August 8, 1986.

(D)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), the following provisions of section 265(b)(3) of the 1986 Code (as amended by this subparagraph (A)) shall apply to obligations issued after June 30, 1987:

(I) subparagraph (C)(ii)(III),

(II) clauses (ii) and (iii) of subparagraph (D), and

(III) subparagraphs (E) and (F).

(ii) At the election of an issuer (made at such time and in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate may prescribe), the provisions referred to in clause (i) shall apply to such issuer as if included in the amendments made by section 902(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

(4) Subparagraph (B) of section 291(e)(1) of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating the clause (iv) added by section 902(c)(2) of the Reform Act as clause (v).

(5) Clause (i) of section 291(e)(1)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "section 582(a)(2)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 585(a)(2)".

(6) Paragraph (1) of section 902(e) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "Section 163(h)(12)" and inserting in lieu thereof "Section 163(i)(2) (as redesignated by section 511(b) of this Act)".

(7) Paragraph (4) of section 902(f) of the Reform Act is amended—

(A) by inserting "and qualified 501(c)(3) bonds designated by such Governor for purposes of this paragraph," after "1987),", and

(B) by striking out "subparagraph" in the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph".

(c) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 903 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 172(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating subparagraphs (L) and (M) as subparagraphs (K) and (L), respectively.

(2) Subparagraph (A) of section 172(b)(1) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "Except" and all that follows down through "a net operating loss" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, a net operating loss".

(3) Subparagraph (B) of section 172(b)(1) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(B) Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, a net operating loss for any taxable year ending after December 31, 1975, shall be a net operating loss carryover to each of the 15 taxable years following the taxable year of the loss."

(d) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 905 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subsection (l) of section 165 of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating paragraph (6) as paragraph (7) and by striking out paragraph (5) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(5) ELECTION TO TREAT AS ORDINARY LOSS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In lieu of any election under paragraph (1), the taxpayer may elect to treat the amount referred to in paragraph (1) for the taxable year as an ordinary loss described in subsection (c)(2) incurred during the taxable year.

"(B) LIMITATIONS.—

"(i) DEPOSIT MAY NOT BE FEDERALLY INSURED.—No election may be made under subparagraph (A) with respect to any loss on a deposit in a qualified financial institution if part or all of such deposit is insured under Federal law.

"(ii) DOLLAR LIMITATION.—With respect to each financial institution, the aggregate amount of losses attributable to deposits in such financial institution to which an election under subparagraph (A) may be made by the taxpayer for any taxable year shall not exceed $20,000 ($10,000 in the case of a separate return by a married individual). The limitation of the preceding sentence shall be reduced by the amount of any insurance proceeds under any State law which can reasonably be expected to be received with respect to losses on deposits in such institution.

"(6) ELECTION.—Any election by the taxpayer under this subsection for any taxable year—

"(A) shall apply to all losses for such taxable year of the taxpayer on deposits in the institution with respect to which such election was made, and

"(B) may be revoked only with the consent of the Secretary."

(2) Paragraph (1) of section 905(c) of the Reform Act is amended to read as follows:

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1981, and, except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendment made by subsection (b) shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982."

(3) The subsection (f) of section 451 of the 1986 Code which was added by section 905(b) of the 1986 Reform Act is redesignated as subsection (g).

(4) If on the date of the enactment of this Act (or at any time before the date 1 year after such date of enactment) credit or refund of any overpayment of tax attributable to amendments made by section 905 of the Reform Act or by this subsection (or the assessment of any underpayment of tax so attributable) is barred by any law or rule of law—

(A) credit or refund of any such overpayment may nevertheless be made if claim therefore is filed before the date 1 year after such date of enactment, and

(B) assessment of any such underpayment may nevertheless be made if made before the date 1 year after such date of enactment.

"(B) INTEREST RATE FOR DETERMINING ACCRUED BENEFIT OF HIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEES FOR CERTAIN PURPOSES.—In the case of a termination, transfer, or distribution of assets of a plan described in subparagraph (A)(ii) before the 1st year to which the amendment made by subsection (b) applies—

"(i) AMOUNT ELIGIBLE FOR ROLLOVER, INCOME AVERAGING, OR TAX-FREE TRANSFER.—For purposes of determining any eligible amount, the present value of the accrued benefit of any highly compensated employee shall be determined by using an interest rate not less than the highest of—

"(I) the applicable rate under the plan's method in effect under the plan on August 16, 1986,

"(II) the highest rate (as of the date of the termination, transfer, or distribution) determined under any of the methods applicable under the plan at any time after August 15, 1986, and before the termination, transfer, or distribution in calculating the present value of the accrued benefit of an employee who is not a highly compensated employee under the plan (or any other plan used in determining whether the plan meets the requirements of section 401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986), or

"(III) 5 percent.

"(ii) ELIGIBLE AMOUNT.—For purposes of clause (i), the term 'eligible amount' means any amount with respect to a highly compensated employee which—

"(I) may be rolled over under section 402(a)(5) of such Code,

"(II) is eligible for income averaging under section 402(e)(1) of such Code, or capital gains treatment under section 402(a)(2) or 403(a)(2) of such Code (as in effect before this Act), or

"(III) may be transferred to another plan without inclusion in gross income.

"(iii) AMOUNTS SUBJECT TO EARLY WITHDRAWAL OR EXCESS DISTRIBUTION TAX.—For purposes of sections 72(t) and 4980A of such Code, there shall not be taken into account the excess (if any) of—

"(I) the amount distributed to a highly compensated employee by reason of such termination or distribution, over

"(II) the amount determined by using the interest rate applicable under clause (i).

"(iv) DISTRIBUTIONS OF ANNUITY CONTRACTS.—If an annuity contract purchased after August 16, 1986, is distributed to a highly compensated employee in connection with such termination or distribution, there shall be included in gross income for the taxable year of such distribution an amount equal to the excess of—

"(I) the purchase price of such contract, over

"(II) the present value of the benefits payable under such contract determined by using the interest rate applicable under clause (i).

Such excess shall not be taken into account for purposes of sections 72(t) and 4980A of such Code.

"(v) HIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEE.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'highly compensated employee' has the meaning given such term by section 414(q) of such Code."

(10) Section 413(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9) PLANS COVERING A PROFESSIONAL EMPLOYEE.—Notwithstanding subsection (a), in the case of a plan (and trust forming part thereof) which covers any professional employee, paragraph (1) shall be applied by substituting 'section 410(a)' for 'section 410', and paragraph (2) shall not apply."

(11) Section 410(b)(4) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) REQUIREMENTS NOT TREATED AS BEING MET BEFORE ENTRY DATE.—An employee shall not be treated as meeting the age and service requirements described in this paragraph until the first date on which, under the plan, any employee with the same age and service would be eligible to commence participation in the plan.

(1) Paragraph (2) of section 1177(b) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "section 143(d)(3)(C)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 146(d)(3)(C)".

(2) Subsection (b) of section 1177 of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "made by this subtitle" and inserting in lieu thereof "made by section 1175".

(3) If any newspaper corporation described in section 1177(b) of the Reform Act, as amended by this subsection, pays in cash a dividend within 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act to the corporation's employee stock ownership plans and if a corporate resolution declaring such dividend was adopted before November 30, 1987, and such resolution specifies that such dividend shall be contingent upon passage by the Congress of technical corrections, then such dividend (to the extent the aggregate amount so paid does not exceed $3,500,000) shall be treated as if it had been declared and paid in 1987 for all purposes of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

SEC. 112. AMENDMENTS RELATED TO TITLE XII OF THE REFORM ACT.

(a) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 1201 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1)(A) Subparagraph (C) of section 904(d)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(C) FINANCIAL SERVICES INCOME.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this subparagraph, the term 'financial services income' means any income which is received or accrued by any person predominantly engaged in the active conduct of a banking, insurance, financing, or similar business, and which is—

"(I) described in clause (ii),

"(II) passive income (determined without regard to subclause (I) of subparagraph (A)(iii)), or

"(III) export financing interest which (but for subparagraph (B)(ii)) would be high withholding tax interest.

"(ii) GENERAL DESCRIPTION OF FINANCIAL SERVICES INCOME.—Income is described in this clause if such income is—

"(I) derived in the active conduct of a banking, financing, or similar business,

"(II) derived from the investment by an insurance company of its unearned premiums or reserves ordinary and necessary for the proper conduct of its insurance business, or

"(III) of a kind which would be insurance income as defined in section 953(a) determined without regard to those provisions of paragraph (1)(A) of such section which limit insurance income to income from countries other than the country in which the corporation was created or organized.

"(iii) EXCEPTIONS.—The term 'financial services income' does not include—

"(I) any high withholding tax interest,

"(II) any dividend from a noncontrolled section 902 corporation, and

"(III) any export financing interest not described in clause (i)(III)."

(B) Clause (i) of section 864(d)(5)(A) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "(C)(iii)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(C)(iii)(III)".

(2) Subparagraph (D) of section 904(d)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Such term does not include any dividend from a noncontrolled section 902 corporation and does not include any financial services income."

(3) Paragraph (3) of section 904(d) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(H) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN HIGH WITHHOLDING TAX INTEREST.—This paragraph shall not apply to any amount which—

"(i) without regard to this paragraph, is high withholding tax interest (including any amount treated as high withholding tax interest under paragraph (2)(B)(iii)), and

"(ii) would (but for this subparagraph) be treated as financial services income under this paragraph.

The amount to which this paragraph does not apply by reason of the preceding sentence shall not exceed the interest or equivalent income of the controlled foreign corporation taken into account in determining financial services income without regard to this subparagraph."

(4) Subparagraph (E) of section 904(d)(3) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "If a controlled foreign corporation meets the requirements of section 954(b)(3)(A) (relating to de minimis rule) for any taxable year, for purposes of this paragraph, none of its foreign base company income (as defined in section 954(a) without regard to section 954(b)(5)) and none of its gross insurance income (as defined in section 954(b)(3)(C)) for such taxable year shall be treated as income in a separate category, except that this sentence shall not apply to any income which (without regard to this sentence) would be treated as financial services income.", and

(B) by striking out "income (other than high withholding tax interest and dividends from a noncontrolled section 902 corporation)" and inserting in lieu thereof "passive income".

(5) Paragraph (2) of section 1201(e) of the Reform Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(J) TREATMENT OF AFFILIATED GROUP FILING CONSOLIDATED RETURN.—For purposes of this paragraph, all members of an affiliated group of corporations filing a consolidated return shall be treated as 1 corporation."

(6) Subparagraph (A) of section 904(d)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "The term" in clause (ii) and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in clause (iii), the term", and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(iv) CLARIFICATION OF APPLICATION OF SECTION 864(d)(6).—In determining whether any income is of a kind which would be foreign personal holding company income, the rules of section 864(d)(6) shall apply only in the case of income of a controlled foreign corporation."

(7) Subparagraph (F) of section 904(d)(3) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(F) SEPARATE CATEGORY.—For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), the term 'separate category' means any category of income described in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), (D), or (E) of paragraph (1).

"(ii) COORDINATION WITH HIGH-TAXED INCOME PROVISIONS.—

"(I) In determining whether any income of a controlled foreign corporation is in a separate category, subclause (III) of paragraph (2)(A)(iii) shall not apply.

"(II) Any income of the taxpayer which is treated as income in a separate category under this paragraph shall be so treated notwithstanding any provision of paragraph (2); except that the determination of whether any amount is high-taxed income shall be made after the application of this paragraph."

(8) Clause (iii) of section 904(d)(2)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(iii) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary may by regulations provide that—

"(I) amounts (not otherwise high withholding tax interest) shall be treated as high withholding tax interest where necessary to prevent avoidance of the purposes of this subparagraph, and

"(II) a tax shall not be treated as a withholding tax or other tax imposed on a gross basis if such tax is in the nature of a prepayment of a tax imposed on a net basis."

(9) Clause (ii) of section 904(d)(2)(I) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "except to the extent that" and all that follows down through "and" at the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"except that—

"(I) such taxes shall be treated as paid or accrued with respect to shipping income to the extent the taxpayer establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that such taxes were paid or accrued with respect to such income,

"(II) in the case of a person described in subparagraph (C)(i), such taxes shall be treated as paid or accrued with respect to financial services income to the extent the taxpayer establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that such taxes were paid or accrued with respect to such income, and

"(III) such taxes shall be treated as paid or accrued with respect to high withholding tax interest to the extent the taxpayer establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that such taxes were paid or accrued with respect to such income, and".

(10) Clause (i) of section 904(d)(2)(E) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "during which it was a controlled foreign corporation" and inserting in lieu thereof "during which it was a controlled foreign corporation and the taxpayer was a related person to such corporation", and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For purposes of this clause, the term 'related person' has the meaning given such term by section 954(d)(3), except that the Secretary may by regulation provide that such section be applied by substituting '10 percent' for '50 percent' each place it appears."

(11) Subparagraph (E) of section 904(d)(1) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "dividends" and inserting in lieu thereof "in the case of a corporation, dividends".

(b) AMENDMENT RELATED TO SECTION 1202 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Paragraph (7) of section 902(c) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "secton 960" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 960", and

(B) by striking out "this section" the second place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "this section and section 960".

(2) Paragraph (1) of section 902(c) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "sections 964 and 986" and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 964(a) and 986".

(3) For purposes of sections 902 and 960 of the 1986 Code, the increase in earnings and profits of any foreign corporation under section 1023(e)(3)(C) of the Reform Act shall be taken into account ratably over the 10-year period beginning with the corporation's first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986.

(4) Paragraph (3) of section 404A(d) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "the amount determined" and inserting in lieu thereof "except as provided in regulations, the amount determined".

(c) AMENDMENT RELATED TO SECTION 1203 OF THE REFORM ACT.—Paragraph (5) of section 904(f) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(F) DISPOSITIONS.—If any separate limitation loss for any taxable year is allocated against any separate limitation income for such taxable year, except to the extent provided in regulations, rules similar to the rules of paragraph (3) shall apply to any disposition of property if gain from such disposition would be in the income category with respect to which there was such separate limitation loss."

(d) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 1211 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subsection (d) of section 865 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) COORDINATION WITH SUBSECTION (C).—

"(A) GAIN NOT IN EXCESS OF DEPRECIATION ADJUSTMENTS SOURCED UNDER SUBSECTION (C).—Notwithstanding paragraph (1), any gain from the sale of an intangible shall be sourced under subsection (c) to the extent such gain does not exceed the depreciation adjustments with respect to such intangible.

"(B) SUBSECTION (C)(2) NOT TO APPLY TO INTANGIBLES.—Paragraph (2) of subsection (c) shall not apply to any gain from the sale of an intangible."

(2) Subparagraph (A) of section 865(e)(1) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "(d), or (f)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(d)(1)(B) or (3), or (f)".

(3)(A) Clause (ii) of section 865(g)(1)(A) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "partnership,".

(B) Subsection (h) of section 865 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) TREATMENT OF PARTNERSHIPS.—In the case of a partnership, except as provided in regulations, this section shall be applied at the partner level."

(4) Subsection (f) of section 865 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(f) STOCK OF AFFILIATES.—If—

"(1) a United States resident sells stock in an affiliate which is a foreign corporation,

"(2) such sale occurs in a foreign country in which such affiliate is engaged in the active conduct of a trade or business, and

"(3) more than 50 percent of the gross income of such affiliate for the 3-year period ending with the close of such affiliate's taxable year immediately preceding the year in which the sale occurred was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business in such foreign country, any gain from such sale shall be sourced outside the United States. For purposes of paragraphs (2) and (3), the United States resident may elect to treat an affiliate and all other corporations which are wholly owned (directly or indirectly) by the affiliate as one corporation."

(5) Effective with respect to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1987, subparagraph (B) of section 865(e)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(B) EXCEPTION.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any sale of inventory property which is sold for use, disposition, or consumption outside the United States if an office or other fixed place of business of the taxpayer in a foreign country materially participated in the sale."

(6)(A) Subsection (g) of section 865 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN STOCK SALES BY RESIDENTS OF PUERTO RICO.—Paragraph (2) shall not apply to the sale by an individual who was a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year of stock in a corporation if—

"(A) such corporation is engaged in the active conduct of a trade or business in Puerto Rico, and

"(B) more than 50 percent of its gross income for the 3-year period ending with the close of such corporation's taxable year immediately preceding the year in which such sale occurred was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business in Puerto Rico.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the taxpayer may elect to treat a corporation and all other corporations which are wholly owned (directly or indirectly) by such corporation as one corporation."

(B) Subsection (i) of section 865 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (1), by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof ", and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) providing that, subject to such conditions (which may include provisions comparable to section 877) as may be provided in such regulations, subsections (e)(1)(B) and (g)(2) shall not apply for purposes of sections 931, 933, and 936."

(7) Subparagraph (B) of section 864(c)(4) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "or" at the end of clause (i), by striking out the period at the end of clause (ii) and inserting in lieu thereof "; or", and by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(iii) is derived from the sale or exchange (outside the United States) through such office or other fixed place of business of personal property described in section 1221(1), except that this clause shall not apply if the property is sold or exchanged for use, consumption, or disposition outside the United States and an office or other fixed place of business of the taxpayer in a foreign country participated materially in such sale."

(8) Section 865 of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating subsections (h), (i), and (j) as subsections (i), (j), and (k), respectively, and by inserting after subsection (g) the following new subsection:

"(h) TREATMENT OF GAINS FROM SALE OF CERTAIN STOCK OR INTANGIBLES AND FROM CERTAIN LIQUIDATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of gain to which this subsection applies—

"(A) such gain shall be sourced outside the United States, but

"(B) subsections (a), (b), and (c) of section 904 and sections 902, 907, and 960 shall be applied separately with respect to such gain.

"(2) GAIN TO WHICH SUBSECTION APPLIES.—This subsection shall apply to—

"(A) GAIN FROM SALE OF CERTAIN STOCK OR INTANGIBLES.—Any gain—

"(i) which is from the sale of stock in a foreign corporation or an intangible (as defined in subsection (d)(2)) and which would otherwise be sourced in the United States under this section,

"(ii) which, under a treaty obligation of the United States (applied without regard to this section), would be sourced outside the United States, and

"(iii) with respect to which the taxpayer chooses the benefits of this subsection.

"(B) GAIN FROM LIQUIDATION IN POSSESSION.—Any gain which is derived from the liquidation of a corporation—

"(i) which is organized in a possession of the United States, and

"(ii) more than 50 percent of the gross income of which during the 3-taxable year period ending with the close of the taxable year immediately preceding the taxable year in which the liquidation occurs is from the active conduct of a trade or business in such possession."

(9) Subparagraph (A) of section 865(e)(1) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "outside the United States" the first place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "in a foreign country".

(10) Subparagraph (B) of section 864(c)(4) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(7) Paragraph (2) of section 1215(c) of the Reform Act is amended to read as follows:

"(2) Transitional rules.—

"(A) General phase-in.—

"(i) In general.—In the case of the 1st 3 taxable years of the taxpayer beginning after December 31, 1986, the amendments made by this section shall not apply to interest expenses paid or accrued by the taxpayer during the taxable year with respect to an aggregate amount of indebtedness which does not exceed the general phase-in amount.

"(ii) General phase-in amount.—Except as provided in clause (iii), the general phase-in amount for purposes of clause (i) is the applicable percentage (determined under the following table) of the aggregate amount of indebtedness of the taxpayer outstanding on November 16, 1985:

"In the case of the:	The applicable percentage is:
1st taxable year ...	75
3rd taxable year...	25.

"(iii) Lower limit where taxpayer reduces indebtedness.—For purposes of applying this subparagraph to interest expenses attributable to any month, the general phase-in amount shall in no event exceed the lowest amount of indebtedness of the taxpayer outstanding as of the close of any preceding month beginning after November 16, 1985. To the extent provided in regulations, the average amount of indebtedness outstanding during any month shall be used (in lieu of the amount outstanding as of the close of such month) for purposes of the preceding sentence.

"(B) Consolidation rule not to apply to certain interest.—

"(i) In general.—In the case of the 1st 5 taxable years of the taxpayer beginning after December 31, 1986—

"(I) subparagraph (A) shall not apply for purposes of paragraph (1) of section 864(e) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as added by this section), but

"(II) such paragraph (1) shall not apply to interest expenses paid or accrued by the taxpayer during the taxable year with respect to an aggregate amount of indebtedness which does not exceed the special phase-in amount.

"(ii) Special phase-in amount.—The special phase-in amount for purposes of clause (i) is the sum of—

"(I) the general phase-in amount as determined for purposes of subparagraph (A),

"(II) the 5-year phase-in amount, and

"(III) the 4-year phase-in amount.

For purposes of applying this subparagraph to interest expense attributable to any month, the special phase-in amount shall in no event exceed the limitation determined under subparagraph (A)(iii).

"(iii) 5-year phase-in amount.—The 5-year phase-in amount is the lesser of—

"(I) the applicable percentage (determined under the following table for purposes of this subclause) of the 5-year debt amount, or

"(II) the applicable percentage (determined under the following table for purposes of this subclause) of the 5-year debt amount reduced by paydowns:

"In the case of the:	The applicable percentage for purposes of subclause (I) is:	The applicable percentage for purposes of subclause (II) is:
1st taxable year	8⅓	10
2nd taxable year	16⅔	25
3rd taxable year	25	50
4th taxable year	33⅓	100
5th taxable year	16⅔	100.

"(iv) 4-YEAR PHASE-IN AMOUNT.—The 4-year phase-in amount is the lesser of—

"(I) the applicable percentage (determined under the following table for purposes of this subclause) of the 4-year debt amount, or

"(II) the applicable percentage (determined under the following table for purposes of this subclause) of the 4-year debt amount reduced by paydowns to the extent such paydowns exceed the 5-year debt amount:

"In the case of the:	The applicable percentage for purposes of subclause (I) is:	The applicable percentage for purposes of subclause (II) is:
1st taxable year	5	6¼
2nd taxable year	10	16⅔
3rd taxable year	15	37½
4th taxable year	20	100
5th taxable year	0	0.

"(v) 5-YEAR DEBT AMOUNT.—The term '5-year debt amount' means the excess (if any) of—

"(I) the amount of the outstanding indebtedness of the taxpayer on May 29, 1985, over

"(II) the amount of the outstanding indebtedness of the taxpayer as of the close of December 31, 1983.

The 5-year debt amount shall not exceed the aggregate amount of indebtedness of the taxpayer outstanding on November 16, 1985.

"(vi) 4-YEAR DEBT AMOUNT.—The term '4-year debt amount' means the excess (if any) of—

"(I) the amount referred to in clause (v)(II), over

"(II) the amount of the outstanding indebtedness of the taxpayer as of the close of December 31, 1982.

The 4-year debt amount shall not exceed the aggregate amount of indebtedness of the taxpayer outstanding on November 16, 1985, reduced by the 5-year debt amount.

"(vii) PAYDOWNS.—For purposes of applying this subparagraph to interest expenses attributable to any month, the term 'paydowns' means the excess (if any) of—

"(I) the aggregate amount of indebtedness of the taxpayer outstanding on November 16, 1985, over

"(II) the lowest amount of indebtedness of the taxpayer outstanding as of the close of any preceding month beginning after November 16, 1985 (or, to the extent provided in regulations under subparagraph (A)(iii), the average amount of indebtedness outstanding during any such month).

"(C) COORDINATION OF SUBPARAGRAPHS (A) AND (B).—In applying subparagraph (B), there shall first be taken into account indebtedness to which subparagraph (A) applies.

"(D) SPECIAL RULES.—

"(i) In the case of the 1st 9 taxable years of the taxpayer beginning after December 31, 1986, the amendments made by this section shall not apply to interest expenses paid or accrued by the taxpayer during the taxable year with respect to an aggregate amount of indebtedness which does not exceed the applicable percentage (determined under the following table) of the indebtedness described in clause (iii) or (iv):

"In the case of the:	The applicable percentage is:
1st taxable year	90
2nd taxable year	80
3rd taxable year	70
4th taxable year	60
5th taxable year	50
6th taxable year	40
7th taxable year	30
8th taxable year	20
9th taxable year	10.

"(ii) The provisions of this subparagraph shall apply in lieu of the provisions of subparagraphs (A) and (B).

"(iii) INDEBTEDNESS OUTSTANDING ON MAY 29, 1985.—Indebtedness is described in this clause if it is indebtedness (which was outstanding on May 29, 1985) of a corporation incorporated on June 13, 1917, which has its principal place of business in Bartlesville, Oklahoma.

"(iv) INDEBTEDNESS OUTSTANDING ON MAY 29, 1985.—Indebtedness is described in this clause if it is indebtedness (which was outstanding on May 29, 1985) of a member of an affiliated group (as defined in section 1504(a)), the common parent of which was incorporated on August 26, 1926, and has its principal place of business in Harrison, New York.

"(E) TREATMENT OF AFFILIATED GROUP.—For purposes of this paragraph, all members of the same affiliated group of corporations (as defined in section 864(e)(5)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as added by this section) shall be treated as 1 taxpayer whether or not such members filed a consolidated return."

"(F) ELECTION TO HAVE PARAGRAPH NOT APPLY.—A taxpayer may elect (at such time and in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate may prescribe) to have this paragraph not apply. In the case of members of the same affiliated group (as so defined), such an election may be made only if each member consents to such election."

(19)(A) Subsection (a) of section 6046 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (2), by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (4), and by inserting after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

"(3) each person (not described in paragraph (2)) who, at any time after January 1, 1987, is treated as a United States shareholder under section 953(c) with respect to a foreign corporation, and".

(B) Subsection (b) of section 6046 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "subsection (a)(2)" and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph (2) or (3) of subsection (a)".

(C) Subsection (a) of section 6046 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"In the case of a foreign corporation with respect to which any person is treated as a United States shareholder under section 953(c), paragraph (1) shall be treated as including a reference to each United States person who is an officer or director of such corporation."

(20) Subparagraph (B) of section 954(c)(1) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"In the case of any regular dealer in property, gains and losses from the sale or exchange of any such property or arising out of bona fide hedging transactions reasonably necessary to the conduct of the business of being a dealer in such property shall not be taken into account under this subparagraph. Gains and losses from the sale or exchange of any property which, in the hands of the controlled foreign corporation, is property described in section 1221(1) also shall not be taken into account under this subparagraph."

(21) Subsection (c) of section 953 (as amended by this subsection) is amended by striking out paragraph (7) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(7) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 1248.—If any person is treated under paragraph (1) as a United States shareholder with respect to any foreign corporation, for purposes of section 1248, such person shall be treated as meeting the stock ownership requirements of section 1248(a)(2) with respect to such foreign corporation.

"(8) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this subsection, including—

"(A) regulations preventing the avoidance of this subsection through cross insurance arrangements or otherwise, and

"(B) regulations which may provide that a person will not be treated as a United States shareholder under paragraph (1) with respect to any foreign corporation if neither such person (nor any related person to such person) is (directly or indirectly) insured under any policy of insurance or reinsurance issued by such foreign corporation."

(22) Subclause (III) of section 952(c)(1)(B)(iii) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "insurance income" and inserting in lieu thereof "insurance income or foreign personal holding company income,".

(23) Clause (iii) of section 952(c)(1)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating subclauses (III) and (IV) as subclauses (V) and (VI), respectively, and by inserting after subclause (II) the following new subclauses:

"(III) foreign base company sales income,

"(IV) foreign base company services income,".

(24) Clause (ii) of section 952(c)(1)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "In determining the deficit attributable to qualified activities described in clause (iii)(III) or (IV), deficits in earnings and profits (to the extent not previously taken into account under this section) for taxable years beginning after 1962 and before 1987 also shall be taken into account. In the case of the qualified activity described in clause (iii)(II), the rule of the preceding sentence shall apply, except that '1982' shall be substituted for '1962'."

(25)(A) Paragraph (1) of section 952(c) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) CERTAIN DEFICITS OF MEMBER OF THE SAME CHAIN OF CORPORATIONS MAY BE TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—A controlled foreign corporation may elect to reduce the amount of its subpart F income for any taxable year which is attributable to any qualified activity by the amount of any deficit in earnings and profits of a qualified chain member for a taxable year ending with (or within) the taxable year of such controlled foreign corporation to the extent such deficit is attributable to such activity. To the extent any deficit reduces subpart F income under the preceding sentence, such deficit shall not be taken into account under subparagraph (B).

"(ii) QUALIFIED CHAIN MEMBER.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'qualified chain member' means, with respect to any controlled foreign corporation, any other corporation which is created or organized under the laws of the same foreign country as the controlled foreign corporation but only if—

"(I) all the stock of such other corporation (other than directors' qualifying shares) is owned at all times during the taxable year in which the deficit arose (directly or through 1 or more corporations other than the common parent) by such controlled foreign corporation, or

"(II) all the stock of such controlled foreign corporation (other than directors' qualifying shares) is owned at all times during the taxable year in which the deficit arose (directly or through 1 or more corporations other than the common parent) by such other corporation.

"(iii) COORDINATION.—This subparagraph shall be applied after subparagraphs (A) and (B)."

(B) Subparagraph (B) of section 954(c)(3) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof the following: "or creates (or increases) a deficit which under section 952(c) may reduce the subpart F income of the payor or another controlled foreign corporation".

(j) AMENDMENT RELATED TO SECTION 1224 OF THE REFORM ACT.—Paragraph (2) of section 901(g) of the 1986 Code and section 936(d)(3)(B) of the 1986 Code are each amended by striking out "section 957(c)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 957(c) (as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1986)".

(k) AMENDMENT RELATED TO SECTION 1225 OF THE REFORM ACT.—Subsection (c) of section 1225 of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "March 1, 1986" and inserting in lieu thereof "January 1, 1986".

(l) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 1226 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subsection (a) of section 246A of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out the last sentence.

(2)(A) Paragraph (8) of section 245 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(8) DISALLOWANCE OF FOREIGN TAX CREDIT.—No credit shall be allowed under section 901 for any taxes paid or accrued (or treated as paid or accrued) with respect to the United States-source portion of any dividend received by a corporation from a qualified 10-percent-owned foreign corporation."

(B) Subsection (a) of section 245 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(10) COORDINATION WITH TREATIES.—If—

"(A) any portion of a dividend received by a corporation from a qualified 10-percent-owned foreign corporation would be treated as from sources in the United States under paragraph (9),

"(B) under a treaty obligation of the United States (applied without regard to this subsection), such portion would be treated as arising from sources outside the United States, and

"(C) the taxpayer chooses the benefits of this paragraph, this subsection shall not apply to such dividend (but subsections (a), (b), and (c) of section 904 and sections 902, 907, and 960 shall be applied separately with respect to such portion of such dividend)."

(3) Subsection (a) of section 245 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(11) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 1248.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'dividend' does not include any amount treated as a dividend under section 1248."

(m) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 1228 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subsection (a) of section 1228 of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (3), and by striking out paragraph (4) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(4) the transfer, sale, exchange, or other disposition is part of a single integrated plan, whereby the stock of the corporation described in paragraph (1) becomes owned directly by the 2 corporations specifically referred to in subsection (b) or by such 2 corporations and by 1 or both of their jointly owned direct subsidiaries,

"(5) within 20 days after each transfer, sale, exchange, or other disposition, the person making such transfer, sale, exchange, or other disposition notifies the Internal Revenue Service of the transaction, the date of the transaction, the basis of the stock involved, the holding period for such stock, and such other information as the Internal Revenue Service may require, and

"(6) the integrated plan is completed before the date 4 years after the date of the enactment of the Technical Corrections Act of 1988.

In the case of any underpayment attributable to a failure to meet any requirement of this subsection, the period during which such underpayment may be assessed shall in no event expire before the date 5 years after the date of the enactment of the Technical Corrections Act of 1988."

(2) Subsection (c) of section 1228 of the Reform Act is hereby repealed.

(n) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 1231 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subparagraph (A) of section 1231(g)(2) of the Reform Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "In the case of any transfer (or license) which is not to a foreign person, the preceding sentence shall be applied by substituting 'August 16, 1986' for 'November 16, 1985'."

(2) Subparagraph (B) of section 1231(g)(2) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "was made" and inserting in lieu thereof ", if any, was made".

(3) Subsection (g) of section 1231 of the Reform Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) TRANSITIONAL RULE FOR INCREASE IN GROSS INCOME TEST.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If—

"(i) a corporation fails to meet the requirements of subparagraph (B) of section 936(a)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as amended by subsection (d)(1)) for any taxable year beginning in 1987 or 1988,

"(ii) such corporation would have met the requirements of such subparagraph (B) if such subparagraph had been applied without regard to the amendment made by subsection (d)(1), and

"(iii) 75 percent or more of the gross income of such corporation for such taxable year (or, in the case of a taxable year beginning in 1988, for the period consisting of such taxable year and the preceding taxable year) was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States, such corporation shall nevertheless be treated as meeting the requirements of such subparagraph (B) for such taxable year if it elects to reduce the amount of the qualified possession source investment income for the taxable year by the amount of the shortfall determined under subparagraph (B) of this paragraph.

"(B) DETERMINATION OF SHORTFALL.—The shortfall determined under this subparagraph for any taxable year is an amount equal to the excess of—

"(i) 75 percent of the gross income of the corporation for the 3-year period (or part thereof) referred to in section 936(a)(2)(A) of such Code, over

"(ii) the amount of the gross income of such corporation for such period (or part thereof) which was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States.

"(C) SPECIAL RULE.—Any income attributable to the investment of the amount not treated as qualified possession source investment income under subparagraph (A) shall not be treated as qualified possession source investment income for any taxable year."

(4) Subparagraph (B) of section 1231(a)(1) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "at the end thereof" and inserting in lieu thereof "at the end of the material relating to payment of cost sharing".

(5)(A) Clause (ii) of section 936(d)(4)(A) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(ii) in accordance with a specific authorization granted by the Commissioner of Financial Institutions of Puerto Rico pursuant to regulations issued by such Commissioner."

(B) Clauses (i) and (ii) of section 936(d)(4)(C) of the 1986 Code are each amended by striking out "the Secretary of the Treasury of Puerto Rico" and inserting in lieu thereof "the Commissioner of Financial Institutions of Puerto Rico".

(o) AMENDMENT RELATED TO SECTION 1234 OF THE REFORM ACT.—Subsection (d) of section 6039E of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"Nothing in the preceding sentence shall be construed to require the disclosure of information which is subject to section 245A of the Immigration and Nationality Act (as in effect on the date of the enactment of this sentence)."

(p) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 1235 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 1291(d) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(1) IN GENERAL.—This section shall not apply with respect to any distribution paid by a passive foreign investment company, or any disposition of stock in a passive foreign investment company, if such company is a qualified electing fund for each of its taxable years—

"(A) which begins after December 31, 1986, and for which such company is a passive foreign investment company, and

"(B) which includes any portion of the taxpayer's holding period."

(2) Subsection (c) of section 1296 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "owns at least" and inserting in lieu thereof "owns (directly or indirectly) at least".

(3) Paragraph (3) of section 1291(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (D), by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (E) and inserting in lieu thereof ", and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(F) proper adjustment shall be made for amounts not includible in gross income by reason of section 551(d), 959(a), or 1293(c)."

(4) Paragraph (2) of section 1294(c) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "is disposed of" in subparagraph (A) and inserting in lieu thereof "is transferred",

(B) by striking out "such disposition or cessation" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "such transfer or cessation", and

(C) by striking out "DISPOSITIONS" in the paragraph heading and inserting in lieu thereof "TRANSFERS".

(5) Paragraph (1) of section 1296(b) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the term 'passive income' means any income which is of a kind which would be foreign personal holding company income as defined in section 954(c)."

(6)(A) Subsection (f) of section 1291 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(f) RECOGNITION OF GAIN.—To the extent provided in regulations, in the case of any transfer of stock in a passive foreign investment company where (but for this subsection) there is not full recognition of gain, the excess (if any) of—

"(1) the fair market value of such stock, over

"(2) its adjusted basis, shall be treated as gain from the sale or exchange of such stock and shall be recognized notwithstanding any provision of law. Proper adjustment shall be made to the basis of any such stock for gain recognized under the preceding sentence."

(B) Subsection (e) of section 1291 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "Rules similar" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except to the extent inconsistent with the regulations prescribed under subsection (f), rules similar".

(7)(A) Paragraphs (4) and (5) of section 1291(a) of the 1986 Code are hereby repealed.

(B) Section 1291 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) COORDINATION WITH FOREIGN TAX CREDIT RULES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If there are creditable foreign taxes with respect to any distribution in respect of stock in a passive foreign investment company—

"(A) the amount of such distribution shall be determined for purposes of this section with regard to section 78,

"(B) the excess distribution taxes shall be allocated ratably to each day in the taxpayer's holding period for the stock, and

"(C) to the extent—

"(i) that such excess distribution taxes are allocated to a taxable year referred to in subsection (a)(1)(B), such taxes shall be taken into account under section 901 for the current year, and

"(ii) that such excess distribution taxes are allocated to any other taxable year, such taxes shall reduce (subject to the principles of section 904(d) and not below zero) the increase in tax determined under subsection (c)(2) for such taxable year by reason of such distribution (but such taxes shall not be taken into account under section 901).

"(2) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) CREDITABLE FOREIGN TAXES.—The term 'creditable foreign taxes' means, with respect to any distribution—

"(i) any foreign taxes deemed paid under section 902 with respect to such distribution, and

"(ii) any withholding tax imposed with respect to such distribution, but only if the taxpayer chooses the benefits of section 901 and such taxes are creditable under section 901 (determined without regard to paragraph (1)(C)(ii)).

"(B) EXCESS DISTRIBUTION TAXES.—The term 'excess distribution taxes' means, with respect to any distribution, the portion of the creditable foreign taxes with respect to such distribution which is attributable (on a pro rata basis) to the portion of such distribution which is an excess distribution.

"(C) SECTION 1248 GAIN.—The rules of this subsection also shall apply in the case of any gain which but for this section would be includible in gross income as a dividend under section 1248."

(8) Section 1294 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) CROSS REFERENCE.—

"For provisions providing for interest for the period of the extension under this section, see section 6601."

(9) Paragraph (2) of section 1291(e) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "not" the second place it appears.

(10)(A) Subsection (a) of section 1297 of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (5) and by inserting after paragraph (3) the following new paragraph:

"(4) OPTIONS.—To the extent provided in regulations, if any person has an option to acquire stock, such stock shall be considered as owned by such person. For purposes of this paragraph, an option to acquire such an option, and each one of a series of such options, shall be considered as an option to acquire such stock."

(B) Paragraph (5) of section 1297(a) of the 1986 Code (as redesignated by subparagraph (A)) is amended by striking out "paragraph (2) or (3)" and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph (2), (3), or (4)".

(11) Paragraph (3) of section 904(d) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(I) LOOK-THRU APPLIES TO PASSIVE FOREIGN INVESTMENT COMPANY INCLUSION.—If—

"(i) a passive foreign investment company is a controlled foreign corporation, and

"(ii) the taxpayer is a United States shareholder in such controlled foreign corporation, any amount included in gross income under section 1293 shall be treated as income in a separate category to the extent such amount is attributable to income in such category."

(12) Clause (ii) of section 1291(a)(1)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(ii) any period in the taxpayer's holding period before the 1st day of the 1st taxable year of the company which begins after December 31, 1986, and for which it was a passive foreign investment company, and".

(13) Subparagraph (A) of section 1291(b)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"For purposes of clause (ii), any excess distribution received during such 3-year period shall be taken into account only to the extent it was included in gross income under subsection (a)(1)(B)."

(14) Subparagraph (A) of section 1291(a)(3) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "in the case of an excess distribution" and inserting in lieu thereof "for purposes of applying this section to an excess distribution".

(15) Subsection (b) of section 1293 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "To the extent provided in regulations, if the fund establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that it uses a shorter period than the taxable year to determine shareholders' interests in the earnings of such fund, pro rata shares may be determined by using such shorter period."

(16) Subparagraph (B) of section 1296(b)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "by a corporation which" and inserting in lieu thereof "by a corporation which is predominantly engaged in an insurance business and which".

(17) Paragraph (5) of section 1297(b) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(5) APPLICATION OF PART WHERE STOCK HELD BY OTHER ENTITY.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Under regulations, in any case in which a United States person is treated as owning stock in a passive foreign investment company by reason of subsection (a)—

"(i) any disposition by the United States person or the person owning such stock which results in the United States person being treated as no longer owning such stock, or

"(ii) any distribution of property in respect of such stock to the person holding such stock, shall be treated as a disposition by, or distribution to, the United States person with respect to the stock in the passive foreign investment company.

"(B) AMOUNT TREATED IN SAME MANNER AS PREVIOUSLY TAXED INCOME.—Rules similar to the rules of section 959(b) shall apply to any amount described in subparagraph (A) and to any amount included in gross income under section 1293(a) (or which would have been so included but for section 951(f)) in respect of stock which the taxpayer is treated as owning under subsection (a)."

(18) Subsection (e) of section 1293 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) DETERMINATION OF EARNINGS AND PROFITS.—The earnings and profits of any qualified electing fund shall be determined without regard to paragraphs (4), (5), and (6) of section 312(n). Under regulations, the preceding sentence shall not apply to the extent it would increase earnings and profits by an amount which was previously distributed by the qualified electing fund."

(19) Subsection (d) of section 1248 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7) AMOUNTS INCLUDED IN GROSS INCOME UNDER SECTION 1293.—Earnings and profits of the foreign corporation attributable to any amount previously included in the gross income of such person under section 1293 with respect to the stock sold or exchanged, but only to the extent the inclusion of such amount did not result in an exclusion of an amount under section 1293(c)."

(20) Paragraph (6) of section 1297(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "If a" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in regulations, if a".

(21) Section 1246 of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating the subsection relating to information with respect to certain foreign investment companies as subsection (f), by redesignating the subsection relating to coordination with section 1248 as subsection (g), and by redesignating the subsection relating to cross reference as subsection (h).

(22) Subparagraph (A) of section 1297(b)(3) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(A) neither such corporation (nor any predecessor) was a passive foreign investment company for any prior taxable year,".

(23) Subsection (c) of section 1293 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "shall be treated as a distribution which is not a dividend" and inserting in lieu thereof "shall be treated, for purposes of this chapter, as a distribution which is not a dividend; except that such distribution shall immediately reduce earnings and profits".

(24) Subsection (b) of section 1297 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN FOREIGN CORPORATIONS OWNING STOCK IN 25-PERCENT OWNED DOMESTIC CORPORATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If—

"(i) a foreign corporation is subject to the tax imposed by section 531 (or waives any benefit under any treaty which would otherwise prevent the imposition of such tax), and

"(ii) such foreign corporation owns at least 25 percent (by value) of the stock of a domestic corporation, for purposes of determining whether such foreign corporation is a passive foreign investment company, any qualified stock held by such domestic corporation shall be treated as an asset which does not produce passive income (and is not held for the production of passive income) and any amount included in gross income with respect to such stock shall not be treated as passive income.

"(B) QUALIFIED STOCK.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'qualified stock' means any stock in a C corporation which is a domestic corporation and which is not a regulated investment company or real estate investment trust."

(25) Section 1294 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) TREATMENT OF LOANS TO SHAREHOLDER.—For purposes of this section and section 1293, any loan by a qualified electing fund (directly or indirectly) to a shareholder of such fund shall be treated as a distribution to such shareholder.

(26)(A) Paragraph (2) of section 1296(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "or" at the end of subparagraph (A), by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof ", or", and by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(C) which is interest, a dividend, or a rent or royalty, which is received or accrued from a related person (within the meaning of section 954(d)(3)) to the extent such amount is properly allocable (under regulations prescribed by the Secretary) to income of such related person which is not passive income.

For purposes of subparagraph (C), the term 'related person' has the meaning given such term by section 954(d)(3) determined by substituting 'foreign corporation' for 'controlled foreign corporation' each place it appears in section 954(d)(3)."

(B) The paragraph heading for paragraph (2) of section 1296(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN BANKS AND INSURANCE COMPANIES" and inserting in lieu thereof "EXCEPTIONS".

(27) Subsection (a) of section 1296 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentences:

"A foreign corporation may elect to have the determination under paragraph (2) based on the adjusted bases of its assets in lieu of their value. Such an election, once made, may be revoked only with the consent of the Secretary."

(28) Paragraph (2) of section 1291(d) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(B) ADDITIONAL ELECTION FOR SHAREHOLDER OF CONTROLLED FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—If—

"(I) a passive foreign investment company becomes a qualified electing fund for a taxable year which begins after December 31, 1986,

"(II) the taxpayer holds stock in such company on the first day of such taxable year, and

"(III) such company is a controlled foreign corporation (as defined in section 957(a)), the taxpayer may elect to include in gross income as a dividend received on such first day an amount equal to the portion of the post-1986 earnings and profits of such company attributable (under regulations prescribed by the Secretary) to the stock in such company held by the taxpayer on such first day. The amount treated as a dividend under the preceding sentence shall be treated as an excess distribution and shall be allocated under subsection (a)(1)(A) only to days during periods taken into account in determining the post-1986 earnings and profits so attributable.

"(ii) POST-1986 EARNINGS AND PROFITS.—For purposes of clause (i), the term 'post-1986 earnings and profits' means earnings and profits which were accumulated in taxable years of such company beginning after December 31, 1986, and during the period or periods the stock was held by the taxpayer while the company was a passive foreign investment company.

"(iii) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 959(e).—For purposes of section 959(e), any amount included in gross income under this subparagraph shall be treated as included in gross income under section 1248(a).

"(C) ADJUSTMENTS.—In the case of any stock to which subparagraph (A) or (B) applies—

"(i) the adjusted basis of such stock shall be increased by the gain recognized under subparagraph (A) or the amount treated as a dividend under subparagraph (B), as the case may be, and

"(ii) the taxpayer's holding period in such stock shall be treated as beginning on the first day referred to in such subparagraph."

(29)(A) Clause (ii) of section 904(d)(2)(A) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "or section 1293" and inserting in lieu thereof "or, except as provided in subparagraph (E)(iii) or paragraph (3)(I), section 1293".

(B) Subparagraph (E) of section 904(d)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(iii) TREATMENT OF INCLUSIONS UNDER SECTION 1293.—If any foreign corporation is a non-controlled section 902 corporation with respect to the taxpayer, any inclusion under section 1293 with respect to such corporation shall be treated as a dividend from such corporation."

(30) Clause (ii) of section 864(b)(2)(A) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "section 542(c)(7)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 542(c)(7), 542(c)(10),".

(31) Paragraph (1) of section 1291(c) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Any increase in the tax imposed by this chapter for the current year under subsection (a) to the extent attributable to the amount referred to in subparagraph (B) shall be treated as interest paid under section 6601 on the due date for the current year."

(32) Section 1293 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) OTHER SPECIAL RULES.—

"(1) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN INCOME.—For purposes of determining the amount included in the gross income of any person under this section, the ordinary earnings and net capital gain of a qualified electing fund shall not include any item of income received by such fund if—

"(A) such fund is a controlled foreign corporation (as defined in section 957(a)) and such person is a United States shareholder (as defined in section 951(b)) in such fund, and

"(B) such person establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that—

"(i) such income was subject to an effective rate of income tax imposed by a foreign country greater than 90 percent of the maximum rate of tax specified in section 11, or

"(ii) such income is—

"(I) from sources within the United States,

"(II) effectively connected with the conduct by the qualified electing fund of a trade or business in the United States, and

"(III) not exempt from taxation (or subject to a reduced rate of tax) pursuant to a treaty obligation of the United States.

"(2) PREVENTION OF DOUBLE INCLUSION.—The Secretary shall prescribe such adjustment to the provisions of this section as may be necessary to prevent the same item of income of a qualified electing fund from being included in the gross income of a United States person more than once."

(33) Paragraph (3) of section 1291(b) of the 1986 Code (as amended by paragraph (3)) is amended by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (E), by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (F) and inserting in lieu thereof ", and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(G) if a charitable deduction was allowable under section 642(c) to a trust for any distribution of its income, proper adjustments shall be made for the deduction so allowable to the extent allocable to distributions or gain in respect of stock in a passive foreign investment company."

(34) Paragraph (2) of section 1294(c) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "To the extent provided in regulations, the preceding sentence shall not apply in the case of a transfer in a transaction with respect to which gain or loss is not recognized (in whole or in part), and the transferee in such transaction shall succeed to the treatment under this section of the transferor."

(35) Section 1297 of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d) and by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c) TREATMENT OF STOCK HELD BY POOLED INCOME FUND.—If stock in a passive foreign investment company is owned (or treated as owned under subsection (a)) by a pooled income fund (as defined in section 642(c)(5)) and no portion of any gain from a disposition of such stock may be allocated to income under the terms of the governing instrument of such fund—

"(1) section 1291 shall not apply to any gain on a disposition of such stock by such fund if (without regard to section 1291) a deduction would be allowable with respect to such gain under section 642(c)(3),

"(2) section 1293 shall not apply with respect to such stock, and

"(3) in determining whether section 1291 applies to any distribution in respect of such stock, subsection (d) of section 1291 shall not apply."

(36) Paragraph (1) of section 1297(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "passive foreign investment corporation" and inserting in lieu thereof "passive foreign investment company".

(q) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 1241 OF THE ACT.—

(1)(A) Subparagraph (B) of section 884(b)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(B) LIMITATION.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The increase under subparagraph (A) for any taxable year shall not exceed the accumulated effectively connected earnings and profits as of the close of the preceding taxable year.

"(ii) ACCUMULATED EFFECTIVELY CONNECTED EARNINGS AND PROFITS.—For purposes of clause (i), the term 'accumulated effectively connected earnings and profits' means the excess of—

"(I) the aggregate effectively connected earnings and profits for preceding taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, over

"(II) the aggregate dividend equivalent amounts determined for such preceding taxable years."

(B) For purposes of applying section 884 of the 1986 Code, the earnings and profits of any corporation shall be determined without regard to any increase in earnings and profits under sections 1023(e)(3)(C) and 1021(e)(2)(C) of the Reform Act or arising from section 823(b)(4)(C) of the 1986 Code.

(2)(A) Paragraph (1) of section 884(e) is amended to read as follows:

"(1) LIMITATION ON TREATY EXEMPTION.—No treaty between the United States and a foreign country shall exempt any foreign corporation from the tax imposed by subsection (a) (or reduce the amount thereof) unless—

"(A) such treaty is an income tax treaty, and

"(B) such foreign corporation is a qualified resident of such foreign country."

(B) Paragraph (3) of section 884(e) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(3) COORDINATION WITH WITHHOLDING TAX.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If a foreign corporation is subject to the tax imposed by subsection (a) for any taxable year (determined after the application of any treaty), no tax shall be imposed by section 871(a), 881(a), 1441, or 1442 on any dividends paid by such corporation out of its earnings and profits for such taxable year.

"(B) LIMITATION ON CERTAIN TREATY BENEFITS.—If—

"(i) any dividend described in section 861(a)(2)(B) is received by a foreign corporation, and

"(ii) subparagraph (A) does not apply to such dividend, rules similar to the rules of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of subsection (f)(3) shall apply to such dividend."

(C) Subsection (f) of section 884 of the 1986 Code is amended—

(i) by striking out the 2nd sentence of paragraph (1), and

(ii) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) COORDINATION WITH TREATIES.—

"(A) PAYOR MUST BE QUALIFIED RESIDENT.—In the case of any interest described in paragraph (1) which is paid or accrued by a foreign corporation, no benefit under any treaty between the United States and the foreign country of which such corporation is a resident shall apply unless—

"(i) such treaty is an income tax treaty, and

"(ii) such foreign corporation is a qualified resident of such foreign country.

"(B) RECIPIENT MUST BE QUALIFIED RESIDENT.—In the case of any interest described in paragraph (1) which is received or accrued by any corporation, no benefit under any treaty between the United States and the foreign country of which such corporation is a resident shall apply unless—

"(i) such treaty is an income tax treaty, and

"(ii) such foreign corporation is a qualified resident of such foreign country."

(3) Paragraph (1) of section 884(f) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "sections 871, 881, 1441, and 1442" and inserting in lieu thereof "this subtitle", and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"To the extent provided in regulations, subparagraph (A) shall not apply to interest in excess of the amounts reasonably expected to be deductible under section 882 in computing the effectively connected taxable income of such foreign corporation."

(4) Paragraph (4) of section 884(e) of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (D) and by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

"(C) CORPORATIONS OWNED BY PUBLICLY TRADED DOMESTIC CORPORATIONS.—A foreign corporation which is a resident of a foreign country shall be treated as a qualified resident of such foreign country if—

"(i) such corporation is wholly owned (directly or indirectly) by a domestic corporation, and

"(ii) the stock of such domestic corporation is primarily and regularly traded on an established securities market in the United States."

(5) Subparagraph (A) of section 884(e)(4) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "more than 50 percent" in clause (i) and inserting in lieu thereof "50 percent or more", and

(B) by striking out "or the United States" in clause (ii) and inserting in lieu thereof "or citizens or residents of the United States".

(6) Subsection (e) of section 884 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) EXCEPTION FOR INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS.—This section shall not apply to an international organization (as defined in section 7701(a)(18))."

(7) Subparagraph (B) of section 861(a)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "other than under section 884(d)(2)" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "other than income described in section 884(d)(2)".

(8) Paragraph (2) of section 26(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (J), by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (K) and inserting in lieu thereof ", and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(L) section 884 (relating to branch profits tax)."

(9) Section 861 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) CROSS REFERENCE.—

"For treatment of interest paid by the branch of a foreign corporation, see section 884(f)."

(10) The paragraph (6) of section 906(b) of the 1986 Code which was added by section 1241(c) of the Reform Act is redesignated as paragraph (7).

(11) Subsection (c) of section 2104 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "section 861(a)(1)(B), section 861(a)(1)(G), or section 861(a)(1)(H)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subparagraph (A), (C), or (D) of section 861(a)(1)".

(12) Subparagraph (A) of section 904(g)(9) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "861(a)(1)(B)" and inserting in lieu thereof "861(a)(1)(A)".

(13)(A) Paragraph (1) of section 4373 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(1) EFFECTIVELY CONNECTED ITEMS.—Any amount which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States unless such amount is exempt from the application of section 882(a) pursuant to a treaty obligation of the United States."

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall apply with respect to premiums paid after the date 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(14) Paragraph (1) of section 884(f) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting "(or having gross income treated as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States)" after "United States" in the material preceding subparagraph (A) thereof.

(r) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 1242 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Paragraph (7) of section 864(c) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(7) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN PROPERTY TRANSACTIONS.—For purposes of this title, if—

"(A) any property ceases to be used or held for use in connection with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, and

"(B) such property is disposed of within 10 years after such cessation, the determination of whether any income or gain attributable to such disposition is taxable under section 871(b) or 882 (as the case may be) shall be made as if such sale or exchange occurred immediately before such cessation and without regard to the requirement that the taxpayer be engaged in a trade or business within the United States during the taxable year for which such income or gain is taken into account."

(2) Paragraph (6) of section 864(c) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(6) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN DEFERRED PAYMENTS, ETC.—For purposes of this title, in the case of any income or gain of a nonresident alien individual or a foreign corporation which—

"(A) is taken into account for any taxable year, but

"(B) is attributable to a sale or exchange of property or the performance of services (or any other transaction) in any other taxable year, the determination of whether such income or gain is taxable under section 871(b) or 882 (as the case may be) shall be made as if such income or gain were taken into account in such other taxable year and without regard to the requirement that the taxpayer be engaged in a trade or business within the United States during the taxable year referred to in subparagraph (A)."

(s) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 1246 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1)(A) Section 1446 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 1446. WITHHOLDING TAX ON FOREIGN PARTNERS' SHARE OF EFFECTIVELY CONNECTED INCOME.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—If—

"(1) a partnership has effectively connected taxable income for any taxable year, and

"(2) any portion of such income is allocatable under section 704 to a foreign partner, such partnership shall pay a withholding tax under this section at such time and in such manner as the Secretary shall by regulations prescribe.

"(b) AMOUNT OF WITHHOLDING TAX.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The amount of the withholding tax payable by any partnership under subsection (a) shall be equal to the applicable percentage of the effectively connected taxable income of the partnership which is allocable under section 704 to foreign partners.

"(2) APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'applicable percentage' means—

"(A) the highest rate of tax specified in section 1 in the case of the portion of the effectively connected taxable income which is allocable under section 704 to foreign partners who are not corporations, and

"(B) the highest rate of tax specified in section 11(b) in the case of the portion of the effectively connected taxable income which is allocable under section 704 to foreign partners which are corporations.

"(c) EFFECTIVELY CONNECTED TAXABLE INCOME.—For purposes of this section, the term 'effectively connected taxable income' means the taxable income of the partnership which is effectively connected (or treated as effectively connected) with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States computed with the following adjustments:

"(1) Paragraph (1) of section 703(a) shall not apply.

"(2) The partnership shall be allowed a deduction for depletion with respect to oil and gas wells but the amount of such deduction shall be determined without regard to sections 613 and 613A.

"(3) There shall not be taken into account any item of income, gain, loss, or deduction to the extent allocable under section 704 to any partner who is not a foreign partner.

"(d) TREATMENT OF FOREIGN PARTNERS.—

"(1) ALLOWANCE OF CREDIT.—Each foreign partner of a partnership shall be allowed a credit under section 33 for such partner's share of the withholding tax paid by the partnership under this section. Such credit shall be allowed for the partner's taxable year in which (or with which) the partnership taxable year (for which such tax was paid) ends.

"(2) CREDIT TREATED AS DISTRIBUTED TO PARTNER.—A foreign partner's share of any withholding tax paid by the partnership under this section shall be treated as distributed to such partner by such partnership on the last day of the partnership's taxable year (for which such tax was paid).

"(e) FOREIGN PARTNER.—For purposes of this section, the term 'foreign partner' means any partner who is not a United States person.

"(f) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this section, including regulations providing for the application of this section in the case of publicly traded partnerships."

(B) Paragraph (2) of section 6401(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "The preceding sentence shall not apply to any credit so allowed by reason of section 1446."

(C) The table of sections for subchapter A of chapter 3 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out the item relating to section 1446 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"Sec. 1446. Withholding of tax on foreign partners' share of effectively connected income."

(D) The amendments made by this paragraph shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1987. No amount shall be required to be deducted and withheld under section 1446 of the 1986 Code (as in effect before the amendment made by subparagraph (A)).

(2)(A) Subsection (a) of section 872 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "the case of a nonresident alien individual" and inserting in lieu thereof "the case of a nonresident alien individual, except where the context clearly indicates otherwise".

(B) Subsection (b) of section 882 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out the "the case of a foreign corporation" and inserting in lieu thereof "the case of a foreign corporation, except where the context clearly indicates otherwise".

(t) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 1247 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subparagraph (A) of section 892(a)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "or" at the end of clause (i), by striking out the period at the end of clause (ii) and inserting in lieu thereof ", or", and by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(iii) derived from the disposition of any interest in a controlled commercial entity."

"(ii) received by a controlled commercial entity or received (directly or indirectly) from a controlled commercial entity."

(3) Subsection (a) of section 892 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) TREATMENT AS RESIDENT.—For purposes of this title, a foreign government shall be treated as a corporate resident of its country. A foreign government shall be so treated for purposes of any income tax treaty obligation of the United States if such government grants equivalent treatment to the Government of the United States."

(4) Section 893 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) LIMITATION ON EXCLUSION.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to—

"(1) any employee of a controlled commercial entity (as defined in section 892(a)(2)(B)), or

"(2) any employee of a foreign government whose services are primarily in connection with a commercial activity (whether within or outside the United States) of the foreign government."

(u) AMENDMENT RELATED TO SECTION 1249 OF THE REFORM ACT.—Subsection (d) of section 1503 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(3) TREATMENT OF LOSSES OF SEPARATE BUSINESS UNITS.—To the extent provided in regulations, any loss of a separate unit of a domestic corporation shall be subject to the limitations of this subsection in the same manner as if such unit were a wholly owned subsidiary of such corporation.

"(4) INCOME ON ASSETS ACQUIRED AFTER THE LOSS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to prevent the avoidance of the purposes of this subsection by contributing assets to the corporation with the dual consolidated loss after such loss was sustained."

(v) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 1261 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1)(A) So much of section 986 of the 1986 Code as precedes subsection (c) thereof is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 986. DETERMINATION OF FOREIGN TAXES AND FOREIGN CORPORATION'S EARNINGS AND PROFITS.

"(a) FOREIGN TAXES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of determining the amount of the foreign tax credit—

"(A) any foreign income taxes shall be translated into dollars using the exchange rates as of the time such taxes were paid to the foreign country or possession of the United States, and

"(B) any adjustment to the amount of foreign income taxes shall be translated into dollars using—

"(i) except as provided in clause (ii), the exchange rate as of the time when such adjustment is paid to the foreign country or possession, or

"(ii) in the case of any refund or credit of foreign income taxes, using the exchange rate as of the time of original payment of such foreign income taxes.

"(2) FOREIGN INCOME TAXES.—For purposes of paragraph (1), 'foreign income taxes' means any income, war profits, or excess profits taxes paid to any foreign country or to any possession of the United States.

"(b) EARNINGS AND PROFITS AND DISTRIBUTIONS.—For purposes of determining the tax under this subtitle—

"(1) of any shareholder of any foreign corporation, the earnings and profits of such corporation shall be determined in the corporation's functional currency, and

"(2) in the case of any United States person, the earnings and profits determined under paragraph (1) (when distributed, deemed distributed, or otherwise taken into account under this subtitle) shall (if necessary) be translated into dollars using the appropriate exchange rate."

(B) Section 987 of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting "and" at the end of paragraph (2), by striking out ", and" at the end of paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof a period, and by striking out paragraph (4).

(A) by striking out "951(a)" in paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof "951(a)(1)(A)", and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"For purposes of the preceding sentence, any amount included in income under section 951(a)(1)(B) shall be treated as an actual distribution made on the last day of the taxable year for which such amount was so included."

(6) Clause (iii) of section 988(c)(1)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(iii) Entering into or acquiring any forward contract, futures contract, option, or similar financial instrument unless such instrument would be marked to market under section 1256 if held on the last day of the taxable year."

(7) Subparagraph (B) of section 988(a)(3) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(iii) SPECIAL RULE FOR PARTNERSHIPS.—To the extent provided in regulations, in the case of a partnership, the determination of residence shall be made at the partner level."

(8) Clause (i) of section 988(a)(3)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "If an individual does not have a tax home (as so defined), the residence of such individual shall be the United States if such individual is a United States citizen or a resident alien and shall be a country other than the United States if such individual is not a United States citizen or a resident alien."

(9) Section 903 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "this subpart" and inserting in lieu thereof "this part".

(w) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 1274 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subsection (e) of section 932 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(e) SPECIAL RULE FOR APPLYING SECTION TO TAX IMPOSED IN VIRGIN ISLANDS.—In applying this section for purposes of determining income tax liability incurred to the Virgin Islands, the provisions of this section shall not be affected by the provisions of Federal law referred to in section 934(a)."

(2) Paragraph (4) of section 932(c) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(4) RESIDENTS OF THE VIRGIN ISLANDS.—In the case of an individual—

"(A) who is a bona fide resident of the Virgin Islands at the close of the taxable year,

"(B) who, on his return of income tax to the Virgin Islands, reports income from all sources and identifies the source of each item shown on such return, and

"(C) who fully pays his tax liability referred to in section 934(a) to the Virgin Islands with respect to such income, for purposes of calculating income tax liability to the United States, gross income shall not include any amount included in gross income on such return, and allocable deductions and credits shall not be taken into account."

(3) Paragraph (2) of section 932(c) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "his income tax return" and inserting in lieu thereof "an income tax return".

(1) Section 1277 of the Reform Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) EXEMPTION FROM WITHHOLDING.—Notwithstanding subsection (b), the modification of section 884 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 by reason of the amendment to section 881 of such Code by section 1273(b)(1) of this Act shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986."

(2) Subsection (e) of section 1277 of the Act is amended by striking out "The preceding sentence" and inserting in lieu thereof "Notwithstanding subsection (b), the preceding sentence".

(aa) COORDINATION WITH TREATIES.—

(1) TREATY OBLIGATIONS.—(A) Subsection (d) of section 7852 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(d) TREATY OBLIGATIONS—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of determining the relationship between a provision of a treaty and any law of the United States affecting revenue, neither the treaty nor the law shall have preferential status by reason of its being a treaty or law.

"(2) SAVINGS CLAUSE.—No provision of this title (as in effect without regard to any amendment thereto enacted after August 16, 1954) shall apply in any case where its application would be contrary to any treaty obligation of the United States in effect on August 16, 1954."

(B) Section 7852(d)(1) of the 1986 Code, as added by subparagraph (A), shall apply to any taxable period with respect to which the time for assessment of any deficiency has not expired by reason of any law or rule of law before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) CERTAIN AMENDMENTS TO APPLY NOTWITHSTANDING TREATIES.—The following amendments made by the Reform Act shall apply notwithstanding any treaty obligation of the United States in effect on the date of the enactment of the Reform Act:

(A) The amendments made by section 1201 of the Reform Act.

(B) The amendments made by title VII of the Reform Act to the extent such amendments relate to the alternative minimum tax foreign tax credit.

(3) CERTAIN AMENDMENTS NOT TO APPLY TO THE EXTENT INCONSISTENT WITH TREATIES.—The following amendments made by the Reform Act shall not apply to the extent the application of such amendments would be contrary to any treaty obligation of the United States in effect on the date of the enactment of the Reform Act:

(A) The amendments made by section 1211 of the Reform Act to the extent—

(i) such amendments apply in the case of an individual treated as a resident of a foreign country under a treaty obligation of the United States as so in effect, or

(ii) such amendments relate to income of a nonresident from the sale or exchange of inventory property which would otherwise be sourced under section 865(e)(2) of the 1986 Code.

(B) The amendments made by section 1212(a) of the Reform Act; except for purposes of determining the amount of the foreign tax credit.

(C) The amendments made by subsections (b) and (c) of section 1212 of the Reform Act.

(D) The amendments made by section 1214 of the Reform Act; except for purposes of determining the amount of the foreign tax credit.

(E) The amendment made by section 1241(a) of the Reform Act to the extent that, under a treaty obligation of the United States, interest described in section 884(f)(1)(A) of the 1986 Code (as added by such amendment) which is in excess of amounts deducted would be treated as other than United States source.

(F) The amendment made by section 1241(b)(2)(A) of the Reform Act.

(G) The amendment made by section 1241(a) of the Reform Act to the extent such amendment relates to section 884(f)(1)(B) of the 1986 Code.

(H) The amendments made by section 1242 of the Reform Act to the extent they relate to paragraph (7) of section 864(c) of the 1986 Code.

(I) The amendment made by section 1247(a) of the Reform Act.

(J) The amendments made by section 123 of the Reform Act.

(4) TREATMENT OF TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS.—For purposes of paragraphs (2) and (3), any amendment made by this title shall be treated as if it had been included in the provision of the Reform Act to which such amendment relates.

(5) REPORTING OF CERTAIN TREATY-BASED RETURN POSITIONS.—

(A) Subchapter B of chapter 61 of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating section 6114 as section 6115 and by inserting after section 6113 the following new section:

"SEC. 6114. TREATY-BASED RETURN POSITIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Each taxpayer who, with respect to any tax imposed by this title, takes the position that a treaty of the United States overrules (or otherwise modifies) a law of the United States affecting revenue which was enacted after the provision of such treaty entered into force shall disclose (in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe) such position—

"(1) on the return of tax for such tax (or any statement attached to such return), or

"(2) if no return of tax is required to be filed, in such form as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(b) WAIVER AUTHORITY.—The Secretary may waive the requirement under subsection (a) in cases in which the Secretary finds that the disclosure is not necessary for the administration of the internal revenue laws."

(B) Part I of subchapter B of chapter 68 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 6712. FAILURE TO DISCLOSE TREATY-BASED RETURN POSITIONS.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—If a taxpayer fails to meet the requirements of section 6114, there is hereby imposed a penalty equal to $500 ($5,000 in the case of a C corporation) on each such failure.

"(b) AUTHORITY TO WAIVE.—The Secretary may waive all or any part of the penalty provided by this section on a showing by the taxpayer that there was reasonable cause for the failure and that the taxpayer acted in good faith.

"(c) PENALTY IN ADDITION TO OTHER PENALTIES.—The penalty imposed by this section shall be in addition to any other penalty imposed by law."

(C)(i) The table of sections for subchapter B of chapter 61 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out the item relating to section 6114 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"Sec. 6114. Treaty-based return positions.

"Sec. 6115. Cross reference.

(ii) The table of sections for part I of subchapter B of chapter 68 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Sec. 6712. Failure to disclose treaty-based return positions."

(D) The amendments made by this paragraph shall apply to taxable periods the due date for filing returns for which (without extension) occurs after December 31, 1988.

(bb) MISCELLANEOUS FOREIGN TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS.—

(1) PROVISIONS RELATING TO FOREIGN PERSONAL HOLDING COMPANIES.—

(A) Subsection (f) of section 551 of the 1986 Code is amended—

(i) by amending paragraph (1) to read as follows:

"(1) a foreign partnership or an estate or trust which is a foreign estate or trust, or", and

(ii) by striking out the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "In any case to which the preceding sentence applies, the Secretary may by regulations provide that rules similar to the rules of section 1297(b)(5) shall apply, and provide for such other adjustments in the application of this subchapter as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this subsection."

(B) Subsection (a) of section 551 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "(other than estates or trusts the gross income of which under this subtitle includes only income from sources within the United States)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(other than foreign estates or trusts)".

(C) Subsection (c) of section 552 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(c) LOOK-THRU FOR CERTAIN DIVIDENDS AND INTEREST.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this part, any related person dividend or interest shall be treated as foreign personal holding company income only to the extent such dividend or interest is attributable (determined under rules similar to the rules of subparagraphs (C) and (D) of section 904(d)(3)) to income of the related person which would be foreign personal holding company income.

"(2) RELATED PERSON DIVIDEND OR INTEREST.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'related person dividend or interest' means any dividend or interest which—

"(A) is described in subparagraph (A) of section 954(c)(3), and

"(B) is received from a related person which is not a foreign personal holding company (determined without regard to this subsection).

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term 'related person' has the meaning given such term by section 954(d)(3) (determined by substituting 'foreign personal holding company' for 'controlled foreign corporation' each place it appears)."

(D) The amendments made by this paragraph shall apply to taxable years of foreign corporations beginning after December 31, 1986.

(2) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN PAYMENTS OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.—

(A) Subparagraph (A) of section 3405(d)(13) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "the United States" and inserting in lieu thereof "the United States and any possession of the United States".

(B) Clause (i) of section 3405(d)(13)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(i) a United States citizen or a resident alien of the United States, or".

(C) The heading of paragraph (13) of section 3405(d) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "UNITED STATES" and inserting in lieu thereof "UNITED STATES OR ITS POSSESSIONS".

(D) The amendments made by this paragraph shall apply to distributions made after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(3) CLARIFICATION OF DISCLOSURE UNDER CERTAIN AGREEMENTS.—

(A) Paragraph (4) of section 6103(k) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(i) by striking out "or other convention" and inserting in lieu thereof "or other convention or bilateral agreement", and

(ii) by striking out "such convention" and inserting in lieu thereof "such convention or bilateral agreement".

(B) Subparagraph (A) of section 6103(b)(5) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Republic of the Marshall Islands, the Federated States of Micronesia, and the Republic of Palau" and inserting in lieu thereof "and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands".

(C) The amendments made by this paragraph shall take effect on the date of the enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

(4) COORDINATION OF TREATIES WITH SECTION 904(G).—

(A) Subsection (g) of section 904 of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating paragraph (10) as paragraph (11) and by inserting after paragraph (9) the following new paragraph:

"(10) COORDINATION WITH TREATIES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If—

"(i) any amount derived from a United States-owned foreign corporation would be treated as derived from sources within the United States under this subsection by reason of an item of income of such United States-owned foreign corporation,

"(ii) under a treaty obligation of the United States (applied without regard to this subsection and by treating any amount included in gross income under section 951(a)(1) as a dividend), such amount would be treated as arising from sources outside the United States, and

"(iii) the taxpayer chooses the benefits of this paragraph, this subsection shall not apply to such amount to the extent attributable to such item of income (but subsections (a), (b), and (c) of this section and sections 902, 907, and 960 shall be applied separately with respect to such amount to the extent so attributable).

"(B) SPECIAL RULE.—Amounts included in gross income under section 951(a)(1) shall be treated as a dividend under subparagraph (A)(ii) only if dividends paid by each corporation (the stock in which is taken into account in determining whether the shareholder is a United States shareholder in the United States-owned foreign corporation), if paid to the United States shareholder, would be treated under a treaty obligation of the United States as arising from sources outside the United States (applied without regard to this subsection)."

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall take effect as if included in the amendment made by section 121 of the Tax Reform Act of 1984.

(5) TREATMENT OF ELECTION UNDER SECTION 338.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (h) of section 338 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(16) COORDINATION WITH FOREIGN TAX CREDIT PROVISIONS.—Except as provided in regulations, this section shall not apply for purposes of determining the source or character of any item for purposes of subpart A of part III of subchapter N of this chapter (relating to foreign tax credit). The preceding sentence shall not apply to any gain to the extent such gain is includible in gross income as a dividend under section 1248 (determined without regard to any deemed sale under this section by a foreign corporation)."

(B) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall apply to qualified stock purchases (as defined in section 338(d)(3) of the 1986 Code) after March 31, 1988, except that, in the case of an election under section 338(h)(10) of the 1986 Code, such amendment shall apply to qualified stock purchases (as so defined) after June 10, 1987.

(6) TREATMENT OF TAX-EXEMPT SHAREHOLDERS OF A DISC.—

(A) Section 995 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) TREATMENT OF TAX-EXEMPT SHAREHOLDERS.—If any organization described in subsection (a)(2) or (b)(2) of section 511 is a shareholder in a DISC—

"(1) any amount deemed distributed to such shareholder under subsection (b),

"(2) any actual distribution to such shareholder which under section 996 is treated as out of accumulated DISC income, and

"(3) any gain which is treated as a dividend under subsection (c), shall be treated as derived from the conduct of an unrelated trade or business (and the modifications of section 512(b) shall not apply). The rules of the preceding sentence shall apply also for purposes of determing any such shareholder's DISC-related deferred tax liability under subsection (f)."

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1987.

(7) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN AMOUNTS PREVIOUSLY TAXED UNDER SECTION 1248.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (e) of section 959 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "such person under" and inserting in lieu thereof "such person (or, in any case to which section 1248(e) applies, of the domestic corporation referred to in section 1248(e)(2)) under".

(B) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall apply in the case of transactions to which section 1248(e) of the 1986 Code applies and which occur after December 31, 1986.

(8) TREATMENT OF SHARED FSC'S.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Section 927 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) TREATMENT OF SHARED FSC'S.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2) , each separate account referred to in paragraph (3) maintained by a shared FSC shall be treated as a separate corporation for purposes of this subpart.

"(2) CERTAIN REQUIREMENTS APPLIED AT SHARED FSC LEVEL.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply—

"(A) for purposes of—

"(i) subparagraphs (A), (B), (D), and (E) of section 922(a)(1),

"(ii) paragraph (2) of section 922(a),

"(iii) subsections (b), (c), and (e) of section 924, and

"(iv) subsection (f) of this section, and

"(B) for such other purposes as the Secretary may by regulations prescribed.

"(3) SHARED FSC.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'shared FSC' means any corporation if—

"(A) such corporation maintains a separate account for transactions with each shareholder (and persons related to such shareholder),

"(B) distributions to each shareholder are based on the amounts in the separate account maintained with respect to such shareholder, and

"(C) such corporation meets such other requirements as the Secretry may by regulations prescribe."

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall apply as if included in the provision of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 to which it relates.

(9) CLARIFICATION OF DIVIDENDS RECEIVED DEDUCTION FOR DIVIDENDS FROM A FSC.—

(A) Subsection (c) of section 245 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(c) CERTAIN DIVIDENDS RECEIVED FROM FSC.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a domestic corporation, there shall be allowed as a deduction an amount equal to—

"(A) 100 percent of any dividend received from another corporation which is distributed out of earnings and profits attributable to foreign trade income for a period during which such other corporation was a FSC, and

"(B) 70 percent (80 percent in the case of dividends from a 20-percent owned corporation as defined in section 243(c)(2)) of any dividend received from another corporation which is distributed out of earnings and profits attributable to effectively connected income received or accrued by such other corporation while such other corporation was a FSC.

"(2) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN DIVIDENDS.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any dividend which is distributed out of earnings and profits attributable to foreign trade income which—

"(A) is section 923(a)(2) nonexempt income (within the meaning of section 927(d)(6)), or

"(B) would not, but for section 923(a)(4), be treated as exempt foreign trade income.

"(3) NO DEDUCTION UNDER SUBSECTION (a) OR (b).—No deduction shall be allowable under subsection (a) or (b) with respect to any dividend which is distributed out of earnings and profits of a corporation accumulated while such corporation was a FSC.

"(4) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) FOREIGN TRADE INCOME; EXEMPT FOREIGN TRADE INCOME.—The terms 'foreign trade income' and 'exempt foreign trade income' have the respective meanings given such terms by section 923.

"(B) EFFECTIVELY CONNECTED INCOME.—The term 'effectively connected income' means any income which is effectively connected (or treated as effectively connected) with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States and is subject to tax under this chapter. Such term shall not include any foreign trade income."

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall apply as if included in the provision of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 to which it relates.

SEC. 113. AMENDMENTS RELATED TO TITLE XIII OF THE REFORM ACT.

(a) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 1301 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Clause (iii) of section 142(d)(4)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "average rent" and inserting in lieu thereof "average gross rent".

(3) Paragraph (4) of section 143(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting "is part of an issue which" after "which".

(4)(A) Clause (ii) of section 144(a)(12)(A) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting "(or series of bonds)" before "issued to refund".

(B)(i) Subclause (I) of section 144(a)(12)(A)(ii) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(I) the average maturity date of the issue of which the refunding bond is a part is not later than the average maturity date of the bonds to be refunded by such issue,".

(ii) Subparagraph (A) of section 144(a)(12) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For purposes of clause (ii)(I), average maturity shall be determined in accordance with section 147(b)(2)(A)."

(iii) A refunding bond issued before July 1, 1987, shall be treated as meeting the requirement of subclause (I) of section 144(a)(12)(A)(ii) of the 1986 Code if such bond met the requirement of such subclause as in effect before the amendments made by this subparagraph.

(C) Clause (ii) of section 144(a)(12)(A) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding "and" at the end of subclause (II), by striking out subclause (III), and by redesignating subclause (IV) as subclause (III).

(5) Subparagraph (B) of section 144(b)(1) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "to which part B of title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (relating to guaranteed student loans) does not apply", and

(B) by striking out "of such Act" and inserting in lieu thereof "of the Higher Education Act of 1965", and

(C) by striking out "eligible" and all that follows in such subparagraph and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "eligible. A program shall not be treated as described in this subparagraph if such program is described in subparagraph (A).

A bond shall not be treated as a qualified student loan bond if the issue of which such bond is a part meets the private business tests of paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 141(b) (determined by treating 501(c)(3) organizations as governmental units with respect to their activities which do not constitute unrelated trades or businesses, determined by applying section 513(a))."

(6) Subclause (I) of section 145(b)(2)(B)(ii) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "103(b)" and inserting in lieu thereof "103(b)(2)".

(7) Clause (i) of section 145(b)(2)(C) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "subparagraph (B)(ii)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subparagraph (B)".

(8) Paragraph (4) of section 145(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "subparagraphs (C) and (D)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subparagraphs (C), (D), and (E)".

(9) Subparagraph (A) of section 146(f)(5) of the 1986 Code (as in effect before the amendments made by section 10631 of the Revenue Act of 1987) is amended to read as follows:

"(A) the purpose of issuing exempt facility bonds described in 1 of the paragraphs of section 142(a),".

(10)(A) Paragraph (1) of section 146(k) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "paragraph (2)" and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraphs (2) and (3)".

(B) Subsection (k) of section 146 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) TREATMENT OF GOVERNMENTAL BONDS TO WHICH VOLUME CAP ALLOCATED.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any bond to which volume cap is allocated under section 141(b)(5)—

"(A) for an output facility, or

"(B) for a facility of a type described in paragraph (4), (5), (6), or (10) of section 142(a),

if the issuer establishes that the State's share of the private business use (as defined by section 141(b)(6)) of the facility will equal or exceed the State's share of the volume cap allocated with respect to bonds issued to finance the facility."

(11) Subsection (e) of section 147 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "treated as".

(12) Subsection (f) of section 147 of the 1986 Code (relating to public approval requirement for private activity bonds) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) SPECIAL RULES FOR SCHOLARSHIP FUNDING BOND ISSUES AND VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENT BOND ISSUES.—

"(A) SCHOLARSHIP FUNDING BONDS.—In the case of a qualified scholarship funding bond, any governmental unit which made a request described in section 150(d)(2)(B) with respect to the issuer of such bond shall be treated for purposes of paragraph (2) of this subsection as the governmental unit on behalf of which such bond was issued. Where more than one governmental unit within a State has made a request described in section 150(d)(2)(B), the State may also be treated for purposes of paragraph (2) of this subsection as the governmental unit on behalf of which such bond was issued.

"(B) VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENT BONDS.—In the case of a bond of a volunteer fire department which meets the requirements of section 150(e), the political subdivision described in section 150(e)(2)(B) with respect to such department shall be treated for purposes of paragraph (2) of this subsection as the governmental unit on behalf of which such bond was issued."

(13)(A) Paragraph (1) of section 147(g) of the 1986 Code (relating to restriction on issuance costs financed by issue) is amended by striking out "aggregate face amount of the issue" and inserting in lieu thereof "proceeds of the issue".

(B) Paragraph (2) of section 147(g) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "aggregate authorized face amount of the issue does not" and inserting in lieu thereof "proceeds of the issue do not".

(C) The amendments made by this paragraph shall apply to bonds issued after June 30, 1987.

(14) Paragraph (2) of section 148(d) of the 1986 Code (relating to special rules for reasonably required reserve or replacement fund) is amended by striking out "any fund described in paragraph (1)" and inserting in lieu thereof "any reserve or replacement fund".

(15) Paragraph (3) of section 148(f) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "A series of issues which are redeemed during a 6-month period (or such longer period as the Secretary may prescribe) shall be treated (at the election of the issuer) as 1 issue for purposes of the preceding sentence if no bond which is part of any issue in such series has a maturity of more than 270 days or is a private activity bond."

(16)(A) Subclause (I) of section 148(f)(4)(B)(iii) of the 1986 Code (relating to safe harbor for determining when proceeds of tax or revenue anticipation bonds are expended) is amended by striking out "aggregate face amount of such issue" and inserting in lieu thereof "proceeds of such issue".

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall apply to bonds issued after June 30, 1987.

(17)(A) Subparagraph (C) of section 148(f)(4) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(i) by striking out the heading and inserting in lieu thereof:

"(C) EXCEPTION FOR GOVERNMENTAL UNITS ISSUING $5,000,000 OR LESS OF BONDS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—",

(ii) by redesignating clauses (i) through (iv) as subclauses (I) through (IV), respectively, and moving the margins of such subclauses 2 ems to the right, and

(iii) by striking out the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following new clauses:

"(ii) AGGREGATION OF ISSUERS.—For purposes of subclause (IV) of clause (i)—

"(I) an issuer and all entities which issue bonds on behalf of such issuer shall be treated as 1 issuer,

"(II) all bonds issued by a subordinate entity shall, for purposes of applying such subclause to each other entity to which such entity is subordinate, be treated as issued by such other entity, and

"(III) an entity formed (or, to the extent provided by the Secretary, availed of) to avoid the purposes of such subclause (IV) and all other entities benefiting thereby shall be treated as 1 issuer.

"(iii) CERTAIN REFUNDING BONDS NOT TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT IN DETERMINING SMALL ISSUER STATUS.—There shall not be taken into account under subclause (IV) of clause (i) any bond issued to refund (other than to advance refund) any bond to the extent the amount of the refunding bond does not exceed the outstanding amount of the refunded bond.

"(iv) CERTAIN ISSUES ISSUED BY SUBORDINATE GOVERNMENTAL UNITS, ETC., EXEMPT FROM REBATE REQUIREMENT.—An issue issued by a subordinate entity of a governmental unit with general taxing powers shall be treated as described in clause (i)(I) if the aggregate face amount of such issue does not exceed the lesser of—

"(I) $5,000,000, or

"(II) the amount which, when added to the aggregate face amount of other issues issued by such entity, does not exceed the portion of the $5,000,000 limitation under clause (i)(IV) which such governmental unit allocates to such entity.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, an entity which issues bonds on behalf of a governmental unit with general taxing powers shall be treated as a subordinate entity of such unit. An allocation shall be taken into account under subclause (II) only if it is irrevocable and made before the issuance date of such issue and only to the extent that the limitation so allocated bears a reasonable relationship to the benefits received by such governmental unit from issues issued by such entity.

"(v) DETERMINATION OF WHETHER REFUNDING BONDS ELIGIBLE FOR EXCEPTION FROM REBATE REQUIREMENT.—If any portion of an issue is issued to refund other bonds, such portion shall be treated as a separate issue which does not meet the requirements of paragraphs (2) and (3) by reason of this subparagraph unless—

"(I) the aggregate face amount of such issue does not exceed $5,000,000,

"(II) each refunded bond was issued as part of an issue which was treated as meeting the requirements of paragraphs (2) and (3) by reason of this subparagraph,

"(III) the average maturity date of the refunding bonds issued as part of such issue is not later than the average maturity date of the bonds to be refunded by such issue, and

"(IV) no refunding bond has a maturity date which is later than the date which is 30 years after the date the original bond was issued.

Subclause (III) shall not apply if the average maturity of the issue of which the original bond was a part (and of the issue of which the bonds to be refunded are a part) is 3 years or less. For purposes of this clause, average maturity shall be determined in accordance with section 147(b)(2)(A).

"(vi) REFUNDINGS OF BONDS ISSUED UNDER LAW PRIOR TO TAX REFORM ACT OF 1986.—If section 141(a) did not apply to any refunded bond, the issue of which such refunded bond was a part shall be treated as meeting the requirements of subclause (II) of clause (v) if—

"(I) such issue was issued by a governmental unit with general taxing powers,

"(II) no bond issued as part of such issue was an industrial development bond (as defined in section 103(b)(2), but without regard to subparagraph (B) of section 103(b)(3)) or a private loan bond (as defined in section 103(o)(2)(A), but without regard to any exception from such definition other than section 103(o)(2)(C)), and

"(III) the aggregate face amount of all tax-exempt bonds (other than bonds described in subclause (II)) issued by such unit during the calendar year in which such issue was issued did not exceed $5,000,000.

References in subclause (II) to section 103 shall be to such section as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1986. Rules similar to the rules of clauses (ii) and (iii) shall apply for purposes of subclause (III). For purposes of subclause (II) of clause (i), bonds described in subclause (II) of this clause to which section 141(a) does not apply shall not be treated as private activity bonds."

(B) Subclause (IV) of section 148(f)(4)(C)(i) of the 1986 Code (as redesignated by subparagraph (A)) is amended by striking out "(and all subordinate entities thereof)".

(C)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), the amendments made by this paragraph shall apply to bonds issued after June 30, 1987.

(ii) At the election of an issuer (made at such time and in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate may prescribe), the amendments made by this paragraph shall apply to such issuer as if included in the amendments made by section 1301(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

(18) Clause (i) of section 148(f)(4)(D) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by inserting "for a program" before "described in section 144(b)(1)(A)",

(B) by striking out "such a program" and inserting in lieu thereof "such program", and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following: "Amounts designated as interest on student loans shall not be taken into account in determining whether the issuer is reimbursed for such costs. Except as otherwise hereafter provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, costs described in subclause (I) paid from amounts earned as described in the first sentence of this clause may also be taken into account in determining the yield on the student loans under a program described in section 144(b)(1)(A)."

(19) Subparagraph (B) of section 148(f)(7) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "due to reasonable cause and not" and inserting in lieu thereof "not due".

(20) Clause (iii) of section 149(b)(3)(A) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "with respect to any bond issued before July 1, 1989".

(21) Subparagraph (A) of section 149(b)(4) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "a qualified student loan bond, and a qualified redevelopment bond" and inserting in lieu thereof "and a qualified student loan bond".

(22) Paragraph (3) of section 149(e) of the 1986 Code (relating to information reporting) is amended by striking out "there is reasonable cause for the failure to file such statement in a timely fashion" and inserting in lieu thereof "the failure to file in a timely fashion is not due to willful neglect".

(23)(A) Subparagraph (B) of section 150(b)(4) of the 1986 Code (relating to change in use of facilities financed with tax-exempt private activity bonds) is amended by inserting before the period "or a qualified small issue bond".

(B) The heading for paragraph (4) of section 150(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting "AND SMALL ISSUE BONDS" after "EXEMPT FACILITY BONDS".

(C) Subparagraph (A) of section 150(b)(1) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting "tax-exempt" before "qualified mortgage bond".

(24)(A) Subsection (e) of section 150 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) TREATMENT AS PRIVATE ACTIVITY BONDS ONLY FOR CERTAIN PURPOSES.—Bonds which are part of an issue which meets the requirements of paragraph (1) shall not be treated as private activity bonds except for purposes of sections 147(f) and 149(d)."

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall apply to bonds issued after June 30, 1987.

(25) Clause (ii) of section 1301(f)(2)(C) of the Reform Act is amended to read as follows:

"(ii) Clause (ii) of section 25(c)(2)(A) is amended by striking out all that follows 'an amount of' and inserting in lieu thereof 'private activity bonds which it may otherwise issue during such calendar year under section 146,'."

(26) Subsection (h) of section 25 of the 1986 Code (relating to credit for interest on certain home mortgages) is amended by striking out "1987" and inserting in lieu thereof "1988".

(27) The date contained in section 143(a)(1)(B) of the 1986 Code shall be treated as contained in section 103A(c)(1)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of the Reform Act, for purposes of any bond issued to refund a bond to which such 103A(c)(1) applies.

(28)(A) Subparagraph (A) of section 146(i)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(A) the average maturity date of the qualified student loan bonds to be refunded by the issue of which the refunding bond is a part, or".

(B) Subparagraph (A) of section 146(i)(3) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(A) the average maturity date of the qualified mortgage bonds to be refunded by the issue of which the refunding bond is a part, or".

(C) Subsection (i) of section 146 of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (5) and by inserting after paragraph (3) the following new paragraph:

"(4) AVERAGE MATURITY.—For purposes of paragraphs (2) and (3), average maturity shall be determined in accordance with section 147(b)(2)(A)."

(29) Subparagraph (D) of section 147(f)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "the maturity date" and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof "the average maturity date of the issue of which the refunded bond is a part is later than the average maturity date of the bonds to be refunded by such issue. For purposes of the preceding sentence, average maturity shall be determined in accordance with subsection (b)(2)(A)."

"(3) the net proceeds of the refunding bond are used to redeem the refunded bond not later than 90 days after the date of the issuance of the refunding bond.

For purposes of paragraph (1), average maturity shall be determined in accordance with section 147(b)(2)(A) of the 1986 Code. Sections 1316(g)(5) and 1317(52) shall not apply to any refunding bond which meets the requirements of this subsection.

"(d) Special Rule Permitting Carryforward of Volume Cap for Certain Transitioned Projects.—A bond to which section 1312 or 1317 applies shall be treated as having a carryforward purpose described in section 146(f)(5) of the 1986 Code, and the requirement of section 146(f)(2)(A) of the 1986 Code shall be treated as met if such project is identified with reasonable specificity. The preceding sentence shall not apply so as to permit a carryforward with respect to any qualified small issue bond."

SEC. 114. AMENDMENTS RELATED TO TITLE XIV OF THE REFORM ACT.

(a) Amendments Related to Section 1401 of the Reform Act.—

(1) Subsection (e) of section 672 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(e) Grantor Treated as Holding Any Power or Interest of Grantor's Spouse.—

"(1) In general.—For purposes of this subpart, a grantor shall be treated as holding any power or interest held by—

"(A) any individual who was the spouse of the grantor at the time of the creation of such power or interest, or

"(B) any individual who became the spouse of the grantor after the creation of such power or interest, but only with respect to periods after such individual became the spouse of the grantor.

"(2) MARITAL STATUS.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(A), an individual legally separated from his spouse under a decree of divorce or of separate maintenance shall not be considered as married."

(2) Paragraph (3) of section 675 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"For periods during which an individual is the spouse of the grantor (within the meaning of section 672(e)(2)), any reference in this paragraph to the grantor shall be treated as including a reference to such individual."

(3) Subsection (c) of section 674 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For periods during which an individual is the spouse of the grantor (within the meaning of section 672(e)(2)), any reference in this subsection to the grantor shall be treated as including a reference to such individual."

(b) AMENDMENT RELATED TO SECTION 1402 OF THE REFORM ACT.—Section 673 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(c) SPECIAL RULE FOR DETERMINING VALUE OF REVERSIONARY INTEREST.—For purposes of subsection (a), the value of the grantor's reversionary interest shall be determined by assuming the maximum exercise of discretion in favor of the grantor.

"(d) POSTPONEMENT OF DATE SPECIFIED FOR REACQUISITION.—Any postponement of the date specified for the reacquisition of possession or enjoyment of the reversionary interest shall be treated as a new transfer in trust commencing with the date on which the postponement is effective and terminating with the date prescribed by the postponement. However, income for any period shall not be included in the income of the grantor by reason of the preceding sentence if such income would not be so includible in the absence of such postponement."

(c) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 1403 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) If a beneficiary of a trust to which section 664 of the 1986 Code applies elects (at such time and in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate may prescribe) to have this paragraph apply, such beneficiary shall be entitled to the benefits of section 1403(c)(2) of the Reform Act with respect to amounts included in gross income under section 664(b) of the 1986 Code in the same manner as if such amounts were included in gross income under section 652(a) of the 1986 Code.

(2) Any trust beneficiary may elect (at such time and in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate may prescribe) to waive the benefits of section 1403(c)(2) of the Reform Act.

(3)(A) For purposes of determining the gross income of any pass-thru entity, such pass-thru entity shall not be allowed the benefits of section 806(e)(2)(C) or 1403(c)(2) of the Reform Act if such pass-thru entity is required to change its taxable year by reason of the amendments made by section 806 or 1403 of the Reform Act.

(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term "pass-thru entity" means any trust, partnership, S corporation, or common trust fund.

(4) If any trust was required to change its taxable year by the amendments made by section 1403 of the Reform Act, such change shall be treated as initiated by such trust and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate.

"(A) CHARITABLE LEAD ANNUITY TRUST.—The term 'charitable lead annuity trust' means any trust in which there is a charitable lead annuity.

"(B) CHARITABLE LEAD ANNUITY.—The term 'charitable lead annuity' means any interest in the form of a guaranteed annuity with respect to which a deduction was allowed under section 2055 or 2522 (as the case may be).

"(4) COORDINATION WITH SUBSECTION (d).—Under regulations, appropriate adjustments shall be made in the application of subsection (d) to take into account the provisions of this subsection."

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall apply for purposes of determining the inclusion ratio with respect to property transferred after October 13, 1987.

(4)(A) Section 2642 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) SPECIAL RULES FOR CERTAIN INTER VIVOS TRANSFERS.—Except as provided in regulations—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of determining the inclusion ratio, if—

"(A) an individual makes an inter vivos transfer of property, and

"(B) the value of such property would be includible in the gross estate of such individual under chapter 11 if such individual died immediately after making such transfer (other than by reason of section 2035), any allocation of GST exemption to such property shall not be made before the close of the estate tax inclusion period (and the value of such property shall be determined under paragraph (2)). If such transfer is a direct skip, such skip shall be treated as occurring as of the close of the estate tax inclusion period.

"(2) VALUATION.—In the case of any property to which paragraph (1) applies, the value of such property shall be—

"(A) if such property is includible in the gross estate of the transferor (other than by reason of section 2035), its value for purposes of chapter 11, or

"(B) if subparagraph (A) does not apply, its value as of the close of the estate tax inclusion period (or, if any allocation of GST exemption to such property is not made on a timely filed gift tax return for the calendar year in which such period ends, its value as of the time such allocation is filed with the Secretary).

"(3) ESTATE TAX INCLUSION PERIOD.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'estate tax inclusion period' means any period after the transfer described in paragraph (1) during which the value of the property involved in such transfer would be includible in the gross estate of the transferor under chapter 11 if he died. Such period shall in no event extend beyond the earlier of—

"(A) the date on which there is a generation-skipping transfer with respect to such property, or

"(B) the date of the death of the transferor.

"(4) TREATMENT OF SPOUSE.—Except as provided in regulations, any reference in this subsection to an individual or transferor shall be treated as including a reference to the spouse of such individual or transferor.

"(5) COORDINATION WITH SUBSECTION (d).—Under regulations, appropriate adjustments shall be made in the application of subsection (d) to take into account the provisions of this subsection."

(B) Paragraph (2) of section 2642(a) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out the last sentence.

(C) Subparagraph (A) of section 2642(b)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof the following: "; except that, if the requirements prescribed by the Secretary respecting allocation of post-death changes in value are not met, the value of such property shall be determined as of the time of the distribution concerned."

(D) Subsection (b) of section 2642 of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting "Except as provided in subsection (f)—" immediately after the subsection heading.

(16) Paragraph (2) of section 2612(a) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(2) Certain partial terminations treated as taxable.—If, upon the termination of an interest in property held in trust by reason of the death of a lineal descendant of the transferor, a specified portion of the trust's assets are distributed to 1 or more skip persons (or 1 or more trusts for the exclusive benefit of such persons), such termination shall constitute a taxable termination with respect to such portion of the trust property."

(17) Paragraph (2) of section 2632(b) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "paragraph (1)) with respect to a prior direct skip" and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph (1) with respect to a prior direct skip)".

(18)(A) Subsection (c) of section 2642 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(c) Treatment of Certain Direct Skips Which Are Nontaxable Gifts.—

"(1) In general.—In the case of a direct skip which is a nontaxable gift, the inclusion ratio shall be zero.

"(2) Exception for certain transfers in trust.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any transfer to a trust for the benefit of an individual unless—

"(A) during the life of such individual, no portion of the corpus or income of the trust may be distributed to (or for the benefit of) any person other than such individual, and

"(B) if such individual dies before the trust is terminated, the assets of such trust will be includible in the gross estate of such individual.

"(3) Nontaxable gift.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'nontaxable gift' means any transfer of property to the extent such transfer is not treated as a taxable gift by reason of—

"(A) section 2503(b) (taking into account the application of section 2513), or

"(B) section 2503(e)."

(B) Paragraph (1) of section 2642(d) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "(other than a nontaxable gift)".

(C) The amendments made by this paragraph shall apply to transfers after March 31, 1988.

"(F) For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'real property' includes any personal property which is leased under, or in connection with, a lease of real property, but only if the rent attributable to such personal property (determined under the rules of section 856(d)(1)) for the taxable year does not exceed 15 percent of the total rent for the taxable year attributable to both the real and personal property leased under, or in connection with, such lease."

(5)(A) Paragraph (9) of section 514(c) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(E) Special rules for organizations described in section 501(c)(25).—

"(i) In general.—In computing under section 512 the unrelated business taxable income of a disqualified holder of an interest in an organization described in section 501(c)(25), there shall be taken into account—

"(I) as gross income derived from an unrelated trade or business, such holder's pro rata share of the items of income described in clause (ii)(I) of such organization, and

"(II) as deductions allowable in computing unrelated business taxable income, such holder's pro rata share of the items of deduction described in clause (ii)(II) of such organization.

Such amounts shall be taken into account for the taxable year of the holder in which (or with which) the taxable year of such organization ends.

"(ii) Description of amounts.—For purposes of clause (i)—

"(I) gross income is described in this clause to the extent such income would (but for this paragraph) be treated under subsection (a) as derived from an unrelated trade or business, and

"(II) any deduction is described in this clause to the extent it would (but for this paragraph) be allowable under subsection (a)(2) in computing unrelated business taxable income.

"(iii) Disqualified holder.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'disqualified holder' means any shareholder (or beneficiary) which is not described in clause (i) or (ii) of subparagraph (C)."

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall apply with respect to interests in the organization acquired after June 10, 1987, except that such amendment shall not apply to any such interest acquired after June 10, 1987, pursuant to a binding written contract in effect on June 10, 1987, and at all times thereafter before such acquisition.

(6) The last sentence of section 514(c)(9)(B) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "clause (vi)" and inserting in lieu thereof "this paragraph".

(b) Repeal of Section 1608 of the Reform Act.—Section 1608 of the Reform Act is hereby repealed.

(A) by striking out "this paragraph" in clauses (i) and (ii)(I) and inserting in lieu thereof "this paragraph and paragraph (8)", and

(B) by striking out clause (iii) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(iii) TAX-EXEMPT CONTROLLED ENTITY.—

"(I) IN GENERAL.—The term 'tax-exempt controlled entity' means any corporation (which is not a tax-exempt entity determined without regard to this subparagraph and paragraph (4)(E)) if 50 percent or more (in value) of the stock in such corporation is held by 1 or more tax-exempt entities (other than a foreign person or entity).

"(II) ONLY 5-PERCENT SHAREHOLDERS TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT IN CASE OF PUBLICLY TRADED STOCK.—For purposes of subclause (I), in the case of a corporation the stock of which is publicly traded on an established securities market, stock held by a tax-exempt entity shall not be taken into account unless such entity holds at least 5 percent (in value) of the stock in such corporation. For purposes of this subclause, related entities (within the meaning of paragraph (7)) shall be treated as 1 entity.

"(III) SECTION 318 TO APPLY.—For purposes of this clause, a tax-exempt entity shall be treated as holding stock which it holds through application of section 318 (determined without regard to the 50-percent limitation contained in subsection (a)(2)(C) thereof)."

(c) AMENDMENT RELATED TO SECTION 1803 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Subparagraph (A) of section 1803(a)(8) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "September 27, 1985" and inserting in lieu thereof "December 31, 1985".

(2) Subsection (c) of section 1278 of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting before the period ", including regulations providing proper adjustments in the case of a bond the principal of which may be paid in 2 or more payments".

(d) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 1804 OF THE REFORM ACT.—

(1) Paragraph (3) of section 1804(b) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "Paragraph (3) of section 54" and inserting "Paragraph (3) of section 54(d)".

(2) Clause (i) of section 54(d)(3)(D) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 is amended by striking out "subtitle D of title VI" and inserting "subtitle D of title VI of the Tax Reform Act of 1986".

(3) Clause (ii) of section 54(d)(3)(D) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 (as added by section 1804(b)(3) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986) is amended—

(A) by striking out "December 9, 1968," each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "December 10, 1968,", and

(B) by striking out "October 5, 1981" and inserting in lieu thereof "March 2, 1978,".

(4) Subsection (b) of section 312 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "of any property" and inserting in lieu thereof "of any property (other than an obligation of such corporation)".

(5)(A) Section 361 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 361. NONRECOGNITION OF GAIN OR LOSS TO CORPORATIONS; TREATMENT OF DISTRIBUTIONS.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—No gain or loss shall be recognized to a corporation if such corporation is a party to a reorganization and exchanges property, in pursuance of the plan of reorganization, solely for stock or securities in another corporation a party to the reorganization.

"(b) EXCHANGES NOT SOLELY IN KIND.—

"(1) GAIN.—If subsection (a) would apply to an exchange but for the fact that the property received in exchange consists not only of stock or securities permitted by subsection (a) to be received without the recognition of gain, but also of other property or money, then—

"(A) PROPERTY DISTRIBUTED.—If the corporation receiving such other property or money distributes it in pursuance of the plan of reorganization, no gain to the corporation shall be recognized from the exchange, but

"(B) PROPERTY NOT DISTRIBUTED.—If the corporation receiving such other property or money does not distribute it in pursuance of the plan of reorganization, the gain, if any, to the corporation shall be recognized.

The amount of gain recognized under subparagraph (B) shall not exceed the sum of the money and the fair market value of the other property so received which is not so distributed.

"(2) LOSS.—If subsection (a) would apply to an exchange but for the fact that the property received in exchange consists not only of property permitted by subsection (a) to be received without the recognition of gain or loss, but also of other property or money, then no loss from the exchange shall be recognized.

"(3) TREATMENT OF TRANSFERS TO CREDITORS.—For purposes of paragraph (1), any transfer of the other property or money received in the exchange by the corporation to its creditors in connection with the reorganization shall be treated as a distribution in pursuance of the plan of reorganization. The Secretary may prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to prevent avoidance of tax through abuse of the preceding sentence or subsection (c)(3).

"(c) TREATMENT OF DISTRIBUTIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), no gain or loss shall be recognized to a corporation a party to a reorganization on the distribution to its shareholders of property in pursuance of the plan of reorganization.

"(2) DISTRIBUTIONS OF APPRECIATED PROPERTY.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If—

"(i) in a distribution referred to in paragraph (1), the corporation distributes property other than qualified property, and

"(ii) the fair market value of such property exceeds its adjusted basis (in the hands of the distributing corporation), then gain shall be recognized to the distributing corporation as if such property were sold to the distributee at its fair market value.

"(B) QUALIFIED PROPERTY.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualified property' means—

"(i) any stock in (or right to acquire stock in) the distributing corporation or obligation of the distributing corporation, or

"(ii) any stock in (or right to acquire stock in) another corporation which is a party to the reorganization or obligation of another corporation which is such a party if such stock (or right) or obligation is received by the distributing corporation in the exchange.

"(C) TREATMENT OF LIABILITIES.—If any property distributed in the distribution referred to in paragraph (1) is subject to a liability or the shareholder assumes a liability of the distributing corporation in connection with the distribution, then, for purposes of subparagraph (A), the fair market value of such property shall be treated as not less than the amount of such liability.

"(3) Treatment of certain transfers to creditors.—For purposes of this subsection, any transfer of qualified property by the corporation to its creditors in connection with the reorganization shall be treated as a distribution to its shareholders pursuant to the plan of reorganization.

"(4) Coordination with other provisions.—Section 311 and subpart B of part II of this subchapter shall not apply to any distribution referred to in paragraph (1)."

(B) Section 358 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) Definition of Nonrecognition Property in Case of Section 361 Exchange.—For purposes of this section, the property permitted to be received under section 361 without the recognition of gain or loss shall be treated as consisting only of stock or securities in another corporation a party to the reorganization."

(C) Section 355 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) Taxability of Corporation on Distribution.—Section 311 shall apply to any distribution—

"(1) to which this section (or so much of section 356 as relates to this section) applies, and

"(2) which is not in pursuance of a plan of reorganization, in the same manner as if such distribution were a distribution to which subpart A of part I applies; except that subsection (b) of section 311 shall not apply to any distribution of stock or securities in the controlled corporation."

(D) Subsection (c) of section 336 of the 1986 Code (as amended by section 631 of the Reform Act) is amended to read as follows:

"(c) Exception for Liquidations Which Are Part of a Reorganization.—

"For provision providing that this subpart does not apply to distributions in pursuance of a plan of reorganization, see section 361(c)(4)."

(E) Subsection (a) of section 311 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "distribution, with respect to its stock," and inserting in lieu thereof "distribution (not in complete liquidation) with respect to its stock".

(F) The table of sections for subpart C of part III of subchapter C of chapter 1 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out the item relating to section 361 and inserting in lieu thereof the following new item:

"Sec. 361. Nonrecognition of gain or loss to corporations; treatment of distributions."

(G) Effective with respect to transfers on or after June 21, 1988, section 351 of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating subsection (f) as subsection (g) and by inserting after subsection (e) the following new subsection:

"(f) Treatment of Controlled Corporation.—If—

"(1) property is transferred to a corporation (hereinafter in this subsection referred to as the 'controlled corporation') in an exchange with respect to which gain or loss is not recognized (in whole or in part) to the transferor under this section, and

"(2) such exchange is not in pursuance of a plan of reorganization, section 311 shall apply to any transfer in such exchange by the controlled corporation in the same manner as if such transfer were a distribution to which subpart A of part I applies."

(6) Subparagraph (A) of section 280G(b)(5) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) in clause (i) by striking out "section 1361(b))" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 1361(b) but without regard to paragraph (1)(C) thereof)", and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following: "Stock described in section 1504(a)(4) shall not be taken into account under clause (ii)(I) if the payment does not adversely affect the shareholder's redemption and liquidation rights."

(7) Subparagraph (B) of section 280G(b)(5) of the 1986 Code (relating to shareholder approval requirements) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"The regulations prescribed under subsection (e) shall include regulations providing for the application of this subparagraph in the case of shareholders which are not individuals (including the treatment of nonvoting interests in an entity which is a shareholder) and where an entity holds a de minimis amount of stock in the corporation."

(8) Paragraph (5) of section 280G(d) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "officer or any member" and inserting in lieu thereof "officer of any member".

(9) Paragraph (3) of section 338(e) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "which meet the 80 percent requirements of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of subsection (d)(3)" and inserting in lieu thereof "which meet the requirements of section 1504(a)(2)".

(10)(A) Paragraph (7) of section 1504(b) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(7) A DISC (as defined in section 992(a)(1))."

(B) Section 1504 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) Special Rule for Certain Amounts Derived From a Corporation Previously Treated as a DISC.—In determining the consolidated taxable income of an affiliated group for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1984, a corporation which had been a DISC and which would otherwise be a member of such group shall not be treated as such a member with respect to—

"(1) any distribution (or deemed distribution) of accumulated DISC income which was not treated as previously taxed income under section 805(b)(2)(A) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984, and

"(2) any amount treated as received under section 805(b)(3) of such Act."

(e) Provision Related to Section 1806 of the Reform Act.—If—

(1) on a return for the 1st taxable year of the trusts involved beginning after March 1, 1984, 2 or more trusts were treated as a single trust for purposes of the tax imposed by chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954,

(2) such trusts would have been required to be so treated but for the amendment made by section 1806(b) of the Reform Act, and

(3) such trusts did not accumulate any income during such taxable year and did not make any accumulation distributions during such taxable year, then, notwithstanding the amendment made by section 1806(b) of the Reform Act, such trusts shall be treated as one trust for purposes of such taxable year.

(f) Amendments Related to Section 1807 of the Reform Act.—

(1) Paragraphs (1)(A) and (2)(E) of section 468B(d) of the 1986 Code are each amended by striking out "the taxpayer" and inserting in lieu thereof "the taxpayer (or any related person)".

(2) Subparagraph (A) of section 468B(d)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(A) which is established pursuant to a court order and which extinguishes completely the taxpayer's tort liability with respect to claims described in subparagraph (D),".

(3) Clause (i) of section 1807(a)(7)(C) of the Reform Act is amended to read as follows:

"(i) any portion of such fund which is established pursuant to a court order and with qualified payments, which meets the requirements of subparagraphs (C) and (D) of section 468B(d)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (as added by this paragraph), and with respect to which an election is made under subparagraph (F) thereof, shall be treated as a designated settlement fund for purposes of section 468B of such Code,"

(4) Paragraph (2) of section 468B(b) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "the corporation," and inserting in lieu thereof "a corporation.", and

(B) by striking out "no other" and inserting in lieu thereof "No other".

(5)(A) Section 468B of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) Clarification of Taxation of Certain Funds.—Nothing in any provision of law shall be construed as providing that an escrow account, settlement fund, or similar fund is not subject to current income tax. The Secretary shall prescribe regulations providing for the taxation of any such account or fund whether as a grantor trust or otherwise."

(B) Subparagraph (D) of section 1807(a)(7) of the Reform Act is hereby repealed.

(g) Amendments Related to Section 1810 of the Reform Act.—

(1) Paragraph (5) of section 1810(a) of the Reform Act is amended by striking out "section 125(b)(5)" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "section 121(b)(5)".

(h) Amendment Related to Section 1821 of the Reform Act.—

(1) Subsection (e) of section 812 of the 1986 Code (relating to dividends from certain subsidiaries not included in gross investment income) is amended to read as follows:

"(e) Dividends From Certain Subsidiaries Not Included in Gross Investment Income.—

"(1) In general.—For purposes of this section, the term 'gross investment income' shall not include any dividend received by the life insurance company which is a 100 percent dividend.

"(2) 100 percent dividend defined.—

"(A) In general.—Except as provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), the term '100 percent dividend' means any dividend if the percentage used for purposes of determining the deduction allowable under section 243, 244, or 245(b) is 100 percent.

"(B) Certain dividends out of tax-exempt interest, etc.—The term '100 percent dividend' does not include any distribution by a corporation to the extent such distribution is out of tax-exempt interest or out of dividends which are not 100 percent dividends (determined with the application of this subparagraph).

"(C) Certain dividends received by foreign corporations.—The term '100 percent dividends' does not include any dividend described in section 805(a)(4)(E) (relating to certain dividends in the case of foreign corporations)."

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall take effect as if included in the amendments made by section 211 of the Tax Reform Act of 1984.

(i) Amendment Related to Section 1822 of the Reform Act.—Clause (i) of section 216(b)(4)(C) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 (relating to section 818(c) elections made by certain acquired companies) is amended by striking out "clause (i)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subclause (I)".

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Solely for purposes of determining gain or loss on the disposition of intragroup stock and the amount of any inclusion by reason of an excess loss account, in determining the adjustments to the basis of such intragroup stock on account of the earnings and profits of any member of an affiliated group for any consolidated year (and in determining the amount in such account)—"

(B) Paragraph (2) of section 10222(a) of the Revenue Act of 1987 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN EXCESS LOSS ACCOUNTS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—If—

"(I) any disposition on or before December 15, 1987, of stock resulted in an inclusion of an excess loss account (or would have so resulted if the amendments made by paragraph (1) had applied to such disposition), and

"(II) there is an unrecaptured amount with respect to such disposition, the portion of such unrecaptured amount allocable to stock disposed of in a disposition to which the amendment made by paragraph (1) applies shall be taken into account as negative basis. To the extent permitted by the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate, the preceding sentence shall not apply to the extent the taxpayer elects to reduce its basis in indebtedness of the corporation with respect to which there would have been an excess loss account.

"(ii) SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this subparagraph—

"(I) UNRECAPTURED AMOUNT.—The term 'unrecaptured amount' means the amount by which the inclusion referred to in clause (i)(I) would have been increased if the amendment made by paragraph (1) and applied to the disposition.

"(II) COORDINATION WITH BINDING CONTRACT EXCEPTION.—A disposition shall be treated as occurring on or before December 15, 1987, if the amendment made by paragraph (1) does not apply to such disposition by reason of subparagraph (B)."

(2) Subsection (e) of section 1503 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) ADJUSTMENTS.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, proper adjustments shall be made in the application of paragraph (1)—

"(A) in the case of any property acquired by the corporation before consolidation, for the difference between the adjusted basis of such property for purposes of computing taxable income and its adjusted basis for purposes of computing earnings and profits, and

"(B) in the case of any property, for any basis adjustment under section 48(q)."

(3)(A) Paragraph (2) of section 1503(e) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) APPLICATION OF SECTION 312(n)(7) NOT AFFECTED.—The reference in paragraph (1) to subsection (n) of section 312 shall be treated as not including a reference to paragraph (7) of such subsection."

(B) Subsection (e) of section 301 of the 1986 Code (as redesignated by section 106(e)(12) of this Act) is amended by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (4) and by inserting after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

"(3) APPLICATION OF SECTION 312(n)(7) NOT AFFECTED.—The reference in paragraph (1) to subsection (n) of section 312 shall be treated as not including a reference to paragraph (7) of such subsection."

(4) Subparagraph (B) of section 10222(b)(2) of the Revenue Act of 1987 is amended to read as follows:

"(B) EXCEPTION.—The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall not apply for purposes of determining gain or loss on any disposition of stock after December 15, 1987, and before January 1, 1989, if such disposition is pursuant to a written binding contact, governmental order, letter of intent or preliminary agreement, or stock acquisition agreement, in effect on or before December 15, 1987."

(k) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 10223 OF THE ACT.—

(1) Subparagraph (D) of section 355(b)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out clauses (i) and (ii) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(i) was not acquired by any distributee corporation directly (or through 1 or more corporations, whether through the distributing corporation or otherwise) within the period described in subparagraph (B) and was not acquired by the distributing corporation directly (or through 1 or more corporations) within such period, or

"(ii) was so acquired by any such corporation within such period, but, in each case in which such control was so acquired, it was so acquired, only by reason of transactions in which gain or loss was not recognized in whole or in part, or only by reason of such transactions combined with acquisitions before the beginning of such period."

(2) Subparagraph (A) of section 304(b)(4) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "stock of 1 member" and inserting in lieu thereof "stock from 1 member".

(3) Paragraph (2) of section 10223(d) of the Revenue Act of 1987 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN MEMBERS OF AFFILIATED GROUP.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), all distributees which were in existence on the designated date and were members of the same affiliated group on such date shall be treated as 1 distributee.

"(ii) LIMITATION TO STOCK HELD ON DESIGNATED DATE.—Clause (i) shall not exempt any distribution from the amendments made by this section if such distribution is with respect to stock not held by the distributee (determined without regard to clause (i)) on the designated date, directly or indirectly, through a corporation which goes out of existence in the transaction.

"(iii) DESIGNATED DATE.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'designated date' means the later of—

"(I) December 15, 1987, or

"(II) the date on which the acquisition meeting the requirements of subparagraph (A) occurred."

(4) Subparagraph (B) of section 10223(d)(2) of the Revenue Act of 1987 is amended—

(A) by striking out "before January 1, 1993" and inserting in lieu thereof "on or before March 31, 1988", and

(B) by striking out "before January 1, 1989,".

(l) AMENDMENT RELATED TO SECTION 10224 OF THE ACT.—Sections 1201(a) and 1561(a) of the 1986 Code, and section 904(b)(3)(D)(ii) of the 1986 Code (as amended by section 106(b)(2) of this Act), are each amended by striking out "section 11(b)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 11(b)(1)".

(m) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 10226 OF THE ACT.—

(1)(A) Subsection (a) of section 384 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—If—

"(1)(A) a corporation acquires directly (or through 1 or more other corporations) control of another corporation, or

"(B) the assets of a corporation are acquired by another corporation in a reorganization described in subparagraph (A), (C), or (D) of section 368(a)(1), and

"(2) either of such corporations is a gain corporation, income for any recognition period taxable year (to the extent attributable to recognized built-in gains) shall not be offset by any preacquisition loss (other than a preacquisition loss of the gain corporation)."

(B) Subsection (c) of section 384 of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (8) and by inserting after paragraph (3) the following new paragraphs:

"(4) GAIN CORPORATION.—The term 'gain corporation' means any corporation with a net unrealized built-in gain.

"(5) CONTROL.—The term 'control' means ownership of stock in a corporation which meets the requirements of section 1504(a)(2).

"(6) TREATMENT OF MEMBERS OF SAME GROUP.—Except as provided in regulations and except for purposes of subsection (b), all corporations which are members of the same affiliated group immediately before the acquisition date shall be treated as 1 corporation. To the extent provided in regulations, section 1504 shall be applied without regard to subsection (b) thereof for purposes of the preceding sentence.

"(7) TREATMENT OF PREDECESSORS AND SUCCESSORS.—Any reference in this section to a corporation shall include a reference to any predecessor or successor thereof."

(C) Paragraph (2) of section 384(c) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(2) ACQUISITION DATE.—The term 'acquisition date' means—

"(A) in any case described in subsection (a)(1)(A), the date on which the acquisition of control occurs, or

"(B) in any case described in subsection (a)(1)(B), the date of the transfer in the reorganization."

(D) Paragraph (1) of section 384(c) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "subsection (a)(2)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (a)(1)(B)".

(2) Paragraph (2) of section 384(e) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "the gain corporation" and inserting in lieu thereof "a corporation".

(3) Subsection (b) of section 384 of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(b) EXCEPTION WHERE CORPORATIONS UNDER COMMON CONTROL.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to the preacquisition loss of any corporation if such corporation and the gain corporation were members of the same controlled group at all times during the 5-year period ending on the acquisition date.

"(2) CONTROLLED GROUP.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'controlled group' means a controlled group of corporations (as defined in section 1563(a)); except that—

"(A) 'more than 50 percent' shall be substituted for 'at least 80 percent' each place it appears,

"(B) the ownership requirements of section 1563(a) must be met both with respect to voting power and value, and

"(C) the determination shall be made without regard to subsection (a)(4) of section 1563.

"(3) SHORTER PERIOD WHERE GAIN CORPORATION NOT IN EXISTENCE FOR 5 YEARS.—If the gain corporation was not in existence throughout the 5-year period referred to in paragraph (1), the period during which the gain corporation was in existence shall be substituted for such 5-year period."

(4) Section 384 of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f) and by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

"(e) ORDERING RULES FOR NET OPERATING LOSSES, ETC.—

"(1) CARRYOVER RULES.—If any preacquisition loss may not offset a recognized buildin gain by reason of this section, such gain shall not be taken into account in determining under section 172(b)(2) the amount of such loss which may be carried to other taxable years. A similar rule shall apply in the case of any excess credit or net capital loss limited by reason of subsection (d).

"(2) ORDERING RULE FOR LOSSES CARRIED FROM SAME TAXABLE YEAR.—In any case in which—

"(A) a preacquisition loss for any taxable year is subject to limitation under subsection (a), and

"(B) a net operating loss from such taxable year is not subject to such limitation, taxable income shall be treated as having been offset 1st by the loss subject to such limitation."

(5) In any case where the acquisition date (as defined in section 384(c)(2) of the 1986 Code as amended by this subsection) is before March 31, 1988, the acquiring corporation may elect to have the amendments made by this subsection not apply. Such an election shall be made in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate shall prescribe and shall be made not later than the later of the due date (including extensions) for filing the return for the taxable year of the acquiring corporation in which the acquisition date occurs or the date 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act. Such an election, once made, shall be irrevocable.

(n) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 10227 OF THE ACT.—Paragraph (4) of section 1363(d) of the 1986 Code (relating to recapture of LIFO benefits) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D) NOT TREATED AS MEMBER OF AFFILIATED GROUP.—Except as provided in regulations, the corporation referred to in paragraph (1) shall not be treated as a member of an affiliated group with respect to the amount included in gross income under paragraph (1)."

(o) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 10228 OF THE ACT.—

(1)(A) Subsection (a) of section 5881 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "gain realized by such person on such receipt" and inserting in lieu thereof "gain or other income of such person by reason of such receipt".

(B)(i) Subsection (b) of section 5881 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "a corporation to directly or indirectly acquire its stock" and inserting in lieu thereof "a corporation (or any person acting in concert with such corporation) to directly or indirectly acquire stock of such corporation".

(ii) The amendment made by clause (i) shall apply to transactions occurring on or after March 31, 1988.

(C) Subsection (d) of section 5881 of the 1986 Code is amended—

(i) by striking out "the gain" and inserting in lieu thereof "the gain or other income", and

(ii) by striking out "GAIN RECOGNIZED" in the subsection heading and inserting in lieu thereof "AMOUNT RECOGNIZED".

(2) Section 5881 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—For purposes of the deficiency procedures of subtitle F, any tax imposed by this section shall be treated as a tax imposed by subtitle A."

(1) Section 4972(c) of the 1986 Code is amended by redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (5) and by inserting after paragraph (3) the following new paragraph:

"(4) SPECIAL RULE FOR SELF-EMPLOYED INDIVIDUALS.—For purposes of paragraph (1), if—

"(A) the amount which is required to be contributed to a plan under section 412 on behalf of an individual who is an employee (within the meaning of section 401(c)(1)), exceeds

"(B) the earned income (within the meaning of section 404(a)(8)) of such individual derived from the trade or business with respect to which such plan is established, such excess shall be treated as an amount allowable as a deduction under section 404."

(2)(A) Subparagraph (C) of section 412(1)(3) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(i) by striking out "October 17, 1987" in clause (i) and inserting in lieu thereof "October 29, 1987", and

(ii) by striking out "October 16, 1987" in clause (iii) and inserting in lieu thereof "October 28, 1987".

(B) Subparagraph (C) of section 302(d)(3) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 is amended—

(i) by striking out "October 17, 1987" in clause (i) and inserting in lieu thereof "October 29, 1987", and

(ii) by striking out "October 16, 1987" in clause (iii) and inserting in lieu thereof "October 28, 1987".

(b) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 9307.—

(1) The last sentence of section 404(a)(1)(D) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "For purposes of this subparagraph" and inserting in lieu thereof "For purposes of determining whether a plan has more than 100 participants".

(2) Section 404(a)(7)(A) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For purposes of clause (ii), if paragraph (1)(D) applies to a defined benefit plan for any plan year, the amount necessary to satisfy the minimum funding standard provided by section 412 with respect to such plan for such plan year shall not be less than the unfunded current liability of such plan under section 412(l).".

(3) Section 404(a)(1)(D) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "(without regard to any reduction by the credit balance in the funding standard account)".

(c) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO SECTION 9301.—

(1) Section 414(l) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(2) ALLOCATION OF ASSETS IN PLAN SPIN-OFFS, ETC.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a plan spin-off of a defined benefit plan, a trust which forms part of—

"(i) the original plan, or

"(ii) any plan spun off from such plan, shall not constitute a qualified trust under this section unless the applicable percentage of excess assets are allocated to each of such plans.

"(B) APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'applicable percentage' means, with respect to each of the plans described in clauses (i) and (ii) of subparagraph (A), the percentage determined by dividing—

"(i) the excess (if any) of—

"(I) the full funding limitation applicable to the plan under section 412(c)(7), over

"(II) the amount of the assets required to be allocated to the plan after the spin-off (without regard to this paragraph), by

"(ii) the sum of the excess amounts determined separately under clause (i) for all such plans.

"(C) EXCESS ASSETS.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'excess assets' means an amount equal to the excess (if any) of—

"(i) the fair market value of the assets of the original plan immediately before the spin-off, over

"(ii) the amount of assets required to be allocated after the spin-off to all plans (determined without regard to this paragraph).

"(D) PLANS OUTSIDE CONTROLLED GROUPS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—This paragraph shall not apply to any plan involved in a spin-off if, after such spin-off, such plan is maintained by an employer who is not a member of the same controlled group as the employer maintaining the original plan. The amount determined under subparagraph (C)(ii) shall be increased by the amount of any assets allocated to a plan described in the preceding sentence in excess of the amount described in subparagraph (C)(ii).

"(ii) CONTROLLED GROUP.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'controlled group' means any group treated as a single employer under subsection (b), (c), (m), or (o) of section 414.

"(E) PARAGRAPH NOT TO APPLY TO MULTIEMPLOYER PLANS.—This paragraph does not apply to any multiemployer plan with respect to any spin-off to the extent that participants either before or after the spin-off are covered under a multiemployer plan to which title IV of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 applies.

"(F) APPLICATION TO SIMILAR TRANSACTION.—Except as provided by the Secretary, rules similar to the rules of this paragraph shall apply to transactions similar to spin-offs."

(2) Section 414(l) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out the heading and inserting in lieu thereof:

"(l) MERGER AND CONSOLIDATIONS OF PLANS OR TRANSFERS OF PLAN ASSETS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—".

(3)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the amendments made by this subsection shall apply with respect to transactions occurring after July 26, 1988.

(B) The amendments made by this subsection shall not apply to any transaction occurring after July 26, 1988, if on or before such date the board of directors of the employer, approves such transaction or the employer took similar binding action.

"(I) at the rate of 120 percent of the Federal mid-term rate (as in effect under section 1274 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 for the 1st month of a plan year for the period beginning with the 1st plan year to which subsection (a)(2) applies by reason of the applicable effective date) and ending with the date on which the determination is being made, and

"(II) at the interest rate which would be used under the plan under section 205(g)(3) (as of the determination date) for the period beginning with the determination date and ending on the date on which the employee attains normal retirement age."

(ii) Subparagraph (B) of section 204(c)(2) of ERISA is amended to read as follows:

"(B) DEFINED BENEFIT PLANS.—In the case of a defined benefit plan, the accrued benefit derived from contributions made by an employee as of any applicable date is the amount equal to the employee's accumulated contributions expressed as an annual benefit commencing at normal retirement age, using an interest rate which would be used under the plan under section 205(g)(3) (as of the determination date)."

(iii) Section 204(c)(2) of ERISA is amended by striking out subparagraph (E).

(iv) Paragraph (23) of section 3 of ERISA is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new flush sentence: "The accrued benefit of an employee shall not be less than the amount determined under section 204(c)(2)(B) with respect to the employee's accumulated contribution."

(C) If—

(i) during the period beginning December 22, 1987, and ending June 21, 1988, a plan was amended to reflect the amendments made by section 9346 of the Pension Protection Act, and

(ii) such plan is amended to reflect the amendments made by this paragraph, any plan amendment described in clause (ii) shall not be treated as reducing accrued benefits for purposes of section 411(d)(6) of the 1986 Code or section 204(g) of ERISA.

(14) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, any amendment made by this subsection shall take effect as if included in the provision of the Pension Protection Act to which such amendment relates.

TITLE III—CORRECTIONS TO DIESEL FUEL EXCISE TAX COLLECTION AND EXEMPTION PROCEDURES

SEC. 301. TAX-FREE PURCHASES OF CERTAIN FUELS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (c) of section 4093 of the 1986 Code (relating to exceptions; special rule) is amended to read as follows:

"(c) EXEMPTION FOR NONTAXABLE USES AND BUS USES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—No tax shall be imposed by section 4091 on fuel sold by a producer or importer for use by the purchaser in a nontaxable use (as defined in section 6427(l)(2)) or a use described in section 6427(b)(1).

"(2) EXCEPTIONS.—

"(A) CERTAIN LEAKING UNDERGROUND STORAGE TANK TRUST FUND TAXES.—In the case of fuel sold for use in—

"(i) a diesel-powered train, and

"(ii) an aircraft, paragraph (1) shall not apply to so much of the tax imposed by section 4091 as is attributable to the Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund financing rate imposed by such section.

"(B) CERTAIN BUS USES.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to so much of the tax imposed by section 4091 as is not refundable by reason of the application of section 6427(b)(2)(A).

"(3) REGISTRATION REQUIRED.—Except to the extent provided by the Secretary, paragraph (1) shall not apply to any sale unless—

"(A) both the seller and the purchaser are registered under section 4101, and

"(B) the purchaser's name, address, and registration number under such section are provided to the seller.

"(4) INFORMATION REPORTING.—

"(A) RETURNS BY PRODUCERS AND IMPORTERS.—Each producer or importer who makes a reduced-tax sale during the calendar year shall make a return (at such time and in such form as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe) showing with respect to each such sale—

"(i) the name, address, and registration number under section 4101 of the purchaser,

"(ii) the amount of fuel sold, and

"(iii) such other information as the Secretary may require.

"(B) STATEMENTS TO PURCHASERS.—Every person required to make a return under subparagraph (A) shall furnish to each purchaser whose name is required to be set forth on such return a written statement showing the name and address of the person required to make such return, the registration number under section 4101 of such person, and the information required to be shown on the return with respect to such purchaser. The written statement required under the preceding sentence shall be furnished to the purchaser on or before January 31 of the year following the calendar year for which the return under subparagraph (A) is required to be made.

"(C) RETURNS BY PURCHASERS.—Each person who uses during the calendar year fuel purchased in a reduced-tax sale shall make a return (at such time and in such form as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe) showing—

"(i) whether such use was a nontaxable use (as defined in section 6427(l)(2)) and the amount of fuel so used,

"(ii) the date of the sale of the fuel so used,

"(iii) the name, address, and registration number under section 4101 of the seller, and

"(iv) such other information as the Secretary may require.

"(D) REDUCED-TAX SALE.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'reduced tax sale' means any sale of taxable fuel on which the amount of tax otherwise required to be paid under section 4091 is reduced by reason of paragraph (1) (other than sales described in subsections (a) and (b) of this section)."

(b) PENALTY FOR FAILING TO PROVIDE INFORMATION.—

(1) Subparagraph (B) of section 6724(d)(1) of the 1986 Code (defining information return) is amended by striking out "or" at the end of clause (ix), by striking out the period at the end of clause (x) and inserting in lieu thereof ", or", and by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(xi) subparagraph (A) or (C) of subsection (c)(4), or subsection (d), of section 4093 (relating to information reporting with respect to tax on diesel and aviation fuels)."

(2) Paragraph (2) of section 6724(d) of the 1986 Code (defining payee statement) is amended by striking out "or" at the end of subparagraph (S), by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (T) and inserting in lieu thereof ", or", and by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(U) section 4093(c)(4)(B) (relating to certain purchasers of diesel and aviation fuels)."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on October 1, 1988.

(2) REFUNDS WITH INTEREST FOR PRE-EFFECTIVE DATE PURCHASES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of fuel—

(i) which is purchased from a producer or importer during the period beginning on April 1, 1988, and ending on September 30, 1988, and

(ii) which is used (before the claim under this subparagraph is filed) by any person in a nontaxable use (as defined in section 6427(l)(2) of the 1986 Code), the Secretary of the Treasury or the Secretary's delegate shall pay (with interest) to such person the amount of tax imposed on such fuel under section 4091 of the 1986 Code (to the extent not attributable to amounts described in section 6427(l)(3) of the 1986 Code) if claim therefor is filed not later than December 31, 1988. Not more than 1 claim may be filed under the preceding sentence and such claim shall not be taken into account under section 6427(i) of the 1986 Code. Any claim for refund filed under this paragraph shall be considered a claim for refund under section 6427(l) of the 1986 Code.

(B) INTEREST.—The amount of interest payable under subparagraph (A) shall be determined under section 6611 of the 1986 Code except that—

(i) the date of the overpayment with respect to fuel purchased during any month shall be treated as being the 1st day of the succeeding month, and

(ii) the rate of such interest shall be the underpayment rate determined under section 6621(a)(2) of the 1986 Code.

No interest shall be paid under this paragraph with respect to fuel used by any agency of the United States.

(C) REGISTRATION PROCEDURES REQUIRED TO BE SPECIFIED BEFORE EFFECTIVE DATE.—Not later than October 1, 1988, the Secretary of the Treasury or the Secretary's delegate shall prescribe the procedures for complying with the requirements of section 4093(c)(3) of the 1986 Code (as added by this section).

SEC. 302. EXPEDITED REFUND OR INCOME TAX CREDIT ALLOWED FOR RETAIL SALES OF CERTAIN FUELS USED IN NONTAXABLE USES.

(a) EXPEDITED REFUND.—Section 6427(i) of the 1986 Code (relating to time for filing claims; period covered) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) SPECIAL RULE FOR NONTAXABLE USES OF DIESEL FUEL AND AVIATION FUEL TAXED UNDER SECTION 4091.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), a claim may be filed under subsection (l) by any person with respect to fuel used for any period for which $750 or more is payable under such subsection (l) (disregarding any amount for which a claim has been previously filed under this subsection).

"(B) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN USES.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply with respect to any use of fuel—

"(i) by any agency of the United States,

"(ii) described in subsection (b),

"(iii) described in subsection (e), or

"(iv) described in section 4093(c).

"(C) TIME FOR FILING CLAIM.—A claim may be filed under this paragraph on or after the last day of the quarter during which a period described in subparagraph (A) occurs."

(b) CLAIM PAID WITH INTEREST.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 6427(l) of the 1986 Code (relating to refunds for nontaxable uses of diesel fuel and aviation fuel taxed under section 4091) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) INTEREST.—The amount of interest payable under paragraph (1) shall be determined under section 6611 except that the date of the overpayment with respect to fuel purchased during any month shall be treated as being the 1st day of the succeeding month."

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Paragraph (1) of section 6427(l) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "(without interest)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(with interest)".

(c) ALLOWANCE OF INCOME TAX CREDIT.—Paragraph (2) of section 6427(k) of the 1986 Code (relating to income tax credit in lieu of payment) is amended by striking out "subsection (i)(2) or (h)(3)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (i)(2), (i)(3), or (i)(4)".

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 6427(i) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "paragraph (2)" and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraphs (2), (3), and (4)".

(2) Paragraph (2)(A) of section 6427(i) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "(l),".

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to fuel purchased for use in a nontaxable use (as defined in section 6427(l)(2) of the 1986 Code) after September 30, 1988.

SEC. 303. MARINE RETAILERS TREATED AS PRODUCERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subparagraph (B) of section 4092(b)(1) of the 1986 Code (relating to certain persons treated as producers) is amended by striking out the period at the end of clause (ii) and inserting in lieu thereof ", or" and by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(iii) a retailer selling diesel fuel exclusively to purchasers as supplies for commercial and noncommercial vessels."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to sales after September 30, 1988.

TITLE IV—OTHER CORRECTIONS AND MODIFICATIONS

Subtitle A—Corporate Estimated Tax Payments

SEC. 401. AMOUNT OF CORPORATE ESTIMATED TAX INSTALLMENT REDUCTION RECAPTURE INCREASED.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 6655(e)(1) of the 1986 Code (relating to lower required installment where annualized income installment or adjusted seasonal installment is less than amount determined under subsection (d)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "90 percent" and inserting in lieu thereof "the applicable percentage", and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For purposes of the preceding sentence, the applicable percentage shall be determined in accordance with the following table:

"In the case of any required installment in:	The applicable percentage is:
1989, 1990, or 1991	94.25
1992	95.00
1993 or thereafter	95.50."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to installments required to be made after December 31, 1988.

Subtitle B—Indian Fishing Rights

SEC. 411. FEDERAL TAX TREATMENT OF INCOME DERIVED BY INDIANS FROM EXERCISE OF FISHING RIGHTS SECURED BY TREATY, ETC.

(a) GENERAL RULES.—Subchapter C of chapter 80 of the 1986 Code (relating to provisions affecting more than one subtitle) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 7873. INCOME DERIVED BY INDIANS FROM EXERCISE OF FISHING RIGHTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) INCOME AND SELF-EMPLOYMENT TAXES.—No tax shall be imposed by subtitle A on income derived—

"(A) by a member of an Indian tribe directly or through a qualified Indian entity, or

"(B) by a qualified Indian entity, from a fishing rights-related activity of such tribe.

"(2) EMPLOYMENT TAXES.—No tax shall be imposed by subtitle C on remuneration paid for services performed in a fishing rights-related activity of an Indian tribe by a member of such tribe for another member of such tribe or for a qualified Indian entity.

"(b) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) FISHING RIGHTS-RELATED ACTIVITY.—The term 'fishing rights-related activity' means, with respect to an Indian tribe, any activity directly related to harvesting, processing, or transporting fish harvested in the exercise of a recognized fishing right of such tribe or to selling such fish but only if substantially all of such harvesting was performed by members of such tribe.

"(2) RECOGNIZED FISHING RIGHTS.—The term 'recognized fishing rights' means, with respect to an Indian tribe, fishing rights secured as of March 17, 1988, by a treaty between such tribe and the United States or by an Executive order or an Act of Congress.

"(3) QUALIFIED INDIAN ENTITY.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified Indian entity' means, with respect to an Indian tribe, any entity if—

"(i) such entity is engaged in a fishing rights-related activity of such tribe,

"(ii) all of the equity interests in the entity are owned by qualified Indian tribes, members of such tribes, or their spouses,

"(iii) except as provided in regulations, in the case of an entity which engages to any extent in any substantial processing or transporting of fish, 90 percent or more of the annual gross receipts of the entity is derived from fishing rights-related activities of one or more qualified Indian tribes each of which owns at least 10 percent of the equity interests in the entity, and

"(iv) substantially all of the management functions of the entity are performed by members of qualified Indian tribes.

For purposes of clause (iii), equity interests owned by a member (or the spouse of a member) of a qualified Indian tribe shall be treated as owned by the tribe.

"(B) QUALIFIED INDIAN TRIBE.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), an Indian tribe is a qualified Indian tribe with respect to an entity if such entity is engaged in a fishing rights-related activity of such tribe.

"(c) SPECIAL RULES.—

"(1) DISTRIBUTIONS FROM QUALIFIED INDIAN ENTITY.—For purposes of this section, any distribution with respect to an equity interest in a qualified Indian entity of an Indian tribe to a member of such tribe shall be treated as derived by such member from a fishing rights-related activity of such tribe to the extent such distribution is attributable to income derived by such entity from a fishing rights-related activity of such tribe.

"(2) DE MINIMIS UNRELATED AMOUNTS MAY BE EXCLUDED.—If, but for this paragraph, all but a de minimis amount—

"(A) derived by a qualified Indian tribal entity, or by an individual through such an entity, is entitled to the benefits of paragraph (1) of subsection (a), or

"(B) paid to an individual for services is entitled to the benefits of paragraph (2) of subsection (a), then the entire amount shall be entitled to the benefits of such paragraph."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for such subchapter C is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Sec. 7873. Income derived by Indians from exercise of fishing rights."

SEC. 412. STATE TAX TREATMENT OF INCOME DERIVED BY INDIANS FROM EXERCISE OF FISHING RIGHTS SECURED BY TREATY, ETC.

Section 2079 of the Revised Statutes (25 U.S.C. 71) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Such treaties, and any Executive orders and Acts of Congress under which the rights of any Indian tribe to fish are secured, shall be construed to prohibit (in addition to any other prohibition) the imposition under any law of a State or political subdivision thereof of any tax on any income derived from the exercise of rights to fish secured by such treaty, Executive order, or Act of Congress if section 7873 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 does not permit a like Federal tax to be imposed on such income."

SEC. 413. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS RELATING TO COVERAGE UNDER OLD-AGE, SURVIVORS, AND DISABILITY INSURANCE PROGRAM.

(a) EXCLUSION FROM WAGES OF INCOME DERIVED BY INDIANS FROM EXERCISE OF FISHING RIGHTS.—Section 209 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 409) is amended—

(1) in subsection (r), by striking out "or" at the end;

(2) in subsection (s), by striking out the period and inserting in lieu thereof "; or"; and

(3) by inserting after subsection (s) the following new subsection:

"(t) Remuneration consisting of income excluded from taxation under section 7873 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to income derived by Indians from exercise of fishing rights)."

(b) EXCLUSION FROM NET EARNINGS FROM SELF-EMPLOYMENT OF INCOME DERIVED BY INDIANS FROM EXERCISE OF FISHING RIGHTS.—Section 211(a) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 411(a)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (12), by striking out "and" at the end;

(2) in paragraph (13), by striking out the period and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (13) the following new paragraph:

"(14) There shall be excluded income excluded from taxation under section 7873 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to income derived by Indians from exercise of fishing rights)."

(c) CROSS-REFERENCES IN SECA AND FICA TO APPLICABLE INDIAN FISHING RIGHTS PROVISIONS.—

(1) SECA.—Subsection (a) of section 1402 of the 1986 Code (relating to net earnings from self-employment) is amended by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (13), by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (14) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and", and by inserting after paragraph (14) the following new paragraph:

"(15) in the case of a member of an Indian tribe, the special rules of section 7873 (relating to income derived by Indians from exercise of fishing rights) shall apply."

(2) FICA.—Subsection (a) of section 3121 of the 1986 Code (relating to wages) is amended by striking out "or" at the end of paragraph (19), by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (20) and inserting in lieu thereof "; or", and by inserting after paragraph (20) the following new paragraph:

"(21) in the case of a member of an Indian tribe, any remuneration on which no tax is imposed by this chapter by reason of section 7873 (relating to income derived by Indians from exercise of fishing rights)."

SEC. 414. EFFECTIVE DATE; NO INFERENCE CREATED.

(a) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subtitle shall apply to all periods beginning before, on, or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) NO INFERENCE CREATED.—Nothing in the amendments made by this subtitle shall create any inference as to the existence or non-existence or scope of any exemption from tax for income derived from fishing rights secured as of March 17, 1988, by any treaty, law, or Executive Order."

Subtitle C—Repeal of Limitation on Treasury Long-Term Bond Authority

SEC. 421. REPEAL OF LIMIT ON LONG-TERM BONDS.

The last sentence of section 3102(a) of title 31, United States Code, is hereby repealed.

Subtitle D—Simplification and Clarification Provisions

SEC. 431. FAILURE TO SATISFY CONTINUATION COVERAGE REQUIREMENTS OF GROUP HEALTH PLANS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 43 of the 1986 Code (relating to qualified pension, etc., plans) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 4980B. FAILURE TO SATISFY CONTINUATION COVERAGE REQUIREMENTS OF GROUP HEALTH PLANS.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—There is hereby imposed a tax on the failure of a group health plan to meet the requirements of subsection (f) with respect to any qualified beneficiary.

"(b) AMOUNT OF TAX.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The amount of the tax imposed by subsection (a) on any failure with respect to a qualified beneficiary shall be $100 for each day in the noncompliance period with respect to such failure.

"(2) NONCOMPLIANCE PERIOD.—For purposes of this section, the term 'noncompliance period' means, with respect to any failure, the period—

"(A) beginning on the date such failure 1st occurs, and

"(B) ending on the earlier of—

"(i) the date such failure is corrected, or

"(ii) the last day in the period applicable to the qualified beneficiary under subsection (f)(2)(B) (determined without regard to clause (iii) thereof).

"(3) MINIMUM TAX FOR NONCOMPLIANCE PERIOD WHERE FAILURE DISCOVERED AFTER NOTICE OF EXAMINATION.—Notwithstanding paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (c)—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of 1 or more failures with respect to a qualified beneficiary—

"(i) which are not corrected before the date a notice of examination of income tax liability is sent to the employer, and

"(ii) which occurred or continued during the period under examination, the amount of tax imposed by subsection (a) by reason of such failures with respect to such beneficiary shall not be less than the lesser of $2,500 or the amount of tax which would be imposed by subsection (a) without regard to such paragraphs.

"(B) HIGHER MINIMUM TAX WHERE VIOLATIONS ARE MORE THAN DE MINIMIS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—To the extent violations by the employer (or the plan in the case of a multiemployer plan) for any year are more than de minimis, subparagraph (A) shall be applied by substituting '$15,000' for '$2,500' with respect to the employer (or such plan).

"(ii) PERSONS OTHER THAN EMPLOYER OR PLAN.—In any case where the tax under subsection (a) is imposed on a person described in subsection (e)(2), only violations by such person shall be taken into account under clause (i) in determining the amount of tax to be imposed on such person.

"(c) LIMITATIONS ON AMOUNT OF TAX.—

"(1) TAX NOT TO APPLY WHERE FAILURE NOT DISCOVERED EXERCISING REASONABLE DILIGENCE.—No tax shall be imposed by subsection (a) on any failure during any period for which it is established to the satisfaction of the Secretary that none of the persons referred to in subsection (e) knew, or exercising reasonable diligence would have known, that such failure existed.

"(2) TAX NOT TO APPLY TO FAILURES CORRECTED WITHIN 30 DAYS.—No tax shall be imposed by subsection (a) on any failure if—

"(A) such failure was due to reasonable cause and not to willful neglect, and

"(B) such failure is corrected during the 30-day period beginning on the 1st date any of the persons referred to in subsection (e) knew, or exercising reasonable diligence would have known, that such failure existed.

"(3) $100 LIMIT ON AMOUNT OF TAX FOR FAILURES ON ANY DAY WITH RESPECT TO A QUALIFIED BENEFICIARY.—The maximum amount of tax imposed by subsection (a) on failures on any day during the noncompliance period with respect to a qualified beneficiary shall be $100.

"(4) SPECIAL RULE WHERE MORE THAN 1 QUALIFIED BENEFICIARY.—For purposes of determining the amount of tax imposed by this section, if there is more than 1 qualified beneficiary with respect to a qualifying event for an employee, all failures with respect to such qualified beneficiaries shall be treated as occurring with respect to 1 beneficiary.

"(5) OVERALL LIMITATION FOR UNINTENTIONAL FAILURES.—In the case of failures which are due to reasonable cause and not to willful neglect—

"(A) SINGLE EMPLOYER PLANS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—In the case of failures with respect to plans other than multiemployer plans, the tax imposed by subsection (a) for failures during the taxable year of the employer shall not exceed the amount equal to the lesser of—

"(I) 10 percent of the aggregate amount paid or incurred by the employer (or predecessor employer) during the preceding taxable year for group health plans, or

"(II) $500,000.

"(ii) TAXABLE YEARS IN THE CASE OF CERTAIN CONTROLLED GROUPS.—For purposes of this subparagraph, if not all persons who are treated as a single employer for purposes of this section have the same taxable year, the taxable years taken into account shall be determined under principles similar to the principles of section 1561.

"(B) MULTIEMPLOYER PLANS.—In the case of failures with respect to a multiemployer plan, the tax imposed by subsection (a) for failures during the taxable year of the trust forming part of such plan shall not exceed the amount equal to the lesser of—

"(i) 10 percent of the amount paid or incurred by such trust during such taxable year to provide medical care (as defined in section 213(d)) directly or through insurance, reimbursement, or otherwise, or

"(ii) $500,000.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, all plans of which the same trust forms a part shall be treated as 1 plan.

"(6) WAIVER BY SECRETARY.—In the case of a failure which is due to reasonable cause and not to willful neglect, the Secretary may waive part or all of the tax imposed by subsection (a) to the extent that the payment of such tax would be excessive relative to the failure involved.

"(d) TAX NOT TO APPLY TO CERTAIN PLANS.—This section shall not apply to—

"(1) any failure of a group health plan to meet the requirements of subsection (f) if all employers maintaining such plan normally employed fewer than 20 employees on a typical business day during the preceding calendar year,

"(2) any governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d)), or

"(3) any church plan (within the meaning of section 414(e)).

"(e) LIABILITY FOR TAX.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, the following shall be liable for the tax imposed by subsection (a) on a failure:

"(A) In the case of a plan other than a multiemployer plan, the employer.

"(B) In the case of a multiemployer plan, the plan.

"(2) FAILURE TO COVER QUALIFIED BENEFICIARIES WHERE CURRENT EMPLOYEES ARE COVERED.—A person shall be liable for the tax imposed by subsection (a) on a failure with respect to a qualified beneficiary if—

"(A) such person provides coverage under a group health plan for any similarly situated beneficiary under the plan with respect to whom a qualifying event has not occurred, and

"(B) the employer, plan administrator, or such qualified beneficiary submits to such person a written request that such person provide to such qualified beneficiary the same coverage which such person provides to the beneficiary referred to in subparagraph (A).

"(f) CONTINUATION COVERAGE REQUIREMENTS OF GROUP HEALTH PLANS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A group health plan meets the requirements of this subsection only if each qualified beneficiary who would lose coverage under the plan as a result of a qualifying event is entitled to elect, within the election period, continuation coverage under the plan.

"(2) CONTINUATION COVERAGE.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'continuation coverage' means coverage under the plan which meets the following requirements:

"(A) TYPE OF BENEFIT COVERAGE.—The coverage must consist of coverage which, as of the time the coverage is being provided, is identical to the coverage provided under the plan to similarly situated beneficiaries under the plan with respect to whom a qualifying event has not occurred. If coverage under the plan is modified for any group of similarly situated beneficiaries, the coverage shall also be modified in the same manner for all individuals who are qualified beneficiaries under the plan pursuant to this subsection in connection with such group.

"(B) PERIOD OF COVERAGE.—The coverage must extend for at least the period beginning on the date of the qualifying event and ending not earlier than the earliest of the following:

"(i) MAXIMUM REQUIRED PERIOD.—

"(I) GENERAL RULE FOR TERMINATIONS AND REDUCED HOURS.—In the case of a qualifying event described in paragraph (3)(B), except as provided in subclause (II), the date which is 18 months after the date of the qualifying event.

"(II) SPECIAL RULE FOR MULTIPLE QUALIFYING EVENTS.—If a qualifying event (other than a qualifying event described in paragraph (3)(F)) occurs during the 18 months after the date of a qualifying event described in paragraph (3)(B), the date which is 36 months after the date of the qualifying event described in paragraph (3)(B).

"(III) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDINGS.—In the case of a qualifying event described in paragraph (3)(F) (relating to bankruptcy proceedings), the date of the death of the covered employee or qualified beneficiary (described in subsection (g)(1)(D)(iii)), or in the case of the surviving spouse or dependent children of the covered employee, 36 months after the date of the death of the covered employee.

"(IV) GENERAL RULE FOR OTHER QUALIFYING EVENTS.—In the case of a qualifying event not described in paragraph (3)(B) or (3)(F), the date which is 36 months after the date of the qualifying event.

"(ii) END OF PLAN.—The date on which the employer ceases to provide any group health plan to any employee.

"(iii) FAILURE TO PAY PREMIUM.—The date on which coverage ceases under the plan by reason of a failure to make timely payment of any premium required under the plan with respect to the qualified beneficiary. The payment of any premium (other than any payment referred to in the last sentence of subparagraph (C)) shall be considered to be timely if made within 30 days after the date due or within such longer period as applies to or under the plan.

"(iv) GROUP HEALTH PLAN COVERAGE OR MEDICARE ELIGIBILITY.—The date on which the qualified beneficiary first becomes, after the date of the election—

"(I) covered under any group health plan (as an employee or otherwise), or

"(II) in the case of a qualified beneficiary other than a qualified beneficiary described in paragraph (7)(B)(iv) entitled to benefits under title XVIII of the Social Security Act.

"(C) PREMIUM REQUIREMENTS.—The plan may require payment of a premium for any period of continuation coverage, except that such premium—

"(i) shall not exceed 102 percent of the applicable premium for such period, and

"(ii) may, at the election of the payor, be made in monthly installments.

If an election is made after the qualifying event, the plan shall permit payment for continuation coverage during the period preceding the election to be made within 45 days of the date of the election.

"(D) NO REQUIREMENT OF INSURABILITY.—The coverage may not be conditioned upon, or discriminate on the basis of lack of, evidence of insurability.

"(E) CONVERSION OPTION.—In the case of a qualified beneficiary whose period of continuation coverage expires under subparagraph (B)(i), the plan must, during the 180-day period ending on such expiration date, provide to the qualified beneficiary the option of enrollment under a conversion health plan otherwise generally available under the plan.

"(3) QUALIFYING EVENT.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualifying event' means, with respect to any covered employee, any of the following events which, but for the continuation coverage required under this subsection, would result in the loss of coverage of a qualified beneficiary—

"(A) The death of the covered employee.

"(B) The termination (other than by reason of such employee's gross misconduct), or reduction of hours, of the covered employee's employment.

"(C) The divorce or legal separation of the covered employee from the employee's spouse.

"(D) The covered employee becoming entitled to benefits under title XVIII of the Social Security Act.

"(E) A dependent child ceasing to be a dependent child under the generally applicable requirements of the plan.

"(F) A proceeding in a case under title 11, United States Code, commencing on or after July 1, 1986, with respect to the employer from whose employment the covered employee retired at any time.

In the case of an event described in subparagraph (F), a loss of coverage includes a substantial elimination of coverage with respect to a qualified beneficiary described in subsection (g)(1)(D) within one year before or after the date of commencement of the proceeding.

"(4) APPLICABLE PREMIUM.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'applicable premium' means, with respect to any period of continuation coverage of qualified beneficiaries, the cost to the plan for such period of the coverage for similarly situated beneficiaries with respect to whom a qualifying event has not occurred (without regard to whether such cost is paid by the employer or employee).

"(B) SPECIAL RULE FOR SELF-INSURED PLANS.—To the extent that a plan is a self-insured plan—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), the applicable premium for any period of continuation coverage of qualified beneficiaries shall be equal to a reasonable estimate of the cost of providing coverage for such period for similarly situated beneficiaries which—

"(I) is determined on an actuarial basis, and

"(II) takes into account such factors as the Secretary may prescribe in regulations.

"(ii) DETERMINATION ON BASIS OF PAST COST.—If a plan administrator elects to have this clause apply, the applicable premium for any period of continuation coverage of qualified beneficiaries shall be equal to—

"(I) the cost to the plan for similarly situated beneficiaries for the same period occurring during the preceding determination period under subparagraph (C), adjusted by

"(II) the percentage increase or decrease in the implicit price deflator of the gross national product (calculated by the Department of Commerce and published in the Survey of Current Business) for the 12-month period ending on the last day of the sixth month of such preceding determination period.

"(iii) CLAUSE (ii) NOT TO APPLY WHERE SIGNIFICANT CHANGE.—A plan administrator may not elect to have clause (ii) apply in any case in which there is any significant difference between the determination period and the preceding determination period, in coverage under, or in employees covered by, the plan. The determination under the preceding sentence for any determination period shall be made at the same time as the determination under subparagraph (C).

"(C) DETERMINATION PERIOD.—The determination of any applicable premium shall be made for a period of 12 months and shall be made before the beginning of such period.

"(5) ELECTION.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) ELECTION PERIOD.—The term 'election period' means the period which—

"(i) begins not later than the date on which coverage terminates under the plan by reason of a qualifying event,

"(ii) is of at least 60 days' duration, and

"(iii) ends not earlier than 60 days after the later of—

"(I) the date described in clause (i), or

"(II) in the case of any qualified beneficiary who receives notice under paragraph (6)(D), the date of such notice.

"(B) EFFECT OF ELECTION ON OTHER BENEFICIARIES.—Except as otherwise specified in an election, any election of continuation coverage by a qualified beneficiary described in subparagraph (A)(i) or (B) of subsection (g)(1) shall be deemed to include an election of continuation coverage on behalf of any other qualified beneficiary who would lose coverage under the plan by reason of the qualifying event. If there is a choice among types of coverage under the plan, each qualified beneficiary is entitled to make a separate selection among such types of coverage.

"(6) NOTICE REQUIREMENT.—In accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary—

"(A) The group health plan shall provide, at the time of commencement of coverage under the plan, written notice to each covered employee and spouse of the employee (if any) of the rights provided under this subsection.

"(B) The employer of an employee under a plan must notify the plan administrator of a qualifying event described in subparagraph (A), (B), (D), or (F) of paragraph (3) with respect to such employee within 30 days of the date of the qualifying event.

"(C) Each covered employee or qualified beneficiary is responsible for notifying the plan administrator of the occurrence of any qualifying event described in subparagraph (C) or (E) of paragraph (3) within 60 days after the date of the qualifying event.

"(D) The plan administrator shall notify—

"(i) in the case of a qualifying event described in subparagraph (A), (B), (D), or (F) of paragraph (3), any qualified beneficiary with respect to such event, and

"(ii) in the case of a qualifying event described in subparagraph (C) or (E) of paragraph (3) where the covered employee notifies the plan administrator under subparagraph (C), any qualified beneficiary with respect to such event, of such beneficiary's rights under this subsection.

For purposes of subparagraph (D), any notification shall be made within 14 days of the date on which the plan administrator is notified under subparagraph (B) or (C), whichever is applicable, and any such notification to an individual who is a qualified beneficiary as the spouse of the covered employee shall be treated as notification to all other qualified beneficiaries residing with such spouse at the time such notification is made.

"(7) COVERED EMPLOYEE.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'covered employee' means an individual who is (or was) provided coverage under a group health plan by virtue of the individual's employment or previous employment with an employer.

"(g) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) QUALIFIED BENEFICIARY.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified beneficiary' means, with respect to a covered employee under a group health plan, any other individual who, on the day before the qualifying event for that employee, is a beneficiary under the plan—

"(i) as the spouse of the covered employee, or

"(ii) as the dependent child of the employee.

"(B) SPECIAL RULE FOR TERMINATIONS AND REDUCED EMPLOYMENT.—In the case of a qualifying event described in subsection (f)(3)(B), the term 'qualified beneficiary' includes the covered employee.

"(C) EXCEPTION FOR NONRESIDENT ALIENS.—Notwithstanding subparagraphs (A) and (B), the term 'qualified beneficiary' does not include an individual whose status as a covered employee is attributable to a period in which such individual was a nonresident alien who received no earned income (within the meaning of section 911(d)(2)) from the employer which constituted income from sources within the United States (within the meaning of section 861(a)(3)). If an individual is not a qualified beneficiary pursuant to the previous sentence, a spouse or dependent child of such individual shall not be considered a qualified beneficiary by virtue of the relationship of the individual.

"(D) SPECIAL RULE FOR RETIREES AND WIDOWS.—In the case of a qualifying event described in subsection (f)(3)(F), the term 'qualified beneficiary' includes a covered employee who had retired on or before the date of substantial elimination of coverage and any other individual who, on the day before such qualifying event, is a beneficiary under the plan—

"(i) as the spouse of the covered employee,

"(ii) as the dependent child of the covered employee, or

"(iii) as the surviving spouse of the covered employee.

"(2) GROUP HEALTH PLAN.—The term 'group health plan' has the meaning given such term by section 162(i)."

"(3) PLAN ADMINISTRATOR.—The term 'plan administrator' has the meaning given the term 'administrator' by section 3(16)(A) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

"(4) CORRECTION.—A failure of a group health plan to meet the requirements of subsection (f) with respect to any qualified beneficiary shall be treated as corrected if—

"(A) such failure is retroactively undone to the extent possible, and

"(B) the qualified beneficiary is placed in a financial position which is as good as such beneficiary would have been if such failure had not occurred.

For purposes of applying subparagraph (B), the qualified beneficiary shall be treated as if he had elected the most favorable coverage in light of the expenses he incurred since the failure 1st occurred.".

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 106 of the 1986 Code (relating to contributions by employer to accident and health plans) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 106. CONTRIBUTIONS BY EMPLOYER TO ACCIDENT AND HEALTH PLANS.

"Gross income of an employee does not include employer-provided coverage under an accident or health plan."

(2) Subsection (i) of section 162 of the 1986 Code (relating to group health plans) is amended by striking out paragraph (2) and by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (2).

(3) Section 162 of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out subsection (k) and by redesignating—

(A) the subsection relating to stock redemption expenses as subsection (k),

(B) the subsection relating to special rules for health insurance costs of self-employed individuals as subsection (l), and

(C) the subsection relating to cross references as subsection (m).

(4) Subparagraph (C) of section 414(n)(3) of the 1986 Code, as amended by section 111B(a) of this Act, is amended by striking out "162(i)(2), 162(k)(2)," and by striking out "and 505" and inserting in lieu thereof "505, and 4980B".

(5) Paragraph (2) of section 414(t) of the 1986 Code, as amended by section 111B(a) of this Act, is amended by striking out "162(i)(2), 162(k)(2)," and by striking out "or 505" and inserting in lieu thereof "505, or 4980B".

(6) Paragraph (1) of section 607 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 is amended by striking out "section 162(i)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 162(i)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986".

(7) Paragraph (1) of section 2208 of the Public Health Service Act is amended by striking out "section 162(i)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 162(i)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986".

(c) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 43 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Sec. 4980B. Failure to satisfy continuation coverage requirements of group health plans."

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1988, but shall not apply to any plan for any plan year to which section 162(k) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act) did not apply by reason of section 10001(e)(2) of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985.

SEC. 432. MODIFICATIONS TO DISCRIMINATION RULES APPLICABLE TO CERTAIN EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLANS.

(a) MODIFICATIONS TO SECTION 89.—

(1) DETERMINATIONS BASED ON TESTING YEAR.—

(A) Section 89 of the 1986 Code (as amended by title I) is amended by striking out "plan year" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "testing year".

(B) Subsection (j) of section 89 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(13) TESTING YEAR.—The term 'testing year' means—

"(A) any 12-month period beginning with the calendar month designated in the plan for purposes of this section, or

"(B) if there is no such designation, the plan year.

Any designation under subparagraph (A) may be changed only with the consent of the Secretary."

(C) Subsection (c) of section 4976 of the 1986 Code (as added by title I) is amended—

(i) by striking out "any plan year" in paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof "any testing year (as defined in section 89(j)(13))"; and

(ii) by striking out "such plan year" each place it appears in paragraph (2)(A) and inserting in lieu thereof "such testing year".

(2) TIME FOR TESTING.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (g) of section 89 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) TIME FOR TESTING.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, the determination of whether any plan is a discriminatory employee benefit plan for any testing year shall be made on the basis of the facts as of the testing day.

"(B) ADJUSTMENT WHERE BENEFIT OF HIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEE CHANGES.—If the employer-provided benefit (actually provided or available) of a highly compensated employee changes during the testing year by reason of any change in the terms of the plan or the making of an election by such employee, the amount taken into account as such employee's employer-provided benefit shall be adjusted to take into account such change and the portion of the testing year during which the changed benefit is provided (or made available).

"(C) TREATMENT OF NON-HIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEES WHERE CHANGE IN PLAN.—Rules similar to the rules of subparagraph (B) shall apply in the case of employees who are not highly compensated employees and who are affected by any change in the terms of the plan, except that the determination of such employees' employer-provided benefits (actually provided or made available) shall be determined as of the date after such change selected by the employer and permitted under regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

"(D) TESTING DAY.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'testing day' means—

"(i) the day designated in the plan as the testing day for purposes of this paragraph, or

"(ii) if there is no day so designated, the last day of the testing year.

"(E) LIMITATIONS.—

"(i) DESIGNATION MUST BE CONSISTENT FOR ALL PLANS OF SAME TYPE.—No day may be designated under subparagraph (D)(i) with respect to any plan unless the same day is so designated with respect to all other plans of the employer of the same type.

"(ii) DESIGNATION BINDING.—Any designation under subparagraph (D)(i) shall apply to the testing year for which made and all subsequent years unless revoked with the consent of the Secretary.".

(B) DESIGNATIONS FOR 1989 NOT BINDING.—Any designation of a testing day for a year beginning in 1989 shall be disregarded in determining the day which may be designated as the testing day for years beginning after 1989.

(3) SAMPLING.—Subsection (g) of section 89 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7) SAMPLING.—For purposes of determining whether a plan is a discriminatory employee benefit plan (but not for purposes of identifying the highly compensated employees who have a discriminatory excess or the amount of any such excess), determinations under this section may be made on the basis of a statistically valid random sample. The preceding sentence shall apply only if—

"(A) the sampling is conducted by an independent person in a manner not inconsistent with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, and

"(B) the statistical method and sample size result in a 95 percent probability that the results will have a margin of error not greater than 3 percent."

(4) SPECIAL VALUATION RULE FOR MULTIEMPLOYER PLANS.—Paragraph (3) of section 89(g) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(E) SPECIAL RULE FOR MULTIEMPLOYER PLANS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in regulations and clause (ii), an employer may treat the contribution such employer makes to a multiemployer plan on behalf of an employee as the employer-provided benefit of such employee under such plan.

"(ii) ADJUSTMENT.—If the allocation of plan benefits between highly compensated employees and other employees under a multiemployer plan varies materially from the allocation of employer contributions to such plan, the employer-provided benefit determined under clause (i) shall be appropriately adjusted to take into account such material variation."

(5) SPECIAL RULE FOR MULTIEMPLOYER PLANS UNDER EXCLUDED EMPLOYEE REQUIREMENTS.—Subsection (h) of section 89 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) SPECIAL RULE FOR MULTIEMPLOYER PLAN.—Except as provided in regulations, any multiemployer plan shall not be taken into account in applying subparagraph (A), (B), (C), or (D) of paragraph (1) with respect to other plans of the employer.".

(6) COMPARABILITY RULES.—Paragraph (1) of section 89(g) of the 1986 Code, as amended by section 111B(a)(3), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraphs:

"(D) SPECIAL RULES FOR APPLYING SUBSECTION (f).—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of applying subsection (f)—

"(I) except as provided in clause (ii), subparagraph (B) shall be applied by substituting '90 percent' for '95 percent', and

"(II) a group of plans of the same type shall be treated as comparable plans if the requirements of subparagraph (E) are met.

"(ii) ELECTION TO USE LOWER PERCENTAGE IN DETERMINING COMPARABILITY.—If an election by the employer under this clause applies for the testing year—

"(I) subclause (I) of clause (i) shall not apply,

"(II) for purposes of applying subsection (f), subparagraph (B) of this paragraph shall be applied by substituting '80 percent' for '95 percent', and

"(III) subsection (f) shall be applied with respect to all health plans maintained by the employer by substituting '90 percent' for '80 percent'.

"(E) PLANS TREATED AS COMPARABLE IF EMPLOYEE COST DIFFERENCE IS $100 OR LESS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—A group of plans of the same type shall be treated as comparable with respect to a group of employees if—

"(I) such plans are available to all employees in the group on the same terms, and

"(II) the difference in annual cost to employees between the plans with the lowest and highest annual employee cost is not greater than $100.

"(ii) COORDINATION WITH SUBPARAGRAPH (B).—A plan not in the group of plans described in clause (i) shall be treated as part of such group if, under subparagraph (B) (without regard to clause (iii) of this subparagraph), such plan is comparable to the plan in such group with the largest employer-provided benefit.

"(iii) OTHER PLANS.—A plan not in the group of plans described in clause (i) shall be treated as part of such group with respect to an employee if—

"(I) in the case of an employee who is not a highly compensated employee, such employee is eligible to participate in the plan in such group with the largest employer-provided benefit (without regard to clause (ii)),

"(II) in the case of an employee who is not a highly compensated employee, the annual cost to such employee under such plan is not lower or higher than the lowest and highest costs within such group.

"(III) the employer-provided benefit under such plan is less than the employer-provided benefit under the plan in such group with the largest such benefit (without regard to clause (ii)).

"(iv) SEPARATE APPLICATION OF REQUIREMENTS.—If an employer elects the application of paragraph (2)(A)(ii), the amount under clause (i) shall be allocated among plans covering spouses and dependents and plans covering employees in such manner as the employer specifies.

"(v) COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENT.—In the case of testing years beginning after 1989, the $100 amount under clause (i) shall be increased by the percentage (if any) by which—

"(I) the CPI for the calendar year preceding the year in which the testing year begins, exceeds

"(II) the CPI for 1988.

For purposes of this clause, the CPI for any calendar year shall be determined under section 1(f).".

(7) OTHER COVERAGE.—

(A) Subparagraph (A) of section 89(g)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(i) by striking out "subsection (e)" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (e) or (f)", and

(ii) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The provisions of the preceding sentence shall not apply for purposes of applying subsection (f) unless the requirements of subsection (f) would be met if such subsection were applied without regard to the preceding sentence and on the basis of eligibility to participate rather than coverage."

(B) Subparagraph (D) of section 89(g)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following sentence: "The Secretary shall make such adjustments as are necessary in applying the rules of the preceding sentence to subsection (f)."

(8) SWORN STATEMENTS.—Paragraph (2) of section 89(g) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(E) SPECIAL RULE.—No employee who is not a highly compensated employee may be disregarded under subparagraph (A)(i) with respect to any health plan of the employer unless under such plan such employee is entitled, when the coverage under the other health plan referred to in subparagraph (A)(i) ceases, to elect coverage under the plan of the employer (whether or not an election is otherwise available). Such election is to be on the same terms as if such employee was making such election during a subsequent open season. Rules similar to the rules of the preceding sentences of this subparagraph shall apply in the case of an employee treated as not having a spouse or dependents or having a spouse or dependents covered by a health plan of another employer providing core benefits.".

(9) DEFINITION OF PLAN.—Paragraph (11) of section 89(j) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "Each option" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in subsection (g)(1), each option".

(10) MODIFICATION OF PENALTY.—Subparagraph (B) of section 6652(k)(2) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(B) the amount which bears the same ratio to the employer-provided benefit (within the meaning of section 89 without regard to subsection (g)(3)(C)(i) thereof) with respect to the employee to whom such failure relates as the amount of such benefit required to be but not shown on timely statements under sections 6051(a) and 6051(d) bears to the amount required to be shown.".

(11) CAFETERIA PLANS.—Subparagraph (D) of section 89(g)(3) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(D) SALARY REDUCTIONS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Except for purposes of subsections (d)(1)(A)(ii) and (j)(5), any salary reduction shall be treated as an employer-provided benefit.

"(ii) SPECIAL RULE FOR SUBSECTION (d)(1)(A)(ii).—Notwithstanding clause (i), any salary reduction under a cafeteria plan shall be treated as an employer-provided benefit for purposes of subsection (d)(1)(A)(ii) if—

"(I) the percentage of employees who are not highly compensated employees eligible to participate in the plan is not greater than the percentage of highly compensated employees so eligible,

"(II) all employees eligible to participate in the plan are eligible under the same terms and conditions, and

"(III) no highly compensated employee eligible under the plan is eligible to participate in any other plan maintained by the employer for any benefit of the same type under terms and conditions different from the terms and conditions available under the plan to employees who are not highly compensated employees.".

(12) TESTING OF PLANS OF DIFFERENT TYPES.—Paragraph (4) of section 89(g) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(4) ELECTION TO TEST PLANS OF DIFFERENT TYPES TOGETHER.—The employer may elect to treat all plans of the types specified in such election as plans of the same type for purposes of applying subsection (e).".

(13) PART-TIME EMPLOYEES.—Paragraph (5) of section 89(j) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out the last sentence thereof.

(14) ACQUISITIONS AND DISPOSITIONS.—

(A) Clause (ii) of section 89(j)(8)(A) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(ii) either—

"(I) the coverage under such plan is not significantly changed during the transition period (other than by reason of the change in members in such group), or

"(II) such plan meets such other requirements as the Secretary may prescribe by regulation.".

(B) Subclause (II) of section 410(b)(6)(C)(i) of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting "or such plan meets such other requirements as the Secretary may prescribe by regulation" before the end period.

(15) DEPENDENT CARE ASSISTANCE.—Subparagraph (B) of section 129(d)(7) of the 1986 Code (as redesignated and amended by section 111B of this Act) is amended—

(A) by striking out "(within the meaning of section 414(q)(7))", and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'compensation' has the meaning given such term by section 414(q)(7), except that, under rules prescribed by the Secretary, an employer may elect to determine compensation on any other basis which does not discriminate in favor of highly compensated employees.".

(16) REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—

(A) Section 6039D(d) of the 1986 Code is amended—

(i) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) SPECIAL RULE FOR MULTIEMPLOYER PLANS.—In the case of a multiemployer plan, the plan shall be required to provide any information required by this section which the Secretary determines, on the basis of the agreement between the plan and employer, is held by the plan (and not the employer)", and

(ii) by inserting "AND SPECIAL RULES" after "DEFINITIONS" in the heading thereof.

(B) The amendments made by this paragraph shall apply to years beginning after 1984.

(b) MODIFICATION TO DEFINITIONS OF HIGHLY COMPENSATED AND COMPENSATION AND TO SEPARATE LINE OF BUSINESS RULES.—

(1) DEFINITION OF HIGHLY COMPENSATED.—Subsection (q) of section 414 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(11) SIMPLIFIED METHOD FOR DETERMINING HIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEES.—If an election by the employer under this paragraph applies to any year, in determining whether an employee is a highly compensated employee for such year—

"(A) subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1) shall be applied by substituting '$50,000' for '$75,000', and

"(B) subparagraph (C) of paragraph (1) shall not apply.".

(2) LINE OF BUSINESS REQUIREMENTS.—

(A) SAFE HARBOR RULE.—Paragraph (3) of section 414(r) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(3) SAFE HARBOR RULE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The requirements of subparagraph (C) of paragraph (2) shall not apply to any line of business if the highly compensated employee percentage with respect to such line of business is—

"(i) not less than one-half, and

"(ii) not more than twice, the percentage which highly compensated employees are of all employees of the employer. An employer shall be treated as meeting the requirements of clause (i) if at least 10 percent of all highly compensated employees of the employer perform services solely for such line of business.

"(B) DETERMINATION MAY BE BASED ON PRECEDING YEAR.—The requirements of subparagraph (A) shall be treated as met with respect to any line of business if such requirements were met with respect to such line of business for the preceding year and if—

"(i) no more than a de minimis number of employees were shifted to or from the line of business after the close of the preceding year, and

"(ii) the employees shifted to or from the line of business after the close of the preceding year contained a substantially proportional number of highly compensated employees.".

(B) SEPARATE OPERATING UNITS.—Section 89(g)(5) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "In applying section 414(r)(7) for purposes of this section, an operating unit shall be treated as in a separate geographic area from another unit if such units are at least 35 miles apart.".

(3) COMPENSATION FOR GROUP-LIFE INSURANCE PLANS.—

(A) Paragraph (4) of section 89(j) of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D) COMPENSATION.—For purposes of applying this paragraph—

"(i) 1989 AND 1990.—In the case of testing years beginning in 1989 or 1990, the term 'compensation' means, at the election of the employer, base compensation or compensation defined in 414(s).

"(ii) 1991 AND THEREAFTER.—In the case of testing years beginning after 1990, compensation shall be determined on any basis determined by the employer which does not discriminate in favor of highly compensated employees.".

(B) Subparagraph (A) of section 89(j)(4) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "(within the meaning of section 414(s))".

(c) TRANSITIONAL PROVISIONS FOR PURPOSES OF SECTION 89.—

(1) TEMPORARY VALUATION RULES.—In the case of testing years beginning before the later of January 1, 1991, or the date 1 year after the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate first issues such valuation rules as are necessary to apply the provisions of section 89 of the 1986 Code to health plans—

(A) Section 89(g)(3)(B) of the 1986 Code shall not apply.

(B)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), the value of coverage under a health plan for purposes of section 89 of the 1986 Code shall be determined in substantially the same manner as costs under a health plan are determined under section 4980B(f)(4) of the 1986 Code.

(ii) For purposes of determining whether an employer meets the requirements of subsections (d), (e), and (f) of section 89 of the 1986 Code, value under clause (i) may be determined under any other reasonable method selected by the employer.

(2) FORMER EMPLOYEES.—The amendments made by section 1151 of the Reform Act shall not apply to former employees who separated from service with the employer before January 1, 1989 (and were not reemployed on or after such date), and such former employees shall not be taken into account in determining whether the requirements of section 89 of the 1986 Code are met with respect to other former employees. The preceding sentence shall not apply to the extent that the value of employer-provided benefits provided to any such former employee exceeds the value of such benefits which were provided under the terms of the plan as in effect on December 31, 1988. Any excess value under the preceding sentence shall be determined without regard to any increase required by Federal law, regulation or rule or any increase which is the same for employees separating on or before December 31, 1988, and employees separating after such date and which does not discriminate in favor of highly compensated employees who separated from service after December 31, 1988.

(3) WRITTEN PLAN REQUIREMENT.—The requirements of section 89(k)(1)(A) of the 1986 Code shall be treated as met with respect to any testing year beginning in 1989, if—

(A) the plan is in writing before the close of such year,

(B) the employees had reasonable notice of the plan's essential features on or before the beginning of such year, and

(C) the provisions of the written plan apply for the entire year.

(4) RULES TO BE PRESCRIBED BEFORE OCTOBER 1, 1988.—Not later than October 1, 1988, the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate shall issue such rules as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of section 89 of the 1986 Code.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) SUBSECTION (a).—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall take effect as if included in the amendments made by section 1151 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986; except that the amendment made by subsection (a)(8) shall apply to testing years beginning after December 31, 1989.

(2) SUBSECTION (b).—The amendments made by subsection (b) shall apply to years beginning after December 31, 1986.

SEC. 433. ESTATE TAX VALUATION FREEZES.

(a) DEEMED GIFT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (4) of section 2036(c) of the 1986 Code is amended to read as follows:

"(4) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN TRANSFERS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this subtitle, if, before the death of the original transferor—

"(i) the original transferor transfers all (or any portion of) the retained interest referred to in paragraph (1), or

"(ii) the original transferee transfers all (or any portion of) the transferred property referred to in paragraph (1) to a person who is not a member of the original transferor's family, the original transferor shall be treated as having made a transfer by gift of property to the original transferee equal to the paragraph (1) inclusion (or proportionate amount thereof). Proper adjustments shall be made in the amount treated as a gift by reason of the preceding sentence to take into account prior transfers to which this subparagraph applied.

"(B) COORDINATION WITH PARAGRAPH (1).—In any case to which subparagraph (A) applies, nothing in paragraph (1) or section 2035(d)(2) shall require the inclusion of the transferred property (or proportionate amount thereof).

"(C) SPECIAL RULE WHERE PROPERTY RETRANSFERRED.—In the case of a transfer described in subparagraph (A)(ii) from the original transferee to the original transferor, the paragraph (1) inclusion (or proportion thereof) shall be reduced by the excess (if any) of—

"(i) the fair market value of the property so transferred, over

"(ii) the amount of the consideration paid by the original transferor in exchange for such property.

"(D) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) ORIGINAL TRANSFEROR.—The term 'original transferor' means the person making the transfer referred to in paragraph (1).

"(ii) ORIGINAL TRANSFEREE.—The term 'original transferee' means the person to whom the transfer referred to in paragraph (1) is made. Such term includes any member of the original transferor's family to whom the property is subsequently transferred.

"(iii) PARAGRAPH (1) INCLUSION.—The term 'paragraph (1) inclusion' means the amount which would have been included in the gross estate of the original transferor under subsection (a) by reason of paragraph (1) (determined without regard to sections 2032 and 2032A) if the original transferor died immediately before the transfer referred to in subparagraph (A). The amount determined under the preceding sentence shall be reduced by the amount (if any) of the taxable gift resulting from the transfer referred to in paragraph (1)(B).

"(E) CONTINUING INTEREST IN TRANSFERRED PROPERTY MAY NOT BE RETAINED.—A transfer (to which subparagraph (A) would otherwise apply) shall not be taken into account under subparagraph (A) if the original transferor or the original transferee (as the case may be) retains a direct or indirect continuing interest in the property transferred in such transfer."

(2) CROSS REFERENCE.—Subsection (d) of section 2501 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(3) For treatment of certain transfers related to estate tax valuation freezes as gifts to which this chapter applies, see section 2036(c)(4)."

(b) EXCEPTIONS.—Subsection (c) of section 2036 of the 1986 Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(6) EXCEPTIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to a transaction solely by reason of 1 or more of the following:

"(i) The receipt (or retention) of qualified debt.

"(ii) Except as provided in regulations, the existence of an agreement for the sale or lease of goods or other property to be used in the enterprise or the providing of services and—

"(I) the agreement is an arm's length agreement for fair market value, and

"(II) the agreement does not otherwise involve any change in interests in the enterprise.

"(iii) An option or other agreement to buy or sell property at the fair market value of such property as of the time the option is (or the rights under the agreement are) exercised.

"(B) LIMITATIONS.—

"(i) SERVICES PERFORMED AFTER TRANSFER.—In the case of compensation for services performed after the transfer referred to in paragraph (1)(B), clause (ii) of subparagraph (A) shall not apply if such services were performed under an agreement providing for the performance of services over a period greater than 3 years after the date of the transfer. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term of any agreement includes any period for which the agreement may be extended at the option of the service provider.

"(ii) AMOUNTS MUST NOT BE CONTINGENT ON PROFITS, ETC.—Clause (ii) of subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any amount determined (in whole or in part) by reference to gross receipts, income, profits, or similar items of the enterprise.

"(C) QUALIFIED DEBT.—For purposes of this paragraph, except as provided in subparagraph (D), the term 'qualified debt' means any indebtedness if—

"(i) such indebtedness—

"(I) unconditionally requires the payment of a sum certain in money in 1 or more fixed payments on specified dates, and

"(II) has a fixed maturity date not more than 15 years from the date of issue,

"(ii) the only other amount payable under such indebtedness is interest determined at—

"(I) a fixed rate, or

"(II) a rate which bears a fixed relationship to a specified market interest rate,

"(iii) the interest payment dates are fixed,

"(iv) such indebtedness does not grant voting rights to the person to whom the debt is owed or place any limitation (other than in a case where the indebtedness is in default as to interest or principal) on the exercise of voting rights by others, and

"(v) such indebtedness—

"(I) is not (directly or indirectly) convertible into an interest in the enterprise which would not be qualified debt, and

"(II) does not otherwise grant any right to acquire such an interest.

The requirement of clause (i)(I) that the principal be payable on 1 or more specified dates and the requirement of clause (i)(II) shall not apply to indebtedness payable on demand if such indebtedness is issued in return for cash to be used to meet normal business needs of the enterprise.

"(D) SPECIAL RULE FOR STARTUP DEBT.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified debt' includes any qualified startup debt.

"(ii) QUALIFIED STARTUP DEBT.—For purposes of clause (i), the term 'qualified startup debt' means any indebtedness if—

"(I) such indebtedness unconditionally requires the payment of a sum certain in money,

"(II) such indebtedness was received in exchange for cash to be used in any enterprise involving the active conduct of a trade or business,

"(III) the person to whom the indebtedness is owed has not at any time (whether before, on, or after the exchange referred to in subclause (II)) transferred any property (including goodwill) which was not cash to the enterprise or transferred customers or other business opportunities to the enterprise,

"(IV) the person to whom the indebtedness is owed has not at any time (whether before, on, or after the exchange referred to in subclause (II)) held any interest in the enterprise (including an interest as an officer, director, or employee) which was not qualified startup debt,

"(V) any person who (but for subparagraph (A)(i)) would have been an original transferee (as defined in paragraph (4)(C)) participates in the active management (as defined in section 2032A(e)(12)) of the enterprise, and

"(VI) such indebtedness meets the requirements of clauses (iv) and (v) of subparagraph (C).

"(7) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this subsection, including such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to prevent avoidance of the purposes of this subsection through distributions or otherwise."

(c) TREATMENT OF SPOUSE.—Subparagraph (C) of section 2036(c)(3) of the 1986 Code is amended by striking out "An individual" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in regulations, an individual".

(d) Right of Recovery.—

(1) In general.—Subchapter C of chapter 11 of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting after section 2207A the following new section:

"SEC. 2207B. RIGHT OF RECOVERY WHERE DECEDENT RETAINED INTEREST.

"(a) Estate Tax.—

"(1) In general.—If any part of the gross estate on which tax has been paid consists of the value of property included in the gross estate by reason of section 2036 (relating to transfers with retained life estate), the decedent's estate shall be entitled to recover from the person receiving the property the amount which bears the same ratio to the total tax under this chapter which has been paid as—

"(A) the value of such property, bears to

"(B) the taxable estate.

"(2) Decedent may otherwise direct by will.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply if the decedent otherwise directs in a provision of his will specifically referring to this section.

"(b) Gift Tax.—If for any calendar year tax is paid under chapter 12 with respect to any person by reason of property treated as transferred by such person under section 2036(c)(4), such person shall be entitled to recover from the original transferee (as defined in section 2036(c)(4)(C)(ii)) the amount which bears the same ratio to the total tax for such year under chapter 12 as—

"(1) the value of such property for purposes of chapter 12, bears to

"(2) the total amount of the taxable gifts for such year.

"(c) More Than One Recipient.—For purposes of this section, if there is more than 1 person receiving the property, the right of recovery shall be against each such person.

"(d) Penalties and Interest.—In the case of penalties and interest attributable to the additional taxes described in subsections (a) and (b), rules similar to the rules of subsections (a), (b), and (c) shall apply."

(2) Conforming amendment.—The table of sections for subchapter C of chapter 11 of the 1986 Code is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 2207A the following new item:

"Sec. 2207B. Right of recovery where decedent retained interest."

(e) Effective Date.—

(1) In general.—Except as provided in this subsection, any amendment made by this section shall take effect as if included in the provisions of the Revenue Act of 1987 to which such amendment relates.

(2) Subsection (a).—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply in cases where the transfer referred to in section 2036(c)(1)(B) of the 1986 Code is on or after June 21, 1988.

(3) Subsection (d).—If an amount is included in the gross estate of a decedent under section 2036 of the 1986 Code other than solely by reason of section 2036(c) of the 1986 Code, the amendments made by subsection (d) shall apply to such amount only with respect to property transferred after the date of the enactment of this Act.

TITLE V—RAILROAD UNEMPLOYMENT AND RETIREMENT PROGRAMS

SEC. 501. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Railroad Unemployment Insurance and Retirement Improvement Act of 1988".

SEC. 502. REFERENCES TO RAILROAD UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT.

Except as otherwise expressly provided, whenever in this title an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act.

Subtitle A—Financing Provisions

SEC. 511. AMENDMENTS RELATING TO DEFINITION OF "COMPENSATION".

(a) In General.—Section 1(i) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1) In General.—" after "(i)";

(2) by striking out ": Provided, however, That in computing" and all that follows through "1983, shall be recognized." and inserting in lieu thereof ", except that in computing the compensation paid to any employee, no part of any month's compensation in excess of the monthly compensation base (as defined in subdivision (2)) for any month shall be recognized."; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new subdivision:

"(2) Monthly Compensation Base.—

"(A) In general.—For purposes of subdivision (1), the term 'monthly compensation base' means the amount—

"(i) of $400 for calendar months before January 1, 1984;

"(ii) of $600 for calendar months after December 31, 1983 and before January 1, 1989; and

"(iii) computed under subparagraph (B) for months after December 31, 1988.

"(B) Computation.—

"(i) In general.—The amount of the monthly compensation base for each calendar year beginning after December 31, 1988, is the greater of—

"(I) $600; or

"(II) the amount, as rounded under clause (iii) if applicable, computed under the formula:

$$B=600\left(1+\frac{A-37{,}800}{56{,}700}\right)$$

"(ii) Meaning of symbols.—For the purposes of the formula in clause (i)—

"(I) 'B' is the dollar amount of the monthly compensation base; and

"(II) 'A' is the amount of the applicable base with respect to tier 1 taxes, for the calendar year for which the monthly compensation base is being computed, as determined under section 3231(e)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

"(iii) Rounding rule.—If the monthly compensation base computed under this formula is not a multiple of $5, it shall be rounded to the nearest multiple of $5, with such rounding being upward in the event the amount computed is equidistant between two multiples of $5.".

(b) Conforming Amendment With Respect to Subsidiary Remuneration Rule.—Section 1(k) is amended by striking out "$1,500" and inserting in lieu thereof "an amount that is equal to 2.5 times the monthly compensation base for months in such base year as computed under section 1(i) of this Act".

(c) Conforming Amendment With Respect to Limitation on Taking Account of Money Remuneration.—Section 2(c) is amended by striking out "not in excess of $775 in any month shall be taken into account:" and inserting in lieu thereof "shall be taken into account that is not in excess of $775 in any month before 1989 and, in any month in a base year after 1988, is not in excess of an amount that bears the same ratio to $775 as the monthly compensation base for that year as computed under section 1(i) of this Act bears to $600:".

(d) Conforming Amendments With Respect To Required Compensation Amount.—Section 4(a-2)(i)(A) is amended by striking out the semicolon at the end and inserting in lieu thereof "and before 1989 or, if any part of such compensation is paid in a calendar year after 1988, not less than an amount that is equal to 2.5 times the monthly compensation base for months in such calendar year, as computed under section 1(i) of this Act;".

(e) Duty of Board To Make Certain Computations.—Section 12 is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(r) Duty of Board To Make Certain Computations.—

"(1) Compensation base.—On or before December 1, 1988, and on or before December 1 of each year thereafter, the Board shall compute—

"(A) in accordance with section 1(i), the monthly compensation base which shall be applicable with respect to months in the next succeeding calendar year; and

"(B) the amounts described in section 1(k), section 2(c), section 3, and section 4(a-2)(i)(A) that are related to changes in the monthly compensation base.

"(2) Maximum daily benefit rate.—On or before June 1, 1989, and on or before June 1 of each year thereafter, the Board shall compute in accordance with section 2(a)(3) the maximum daily benefit rate which shall be applicable with respect to days of unemployment and days of sickness in registration periods beginning after June 30 of that year.

"(3) Notice in federal register and to employers.—Not later than 10 days after each computation made under this subsection, the Board shall publish notice in the Federal Register and shall notify each employer and employee representative of the amount so computed.".

(f) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect upon the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 512. CONTRIBUTION ADJUSTMENTS.

(a)(1) Employer Contributions and Experience Rating.—Section 8 is amended by striking out "(a) Every employer" and all that follows through the end of subsection (a) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(a) Employer Contribution.—

"(1) In general.—

"(A) General rule.—

"(i) Contribution rate generally.—Every employer shall pay a contribution, with respect to having employees in his service, equal to the percentage determined under subparagraph (B), (C), or (D), whichever is applicable, of so much of the compensation paid in any calendar month by such employer to any employee as is not in excess of the monthly compensation base for that month as computed under section 1(i).

"(ii) Multiple employer limitation.— If compensation is paid to an employee by more than one employer in any calendar month—

"(I) the contributions required by this subsection shall not apply to any amount of the aggregate compensation paid to such employee by all such employers in such calendar month which is in excess of such monthly compensation base; and

"(II) each employer (other than a subordinate unit of a national-railway-labor-organization employer) shall be liable for that portion of the contribution with respect to such compensation paid by all such employers which the compensation paid by him to such employee bears to the total compensation paid in such month by all such employers to such employee.

In the event that the compensation paid by such employers to the employee in such month is less than such monthly compensation base, each subordinate unit of a national-railway-labor-organization employer shall be liable for such portion of any additional contribution as the compensation paid by such employer to such employee in such month bears to the total compensation paid by all such employers to such employee in such month.

"(B) TRANSITIONAL RULE.—

"(i) 1ST, 2D, AND 3D CALENDAR YEARS.—Except as provided in clause (vi), with respect to compensation paid in calendar years 1988, 1989, and 1990, the contribution rate shall be 8 percent.

"(ii) 4TH CALENDAR YEAR.—With respect to compensation paid in calendar year 1991, the contribution rate shall be the smaller of—

"(I) the maximum contribution limit computed under paragraph (20); or

"(II) the percentage computed pursuant to the following formula:

$$R=\frac{2A+B.}{3}$$

"(iii) 5TH CALENDAR YEAR.—With respect to compensation paid in calendar year 1992, the contribution rate shall be the smaller of—

"(I) the maximum contribution limit computed under paragraph (20); or

"(II) the percentage computed pursuant to the following formula:

$$R=\frac{A+2C.}{3}$$

"(iv) MEANING OF SYMBOLS.—For purposes of the formulas in clauses (ii) and (iii)—

"(I) 'R' is the applicable contribution rate expressed as a percentage for months in the calendar year;

"(II) 'A' is the contribution rate determined under clause (i);

"(III) 'B' is the percentage rate for the employer, as determined under subparagraph (C), for calendar year 1991; and

"(IV) 'C' is the percentage rate for the employer, as determined under subparagraph (C), for calendar year 1992.

"(v) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN COMPUTATIONS.—For purposes of computing B and C in such formulas—

"(I) the percentage rate computed under subparagraph (C), if more than the maximum contribution limit computed under paragraph (20) shall not be reduced to that limit; and

"(II) any computations which under subparagraph (C) are to be made on the basis of a 4-quarter or a 12-quarter period ending on a given June 30 shall be made on the basis of a period beginning on January 1, 1990, and ending on that June 30, and the amount so computed shall be increased to an amount that bears the same ratio to the amount so computed as 4 or 12, as appropriate, bears to the number of calendar quarters in the period on which the computation was based.

"(vi) SPECIAL TRANSITION RULE FOR PUBLIC COMMUTER RAILROADS.—With respect to each of calendar years 1989 and 1990, the contribution of an employer which on the date of the enactment of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance and Retirement Improvement Act of 1988 is a publicly funded and publicly operated carrier providing rail commuter service shall be equal to the amount of benefits attributable to such carrier, plus an amount equal to 0.65 percent of the total compensation paid by that employer in that year on which that employer's contribution would be based under clause (i) if such employer's contribution were determined under that clause.

"(C) EXPERIENCE-RATED CONTRIBUTIONS.—With respect to compensation paid in a calendar year that begins after December 31, 1992, the contribution rate for each employer shall be determined as follows:

"(i) STEP 1.—Compute the employer's benefit ratio as of the preceding June 30 to 4 decimal points in accordance with paragraph (2).

"(ii) STEP 2.—Subtract the employer's reserve ratio as of the preceding June 30 as computed to 4 decimal points in accordance with paragraph (4).

"(iii) STEP 3.—Subtract the pooled credit ratio for the calendar year, if any, as computed to 4 decimal points in accordance with paragraph (12).

"(iv) STEP 4.—Multiply by 100 the total arrived at under the steps set forth in clauses (i) through (iii) so as to obtain a percentage rate, which shall be rounded to the nearest 100th of 1 percent. If the total arrived at under such steps is 0 or less than 0, the percentage rate as so computed shall be 0.

"(v) STEP 5.—Add 0.65 to the percentage rate arrived at under clause (iv), representing the portion of the employer's contribution which is to be deposited to the credit of the fund under subsection (i).

"(vi) STEP 6.—Add the surcharge rate for the calendar year, if any, as computed under paragraph (14).

"(vii) STEP 7.—Add the pooled charge ratio for the calendar year, if any, as computed to 4 decimal points under paragraph (13) and multiplied by 100.

"(viii) STEP 8.—Reduce the percentage rate computed in accordance with the preceding steps to the maximum contribution limit computed under paragraph (20), if such rate is higher than such limit. The rate computed in accordance with the preceding steps, after any reduction under this clause, is the contribution rate.

"(D) NEW-EMPLOYER CONTRIBUTION RATES.—Notwithstanding subparagraphs (B) and (C), the contribution rate applicable to a new employer who does not become subject to this Act until after December 31, 1989, shall be determined as follows:

"(i) 1ST CALENDAR YEAR.—With respect to compensation paid in calendar months before the end of the first full calendar year in which the employer is subject to this Act, the contribution rate shall be the average contribution rate paid by all employers during the 3 calendar years preceding the calendar year before the calendar year in which the compensation is paid. The average contribution rate shall be determined—

"(I) by dividing the aggregate contributions paid by all employers under this subsection in those 3 calendar years by the aggregate compensation with respect to which such contributions were paid; and

"(II) by multiplying the resulting ratio as computed to 4 decimal points by 100.

"(ii) 2D CALENDAR YEAR.—With respect to compensation paid in calendar months in the next calendar year, the contribution rate shall be the smaller of—

"(I) the maximum contribution limit computed under paragraph (20); or

"(II) the percentage rate computed pursuant to the following formula:

$$R=\frac{2(A2)+B}{3}$$

"(iii) 3D CALENDAR YEAR.—With respect to compensation paid in calendar months in the third full calendar year in which the employer is subject to the coverage of this Act, the contribution rate shall be the smaller of—

"(I) the maximum contribution limit computed under paragraph (20); or

"(II) the percentage rate computed pursuant to the following formula:

$$R=\frac{A3+2C}{3}$$

"(iv) SUBSEQUENT CALENDAR YEARS.—With respect to all calendar months in calendar years subsequent to that calendar year, the contribution rate shall be determined under subparagraph (C).

"(v) MEANING OF SYMBOLS.—For purposes of the formulas in clauses (ii) and (iii)—

"(I) 'R' is the applicable contribution rate expressed as a percentage for months in the calendar year;

"(II) 'A1' is the contribution rate determined under clause (i) for such employer's first full calendar year;

"(III) 'A2' is the contribution rate which would have been determined under clause (i) if the employer's second calendar year had been its first full calendar year;

"(IV) 'A3' is the contribution rate which would have been determined under clause (i) if the employer's third calendar year had been such employer's first full calendar year;

"(V) 'B' is the contribution rate for the employer as determined under subparagraph (C) for the employer's second full calendar year; and

"(VI) 'C' is the contribution rate for the employer as determined under subparagraph (C) for the employer's third full calendar year.

"(vi) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN COMPUTATIONS.—For purposes of computing B and C in such formulas—

"(I) the percentage rate computed under subparagraph (C), shall not be reduced under clause (viii) of that subparagraph; and

"(II) any computations which under subparagraph (C) are to be made on the basis of a 4-quarter or 12-quarter period ending on a given June 30 shall be made on the basis of a period commencing with the first day of the first calendar quarter that begins after the date on which the employer first commenced paying compensation subject to this Act and ending on that June 30, and the amount so computed shall be increased to an amount that bears the same ratio to the amount so computed as 4 or 12, as appropriate, bears to the number of calendar quarters in the period on which the computation was based.

"(2) Benefit ratio.—An employer's benefit ratio as of any given June 30 shall be determined by dividing all benefits charged to the employer under paragraph (15) during the 12 calendar quarters ending on such June 30 by the employer's 3-year compensation base as of such June 30 as computed under paragraph (3).

"(3) 3-year compensation base.—An employer's 3-year compensation base as of any given June 30 is the aggregate compensation with respect to which contributions were paid by the employer under this subsection in the 12 calendar quarters ending on such June 30.

"(4) Reserve ratio.—An employer's reserve ratio as of any given June 30 shall be computed by dividing the employer's reserve balance as of such June 30, as computed under paragraph (6), by that employer's 1-year compensation base as of such June 30, as computed under paragraph (5). The employer's reserve ratio may be either a positive or a negative figure, depending upon whether the employer's reserve balance is a positive or negative figure.

"(5) 1-year compensation base.—An employer's 1-year compensation base as of any given June 30 is the aggregate compensation with respect to which contributions were paid by the employer under this subsection in the 4 calendar quarters ending on such June 30.

"(6) Reserve balance.—An employer's reserve balance as of any given June 30 shall be determined by subtracting the employer's cumulative benefit balance as of such June 30, computed under paragraph (7), from the employer's net cumulative contribution balance as of such June 30, computed under paragraph (8). An employer's reserve balance may be either positive or negative, depending upon whether or not that employer's net cumulative contribution balance exceeds the employer's cumulative benefit balance.

"(7) Cumulative benefit balance.—An employer's cumulative benefit balance as of any given June 30 shall be determined by adding—

"(A) the net amount of the benefits charged to the employer under paragraph (15) on or after January 1, 1990; and

"(B) the cumulative amount of the employer's unallocated charges for the same period, if any, as computed under paragraph (9).

"(8) Net cumulative contribution balance.—An employer's net cumulative contribution balance as of any given June 30 shall be determined as follows:

"(A) Step 1.—Compute the sum of

"(i) all contributions paid by the employer pursuant to this subsection;

"(ii) that portion of the tax imposed under section 3321(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 that is attributable to the surtax rate under section 516(b) of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance and Retirement Improvement Act of 1988; and

"(iii) any taxes paid by the employer pursuant to section 3321(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (after the outstanding balance of loans made under section 10(d) before October 1, 1985, plus interest, have been paid); on or after January 1, 1990.

"(B) Step 2.—Subtract an amount equal to the amount of such contributions deposited to the credit of the fund under subsection (i).

"(C) Step 3.—Add an amount equal to the aggregate amount by which such contributions were reduced in prior calendar years as a result of pooled credits, if any, under paragraph (1)(C)(iii).

"(9) Unallocated charge.—An employer's unallocated charge as of any given June 30 is the amount that as of such June 30 bears the same ratio to the system unallocated charge balance, computed under paragraph (10), as the employer's 1-year compensation base, computed under paragraph (5), bears to the system compensation base computed under paragraph (11).

"(10) System unallocated charge balance.—The system unallocated charge balance as of any given June 30 shall be determined as follows:

"(A) Step 1.—Compute the aggregate amount of all interest paid by the account on loans from the Railroad Retirement Account after September 30, 1985, pursuant to section 10(d), during the 4 calendar quarters ending on that June 30.

"(B) Step 2.—Add the aggregate amount of any additions to the system unallocated charge balance specified in paragraphs (15) and (16), during that period.

"(C) Step 3.—Add the aggregate amount of any other expenditures by the account during that period not chargeable to any individual employer under paragraph (15) or to the fund under section 11.

"(D) Step 4.—Subtract the aggregate amount of all income to the account, under section 10(a)(iv) or section 10(a)(vii), during that period.

"(E) Step 5.—Subtract the aggregate amount of all transfers to the account, pursuant to section 11(d), during that period.

"(F) Step 6.—Subtract the aggregate amount of all other income and receipts of the account, during that period, which are not assigned to individual employer balances.

"(G) Step 7.—Subtract the net cumulative contribution balance of each employer whose balance has been cancelled pursuant to paragraph (16), during that period, calculated as of the date of such cancellation.

"(11) System compensation base.—The system compensation base as of any given June 30 shall be determined by adding together the amounts of the 1-year compensation bases of all employers and employee representatives subject to this Act, computed in accordance with paragraph (5), as of such June 30.

"(12) Pooled credit ratio.—The pooled credit ratio, if any, for a calendar year shall be determined as follows:

"(A) Step 1.—Compute the balance to the credit of the account as of the close of business on the preceding June 30, including any amounts in the account attributable to loans made under section 10(d) before October 1, 1985, but disregarding the obligation to repay such loans and interest thereon. In determining such balance as of June 30 of any year, so much of the balance to the credit of the railroad unemployment insurance administration fund as of the close of business on such date as is in excess of $6,000,000 shall be deemed to be part of the balance to the credit of such account. There will be a pooled credit ratio for the calendar year only if that balance is in excess of the greater of $250,000,000 or of the amount that bears the same ratio to $250,000,000 as the system compensation base as of that June 30 bears to the system compensation base as of June 30, 1991, as computed in accordance with paragraph (11).

"(B) Step 2.—If there is such an excess amount, divide that excess amount by the system compensation base as of the June 30 preceding the calendar year. The result is the pooled credit ratio for the calendar year.

"(13) Pooled charge ratio.—The pooled charge ratio, if any, for a calendar year shall be determined as follows:

"(A) Step 1.—With respect to each employer whose contribution rate for that calendar year as computed through step 6 under paragraph (1)(C) was greater than the maximum contribution limit computed under paragraph (20), multiply the employer's 1-year compensation base as of the preceding June 30, as computed in accordance with paragraph (5), by the difference between—

"(i) the percentage rate determined under subparagraph (B), (C), or (D) of paragraph (1) before the reduction to the maximum contribution limit; and

"(ii) the maximum contribution limit.

"(B) Step 2.—Add the amounts arrived at under step 1 so as to obtain an aggregate amount for all such employers.

"(C) Step 3.—For each employer whose contribution rate as computed through step 3 under paragraph (1)(C) was less than 0, the percentage rate by which such employer's rate was raised in order to bring that rate to 0 shall be multiplied by that employer's 1-year compensation base as of the preceding June 30. Subtract the total of the amounts computed under the preceding sentence for all employers from the amount arrived at in step 2.

"(D) Step 4.—Divide the aggregate amount arrived at under step 3 by the system compensation base as of the preceding June 30 as computed under paragraph (11) minus the one-year compensation base of those employers whose rates computed through step 6 of paragraph (1)(C) exceeded the maximum contribution rate computed under paragraph (20). The result is the pooled charge ratio for the calendar year.

"(14) Surcharge rate.—The surcharge rate for a calendar year, if any, shall be determined as follows:

"(A) Step 1.—Compute the balance to the credit of the account as of the close of business on the preceding June 30, including any amounts in the account attributable to loans made under section 10(d) before October 1, 1985, but disregarding the obligation to repay such loans and interest thereon. In determining such balance as of June 30 of any year, so much of the balance to the credit of the railroad unemployment insurance administration fund as of the close of business on such date as is in excess of $6,000,000 shall be deemed to be part of the balance to the credit of such account. There will be a surcharge rate for the calendar year only if that balance is less than the greater of $100,000,000 or of the amount that bears the same ratio to $100,000,000 as the system compensation base as of that June 30 bears to the system compensation base as of June 30, 1991, as computed in accordance with paragraph (11).

"(B) Step 2.—(i) If the balance to the credit of the account is less than the greater of the amounts referred to in the 2nd sentence of step 1 but is equal to or more than the greater of $50,000,000 or of the amount that bears the same ratio to $50,000,000 as the system compensation base as of that June 30 bears to the system compensation base as of June 30, 1991, then the surcharge rate for the calendar year shall be 1.5 percent.

"(ii) If the balance to the credit of the account is less than the greater of the amounts referred to in the clause (i), but greater than or equal to zero, then the surcharge rate for the calendar year shall be 2.5 percent.

"(iii) If the balance to the credit of the account is less than zero, the surcharge rate for the calendar year shall be 3.5 percent.

"(15) CHARGEABLE BENEFITS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Beginning January 1, 1990, all benefits paid to an employee for days of unemployment or days of sickness shall be charged to that employee's base year employer by adding amounts equal to the amounts of such benefits to the employer's cumulative benefit balance except that benefits paid by reason of strikes or work stoppages growing out of labor disputes shall not be added to the employer's cumulative benefit balance but instead shall be added to the system unallocated charge balance.

"(B) ADJUSTMENTS.—A sum equal to each amount realized in recovery for overpayment, erroneous payment, or reimbursement of benefits and credited to the account pursuant to section 10(a)(v) or 10(a)(viii) shall be subtracted from the cumulative benefit balances of the employers of the employees to whom such an amount was paid as a benefit in the proportion to the amount by which each such employer's cumulative benefit balance was increased as a result of the payment of the benefit.

"(C) MULTIPLE EMPLOYERS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—All benefits paid to an employee who had more than 1 base-year employer shall be charged to the cumulative benefit balances of the employee's base year employers—

"(I) in reverse chronological order of the employee's employment with each such employer in the base year if the employer at the time of the claim was the last base year employer, and the amount charged to each employer shall not exceed the compensation paid by that employer to the employee in the base year; and

"(II) in all other cases, in the same ratio as the compensation paid to such employee by the employer bears to the total of such compensation paid to such employee by all such employers in the base year.

"(ii) SPECIAL RULE FOR EMPLOYER WITH CANCELLED BALANCES.—All benefits chargeable under this subparagraph to an employer for which the Board has cancelled balances under paragraph (16) shall be added to the system unallocated charge balance.

"(16) DEFUNCT EMPLOYER.—Whenever the Board determines, pursuant to such regulations as the Board may prescribe, that an employer has permanently ceased to pay compensation with respect to which contributions are payable pursuant to this subsection, the Board shall, effective on the date of the Board's determination, transfer the employer's net cumulative contribution balance as a subtraction from, and cumulative benefit balance as an addition to, the system unallocated charge balance and cancel all other accumulations of the employer.

"(17) INDIVIDUAL EMPLOYER RECORD.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—As of January 1, 1990, the Board shall commence maintaining an individual employer record with respect to each employer, and the records necessary to determine pooled charges, pooled credits and unallocated charge balances for the system. Whenever a new employer begins paying compensation with respect to which contributions are payable pursuant to this subsection, the Board shall establish and maintain an individual employer record for such employer.

"(B) DEFINITION.—As used in this paragraph, the term 'individual employer record' means a record of an individual employer's benefit ratio, reserve ratio, 1-year compensation base, 3-year compensation base, unallocated charge, reserve balance, net cumulative contribution balance, and cumulative benefit balance.

"(18) JOINT EMPLOYER RECORDS.—Pursuant to regulations prescribed by the Board, the Board may allow 2 or more employers, upon application, to establish and maintain, or to discontinue, a joint individual employer record for such employers as though such joint record constituted a single employer's individual employer record.

"(19) MERGERS, CONSOLIDATIONS, OR OTHER CHANGES IN EMPLOYER IDENTITY.—

"(A) WITH OTHER EMPLOYERS.—In the event of a merger, consolidation, unification, or reorganization in which an employer combines with another employer and the combination entails no partitioning of the property of the employer, the individual employer records of the 2 employers shall be combined into a joint individual employer record if the parties request such joint treatment pursuant to paragraph (18) or if the Board otherwise determines, pursuant to regulations prescribed by the Board, that such joint treatment is desirable.

"(B) WITH NONEMPLOYERS.—In the event of a merger, consolidation, unification, or reorganization in which an employer combines with another entity that is not an employer, the employer's individual employer record shall attach to the combined entity.

"(C) SALE OF ASSETS.—In the event property of an employer is sold or transferred to another employer or other entity, or is partitioned among 2 or more employers or entities, the cumulative benefit balance, net cumulative contribution balance, 1-year compensation base, and 3-year compensation base of the employer shall be prorated among the employers which receive the property, including any entities which become employers by virtue of such transfer or partition, in such equitable manner as the Board by regulation shall prescribe.

"(D) REINCORPORATION.—The cumulative benefit balance, net cumulative contribution balance, 1-year compensation base, and 3-year compensation base of an employer that reincorporates or otherwise alters its corporate identity in a transaction not involving a merger, consolidation, or unification shall attach to the reincorporated or altered entity.

"(E) ABANDONMENT.—If an employer abandons property or discontinues service but continues to operate as an employer, the employer's individual employer record shall continue to be calculated as provided in this subsection without retroactive adjustment.

"(20) MAXIMUM CONTRIBUTION LIMIT.—The maximum contribution limit with respect to a calendar year is 12 percent, unless a 3.5 percent surcharge under paragraph (14) is in effect with respect to that calendar year. If such a surcharge is in effect the maximum contribution limit with respect to that calendar year is 12.5 percent.

"(21) SPECIAL RULES FOR CERTAIN COMPUTATIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH (1)(C).—(A) Any computation that is to be made under paragraph (1)(C) on the basis of a 12-quarter period ending on a given June 30 shall be made on the basis of a period—

"(i) beginning on the later of—

"(I) January 1, 1990;

"(II) the first day of the first calendar quarter that begins after the date on which the employer first began to pay compensation subject to this Act; or

"(III) July 1 of the third calendar year preceding that June 30; and

"(ii) ending on that June 30.

"(B) The amount computed under subparagraph (A) shall be increased to an amount that bears the same ratio to the amount so computed as 12 bears to the number of calendar quarters on which the computation is based.".

(b) EMPLOYEE REPRESENTATIVE CONTRIBUTION.—Subsection (b) of section 8 is amended to read as follows:

"(b) EMPLOYEE REPRESENTATIVE CONTRIBUTION.—Each employee representative shall pay a contribution with respect to so much of the compensation paid to him for services performed as an employee representative as is not in excess of the monthly compensation base computed in accordance with section 1(i), at a rate which shall be determined under subsection (a) in the same manner and with the same effect as if the employee organization by which such employee representative is employed were an employer as defined in this Act.".

(c) EXTENSION OF REMEDIES.—Section 8(h) is amended by adding at the end the following: "The remedies available under the first sentence of this subsection for an employer or employee representative who contests the amount of contributions payable by him shall also apply with respect to a contention that the contribution rate determined by the Board under subsection (a) or (b) to be applicable to such employer or employee representative is inaccurate or otherwise improper.".

(d) BOARD PROCLAMATION OF BALANCE.—Section 8 is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (c) through (h) as subsections (f) through (k), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsections:

"(c) BOARD PROCLAMATION OF BALANCE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than October 15, 1990, and October 15 of each year thereafter the Board shall proclaim—

"(A) the balance to the credit of the account as of the preceding June 30 for purposes of paragraphs (12) and (14) of subsection (a);

"(B) the balance of any advances to the account under section 10(d) after September 30, 1985, that has not been repaid with interest as provided in such section as of September 30 of that year;

"(C) the system compensation base as of that June 30 as computed in accordance with paragraph (11) of that subsection;

"(D) the system unallocated charge balance as of that June 30, as computed in accordance with paragraph (10) of that subsection; and

"(E) the pooled credit ratio, the pooled charge ratio, and the surcharge rate, if any, as determined under paragraph (12), (13), or (14) of that subsection and applicable in the following calendar year.

"(2) PUBLICATION OF NOTICE.—As soon as is practicable after such proclamation, the Board shall publish notice in the Federal Register of the amounts so determined and proclaimed.

"(d) NOTIFICATIONS BY BOARD.—(1) Not later than the last day of any calendar quarter that begins after March 31, 1990, the Board shall notify each employer and employee representative of its net cumulative contribution balance and cumulative benefit balance as of the end of the preceding calendar quarter, as computed in accordance with paragraphs (7) and (8) of subsection (a) as of the last day of such preceding calendar quarter rather than as of a given June 30 if such last day is not a June 30.

"(2) Not later than October 15, 1990, and October 15 of each year thereafter, the Board shall notify each employer and employee representative of its benefit ratio, reserve ratio, 1-year compensation base, 3-year compensation base, unallocated charge, and reserve balance as of the preceding June 30 as computed in accordance with paragraphs (2), (3), (4), (5), (6), and (9) of subsection (a), and of the contribution rate applicable to the employer or employee representative in the following calendar year as computed under paragraphs (1) (B), (C), or (D) of that subsection.

"(e) INFORMATION TO VERIFY ACCURACY TO BE MADE AVAILABLE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, upon request by an employer or employee representative, the Board shall make available to such employer or employee representative any information available to the Board which may be necessary to verify the accuracy of a contribution rate determined by the Board to be applicable to such employer or employee representative, or of any component of that contribution rate including the accuracy of the employer's individual employer record, upon payment by such employer or employee representative to the Board of the cost incurred by the Board in making such information available. The amounts so paid to the Board shall be credited to and deposited in the fund.".

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect upon the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 513. ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.

(a) CHANGE IN PERCENTAGE TO BE DEPOSITED IN FUND.—Section 8(i), as so redesignated by section 512(d), is amended by striking out "0.5" and inserting in lieu thereof "0.65".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) Section 10(a) is amended by striking out "0.5" and inserting in lieu thereof "0.65".

(2) Section 11(a) is amended by striking out "0.5" and inserting in lieu thereof "0.65".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to compensation paid in months beginning after September 30, 1988.

SEC. 514. NOTIFICATION TO EMPLOYER.

(a) IN CONNECTION WITH CLAIM.—Section 5(b) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "When a claim for benefits is filed with the Board, the Board shall provide notice of such claim to the claimant's base-year employer or employers and afford such employer or employers an opportunity to submit information relevant to the claim before making an initial determination on the claim. When the Board initially determines to pay benefits to a claimant under this Act, the Board shall provide notice of such determination to the claimant's base-year employer or employers.".

(b) IN CONNECTION WITH ADMINISTRATIVE REVIEW.—Section 5(c) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after "(c)";

(2) by inserting at the end of the first paragraph the following: "In any such case the Board or the person or reviewing body so established or assigned shall, by publication or otherwise, notify all parties properly interested of their right to participate in the hearing and of the time and place of the hearing.";

(3) by inserting "(2)" at the beginning of the second paragraph;

(4) by inserting after the second paragraph the following:

"(3) Any base-year employer of a claimant whose claim for benefits has been granted in whole or in part, either in an initial determination with respect thereto or in a determination after a hearing pursuant to paragraph (1), and who contends that the determination is erroneous for a reason or reasons other than a reason that is reviewable under paragraph (4), may appeal to the Board for review of such determination. Despite such an appeal, the benefits awarded shall be paid to such claimant, subject to recovery by the Board if and to the extent found on the appeal to have been erroneously awarded. The Board shall take such action as is appropriate to recover the amount of such benefits including if feasible adjustment in subsequent payments pursuant to the first two paragraphs of section 2(d) of this Act. Upon an appeal, the Board shall review the determination appealed from and for such review may designate one of its officers or employees to receive evidence and report to the Board thereof together with recommendations. In any such case the Board or the person so designated shall, by publication or otherwise, notify all parties properly interested of their right to participate in the proceeding and, if a hearing is to be held, of the time and place of the hearing. At the request of any party properly interested the Board shall provide for a hearing, and may provide for a hearing on its own motion. The Board shall prescribe regulations governing the appeals provided for in this paragraph and for decisions upon such appeal.";

(5) by inserting "(4)" at the beginning of the third paragraph;

(6) by inserting "(5)" at the beginning of the fourth paragraph;

(7) by striking out "two" in the first sentence of the fourth paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof "three";

(8) by inserting before the final paragraph the following:

"(6) For purposes of this subsection and subsections (d) and (f), any base-year employer of the claimant is a properly interested party."; and

(9) by inserting "(7)" at the beginning of the final paragraph.

(c) IN CONNECTION WITH JUDICIAL REVIEW.—Section 5(f) is amended—

(1) by inserting after "member," in the first sentence "or any base-year employer of the claimant,"; and

(2) by inserting after the second sentence the following: "A copy of such petition also shall forthwith be served upon any other properly interested party, and such party shall be a party to the review proceeding.".

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS WITH RESPECT TO LIMITATION ON ADMINISTRATIVE DISCLOSURE.—Section 12(d) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" where it appears before "(iii)"; and

(2) by striking out the period at the end of the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "; and (iv) the Board shall disclose to any base-year employer of a claimant for benefits any information, including information as to the claimant's identity, that is necessary or appropriate to notify such employer of the claim for benefits or to full and fair participation by such employer in an appeal, hearing, or other proceeding relative to the claim pursuant to section 5 of this Act.".

(e) CONFORMING AMENDMENT WITH RESPECT TO COURT PROCEEDINGS LIMITATION.—Section 12(n) is amended by striking out "court" in the proviso to the second paragraph.

(f) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on January 1, 1990.

SEC. 515. ANNUAL REPORT.

On or before July 1 of 1989, and of each calendar year thereafter, the Railroad Retirement Board shall submit to the Congress a report on the financial status of the railroad unemployment insurance system under various economic and employment assumptions. Such report shall include any recommendation for financing changes which might be advisable, including any adjustment the Railroad Retirement Board recommends regarding the rates of employer contributions.

SEC. 516. AMENDMENTS RELATING TO RAILROAD UNEMPLOYMENT REPAYMENT TAX.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 23A of the 1986 Code (relating to railroad unemployment repayment tax) is amended to read as follows:

"CHAPTER 23A. RAILROAD UNEMPLOYMENT REPAYMENT TAX

"Sec. 3321. Imposition of tax.
"Sec. 3322. Definitions.

"SEC. 3321. IMPOSITION OF TAX.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—There is hereby imposed on every rail employer for each calendar month an excise tax, with respect to having individuals in his employ, equal to 4 percent of the total rail wages paid by him during such month.

"(b) TAX ON EMPLOYEE REPRESENTATIVES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—There is hereby imposed on the income of each employee representative a tax equal to 4 percent of the rail wages paid to him during the calendar month.

"(2) DETERMINATION OF WAGES.—The rail wages of an employee representative for purposes of paragraph (1) shall be determined in the same manner and with the same effect as if the employee organization by which such employee representative is employed were a rail employer.

"(c) TERMINATION IF LOANS TO RAILROAD UNEMPLOYMENT FUND REPAID.—The tax imposed by this section shall not apply to rail wages paid on or after the 1st day of any calendar month if, as of such 1st day, there is—

"(1) no balance of transfers made before October 1, 1985, to the railroad unemployment insurance account under section 10(d) of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, and

"(2) no unpaid interest on such transfers.

"SEC. 3322. DEFINITIONS.

"(a) RAIL EMPLOYER.—For purposes of this chapter, the term 'rail employer' means any person who is an employer as defined in section 1 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act.

"(b) RAIL WAGES.—For purposes of this chapter, the term 'rail wages' means, with respect to any calendar month, so much of the remuneration paid during such month which is subject to contributions under section 8(a) of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act.

"(c) EMPLOYEE REPRESENTATIVE.—For purposes of this chapter, the term 'employee representative' has the meaning given such term by section 1 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act.

"(d) CERTAIN RULES MADE APPLICABLE.—For purposes of this chapter, rules similar to the rules of section 3307 and 3308 shall apply."

(b) CONTINUATION OF SURTAX RATE THROUGH 1990.—

(1) In general.—In the case of any calendar month beginning before January 1, 1991—

(A) there shall be substituted for "4 percent" in subsections (a) and (b) of section 3321 of the 1986 Code the percentage equal to the sum of—

(i) 4 percent, plus

(ii) the surtax rate (if any) for such calendar month, and

(B) subsection (c) of such section shall not apply to so much of the tax imposed by such section as is attributable to the surtax rate.

(2) Surtax rate.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the surtax rate shall be—

(A) 3.5 percent for each month during a calendar year if, as of September 30, of the preceding calendar year, there was a balance of transfers (or unpaid interest thereon) made after September 30, 1985, to the railroad unemployment insurance account under section 10(d) of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, and

(B) zero for any other calendar month.

(c) Technical and Conforming Amendments.—

(1) Subsection (d) of section 6157 of the 1986 Code (relating to quarterly payment of railroad unemployment repayment tax) is hereby repealed.

(2) Paragraph (2) of section 6201(b) of the 1986 Code (relating to amount not to be assessed) is amended by striking out "or tax imposed by section 3321".

(3) Section 6317 of the 1986 Code (relating to payments of Federal unemployment tax for calendar quarter) is amended—

(A) by striking out "or tax imposed by section 3321", and

(B) by striking out "and 23A, as the case may be,".

(4) Subsection (e) of section 6513 of the 1986 Code (relating to payments of Federal unemployment tax) is amended by striking out the last sentence.

(5) Subsection (i) of section 6601 of the 1986 Code (relating to exception as to Federal unemployment tax) is amended by striking out "or 3321".

(6) Subparagraph (A) of section 232(a)(2) of the Railroad Retirement Revenue Act of 1983 is amended by striking out "is attributable to the basic rate under section 3321(c)(1)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954" and inserting in lieu thereof "is not attributable to the surtax rate under section 516(b) of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance and Retirement Improvement Act of 1988".

(7) Subparagraph (B) of section 232(a)(2) of such Act is amended by striking out "section 3321(c)(1)(B) of such Code" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 516(b) of such Act".

(d) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section, and the provisions of subsection (b), shall apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1988.

SEC. 517. GAO STUDY OF FRAUD AND PAYMENT ERRORS.

The Comptroller General shall study the frequency of fraud and payment errors in the railroad unemployment compensation program. Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall report to Congress the results of such study. Such report shall include—

(1) estimates of rates and amounts of annual losses due to fraud and overpayment;

(2) comparisons of such rates with the rates of losses in other Federal programs which experience such losses;

(3) recommendations for legislative measures that could be taken to reduce the losses in the railroad unemployment compensation program arising from fraud and payment errors; and

(4) such other matters relating to such fraud and payment errors as the Comptroller General determines are appropriate.

Subtitle B—Benefit and Other Adjustments

SEC. 521. WAITING PERIOD FOR BENEFITS AND BENEFIT INCREASES.

(a) In General.—Section 2(a) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after "(a)";

(2) by striking out the first paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof:

"Benefits shall be payable to any qualified employee for each day of unemployment in excess of four during any registration period: Provided, however, That no benefits shall be payable for days of unemployment during the first registration period within a benefit year in which the employee has more than four days of unemployment: Provided further, That in any case in which the Board finds that an employee's unemployment was due to a stoppage of work because of a strike in the establishment, premises, or enterprise at which he was last employed, no benefits shall be payable for the first fourteen days of unemployment due to such stoppage of work, however, for subsequent days of unemployment due to such stoppage of work benefits shall be payable for days in excess of four during any registration period. Benefits shall be payable to any qualified employee for each day of sickness after the fourth consecutive day of sickness in a period of continuing sickness, but excluding four days of sickness in any registration period: Provided, however, That no benefits shall be payable for days of sickness in the first registration period within a benefit year in which the employee has both four consecutive days of sickness and more than four days of sickness. A period of continuing sickness means (i) a period of consecutive days of sickness, whether from one or more causes, or (ii) a period of successive days of sickness due to a single cause without interruption of more than ninety consecutive days which are not days of sickness.".

(3) by inserting "(2)" at the beginning of the second paragraph;

(4) by striking out "and" after "shall not exceed $24 per day of such unemployment or sickness" in the second paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof a comma;

(5) by inserting "but before July 1, 1988," after "June 30, 1976," in the second paragraph;

(6) by striking out the period at the end of the first sentence of the second paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof ", that for registration periods beginning after June 30, 1988, but before July 1, 1989, such amount shall not exceed $30 per day of unemployment or sickness, and that for registration periods beginning after June 30, 1989, such amount shall not exceed the maximum daily benefit rate provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection.";

(7) by inserting after the second paragraph the following new paragraph:

"(3)(A) The maximum daily benefit rate which the Board is required to compute under section 12(r)(2) shall be the amount computed pursuant to the following formula, but shall be not less than $30:

$$BR=25\left(1+\frac{A-600}{900}\right)$$

"(B) For purposes of such formula—

"(i) 'BR' represents the maximum daily benefit rate; and

"(ii) 'A' represents the amount obtained by dividing the amount of the 'applicable base' with respect to tier 1 taxes as determined under section 3231(e)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 for the calendar year in which the benefit year begins by 60, with this quotient being rounded down to the nearest multiple of $100.

"(C) If the maximum daily benefit rate computed under such formula is not a multiple of $1, it shall be rounded to the nearest multiple of $1, with such rounding being upward in the event the amount computed is equidistant between two multiples of $1."; and

(8) by inserting "(4)" at the beginning of the last paragraph.

(b) Effective Dates.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by subsection (a) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) The amendments made by paragraph (2) of subsection (a) shall apply with respect to registration periods beginning after June 30, 1988.

SEC. 522. QUALIFYING CONDITION.

(a) In General.—Section 3 is amended—

(1) by inserting "with respect to the base year" after "his compensation"; and

(2) by striking "$1,500 with respect to the base year" and inserting in lieu thereof "2.5 times the monthly compensation base for months in such base year as computed under section 1(i) of this Act".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 523. INCREASE IN MAXIMUM PERMITTED SUBSIDIARY REMUNERATION.

(a) In General.—The second paragraph of section 1(k) is amended by striking out "$10" and inserting "$15" in lieu thereof.

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by this section shall take effect on July 1, 1988.

Subtitle C—Retirement Act Amendments

SEC. 531. ADDITIONAL LUMP SUM PAYMENT IN CERTAIN CASES.

Section 6 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e)(1) Every individual who will have completed ten years of service at the time of his retirement or death, who will have received compensation in the nature of separation or severance pay on or after January 1, 1985, and who would have been credited with additional months of service pursuant to section 3(i)(4) of this Act except for the fact that such individual was not in an employment relation to one or more employers nor an employee representative in such months, shall, at the time his annuity under section 2(a)(1) of this Act begins to accrue, be entitled to a lump sum in the amount provided under subdivision (2) of this subsection. If the full amount of a lump sum under this subsection cannot be determined at the time an individual's annuity under section 2(a)(1) begins to accrue, such lump sum shall be payable at such time thereafter as such amount can be determined. If an individual otherwise eligible for a lump sum under this section dies before he becomes entitled to an annuity under section 2(a)(1), or before he receives payment of such lump sum, such lump sum shall be payable to the person, if any, who is determined by the Board to be such individual's widow or widower and who will not have died before receiving payment of such lump sum. If there be no such widow or widower, such lump sum shall be payable to the children, grandchildren, parents, brothers and sisters, or the estate of the deceased individual in the same manner as if such lump sum were a lump sum payable under subsection (c)(1) of this section.

"(2) The lump sum provided under subdivision (l) of this subsection shall be in an amount equal to the product of (A) the compensation attributable to the additional months of service which would have been credited to the individual due to the receipt of payments in the nature of separation or severance pay pursuant to section 3(i)(4) of this Act if such individual had remained in an employment relation to one or more employers or had continued to be an employee representative and (B) the rate of tax, or rates of tax, imposed on the compensation described in clause (A) of this subdivision by section 3201(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.".

SEC. 532. DELETION OF LAST PERSON SERVICE AS A DISQUALIFICATION.

(a) In General.—Section 2(e) of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974 is amended—

(1)(A) in subdivision (1), by striking out "any person, whether or not"; and

(B) by striking out "(but with the" and all that follows through "political subdivision of a State";

(2) in subdivision (2), by striking out "and of the person, or persons, by whom he was last employed"; and

(3) in subdivision (3), by striking out "or to the last person, or persons, by whom he was employed prior to the date on which the annuity under subsection (a)(1) began to accrue".

(b) Deduction for Work.—Section 2(f) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subdivision:

"(6)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B)—

"(i) that portion of the annuity for any month of an individual as is computed under section 3(b) and as adjusted under section 3(g), plus any supplemental amount for such month under section 3(e), and that portion of the annuity for any month of a spouse as is computed under section 4(b) and as adjusted under section 4(d), shall each be subject to a deduction of $1 for each $2 of compensation received by such individual from compensated service rendered in such month to the last person, or persons, by whom such individual was employed before the date on which the annuity of such individual under subsection (a)(1) began to accrue; and

"(ii) that portion of the annuity for any month of a spouse as is computed under section 4(b) and as adjusted under section 4(d) shall be subject to a deduction of $1 for each $2 of compensation received by such spouse from compensated service rendered in such month to the last person, or persons, by whom such spouse was employed before the date on which the annuity of such spouse under subsection (c)(1) began to accrue.

"(B) Any deductions imposed by this subdivision for any month shall not exceed 50 percent of the annuity amount for such month to which such deductions apply.".

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to annuities payable under the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974 for months beginning after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 533. EARNINGS OF DISABILITY ANNUITANTS.

(a) In General.—Section 2(e)(4) of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974 is amended—

(1) by striking out "$200 in earnings" and inserting in lieu thereof "$400 in earnings (after deduction of disability related work expenses)";

(2) by striking out "$2,400" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "$4,800 (after deduction of disability related work expenses)";

(3) by striking out "$200" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "$400"; and

(4) by striking out "$100" and inserting in lieu thereof "$200".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to months in calendar years beginning after December 31, 1987.

SEC. 534. ALLOWANCE OF CREDIT FOR MILITARY SERVICE.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

THE JUVENILE DIABETES FOUNDATION INTERNATIONAL

● Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation International is in its 18th year providing funding for further research into the study, treatment, and eventual cure of diabetes particularly as it disabled children. Their efforts have been tremendously successful and I would hope that my colleagues would join me in celebrating their remarkable accomplishments. May I ask that a more detailed summary of the JDF's activities be included in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The summary follows:

THE JUVENILE DIABETES FOUNDATION [JDF] INTERNATIONAL

The Juvenile Diabetes Foundation (JDF) International was founded in 1970 by a group of parents with diabetic children who were convinced that a better future for their children could only be found through expanded diabetes research. The JDF is an international not-for-profit, voluntary agency. The objective of JDF is to raise funds to find the cause, cure, treatment and prevention of diabetes and its complications.

The Juvenile Diabetes Foundation International funds medical research projects in three main categories: research grants, career development awards, and postdoctoral fellowships. As a result of funds raised to date significant progress has already been achieved toward improving the treatment of diabetics and conquering the many complications of the disease.

Diabetes is a chronic metabolic order which adversely affects the body's ability to manufacture and utilize insulin, a hormone necessary for the conversion of food into energy. In children, the onset of diabetes can be particularly swift and severe, the course of the disease unstable, and the problems acute.

Approximately 12 million Americans and one million Canadians suffer from diabetes. The number of diabetics is increasing at a rate of six percent each year. Diabetes with its complications is the third leading cause of death by disease in America, after heart disease and cancer. An estimated 450,000 people will die this year from diabetes and its complications.

Diabetes often leads to heart disease, stroke, kidney disease, gangrene and nerve damage. It is also the leading cause of adult blindness. There are 5,000 new cases of blindness resulting from diabetes each year. Federal and state aid for these people alone amounts to $60 million annually. The care of diabetic patients suffering from kidney disease is approximately $200 million per year and is increasing rapidly. And hospital costs for diabetes-related amputations amount to $350 million annually.

In its short history, JDF has funded over $30 million in new and exciting diabetes research projects. Except for the United States government, JDF has awarded more dollars directly to diabetes research than any other organization in the world.

JDF Chapters and affiliates worldwide energetically pursue a common goal to cure diabetes and courageously seek the dollars urgently needed to reach that goal. In addition to fund-raising, JDF chapters perform innovative and invaluable work in the community, providing information, counseling and support to newly diagnosed diabetics and their families; offering volunteer services to hospitals service groups and schools and educating the public to the seriousness of diabetes and the pressing need for research.

"More has been accomplished toward achieving a cure for diabetes in the last decade than in the previous 60 years. With increased levels of support for research, we know diabetes can be put in its place on the list of diseases conquered in this century," said Eileen Gelick, JDF International president.●

PARTNERSHIP FOR A DRUG-FREE AMERICA

● Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, the real battle against drugs is not on the borders, nor in streets and courtrooms. It is a battle in the hearts and minds of people.

It is a battle we can win because, in order to win, what we must do is tell the truth about drugs. We must provide for the teenager on the street, as for people everywhere in jeopardy of falling victim to illegal drugs, a voice against the deceit of drug pushers and drug abusers.

Such a voice already is coming from the Partnership for a Drug-Free America, a group of top advertising agencies and media people who have donated ads and media time to spread the antidrug message.

In 1987, the media donated more than $150 million in air time and newspaper space to antidrug messages. Eventually, the partnership hopes to marshal $1.5 billion over 3 years in donated creative efforts, broadcast time and newspaper space. So far, these efforts have been successful. According to a survey after the first year of advertising, which I will submit for the RECORD, attitudes have begun to move in the right direction.

I cannot stress strongly enough the importance of mobilizing public opinion against illegal drugs. At the turn of the century, America had a serious drug abuse problem. Cocaine was legal at that time. The problem was overcome not by interdiction, nor by stricter penalties. The drug epidemic of the early 20th century was overcome by public revulsion against drug use. America became disgusted, and the epidemic was beaten. But people have forgotten how terrible drugs are. We must remind them. We must rekindle public revulsion against drug abuse.

The Partnership for a Drug-Free America is playing a role in turning opinion against drugs. In areas that have received the most advertising, the survey found a greater improvement in attitudes than elsewhere. People are listening. People are becoming angry and disgusted with illegal drug use. We owe a great deal of thanks to the Partnership for a Drug-Free America.

We have not exhausted this avenue. I believe we have only begun the journey. We need to go to States and communities to build up local commitment to a campaign against illegal drugs. Broadcasters and publishers in every community need to be involved in drug education. I ask each of you to lend support and influence to the cause.

Let us take the fight to where it counts: To people all across the land who are in danger, and to their families and friends. Let us tell the truth about drug abuse. Border patrols and criminal prosecutions are vital fronts in the battle. But interdiction and jail terms do not make people free. It is the truth that will make America free of drugs.

I ask that the material to which I referred be printed in the RECORD.

The material follows:

CONCLUSIONS AND IMPLICATIONS

Over the course of the first twelve months of the Partnership's advertising effort, there has been encouraging improvement in people's attitudes toward drugs. Among all age groups, our research measured greater fear of the social, psychological and physical risks of drug use as well as more negative image of drug users and a correspondingly improved positive image of non-users.

The changes are most noticeable among college students, who even reported a drop in cocaine use. This may be due to the fact that students tend to live in a more closed society where attitudinal changes become widespread faster. Think back to the 60's and 70's when drug abuse (particularly grass) spread outward from college campuses to the general population, both older and younger. We can only hope we are seeing the reverse trend spreading out from campuses now.

Because different network affiliates, independent stations and other media donated different levels of time/space to the Partnership advertising, we are able to identify eleven markets that received significantly higher advertising levels—at least 50 percent heavier weight. While we recognize that this greater cooperation may have been in response to greater community attention to drug problems that was expressed in other activities as well, we can nevertheless compare attitudinal changes in heavy weight markets versus low weight markets.

The differences are encouraging. Children, teens and college students living in the heavy weight markets show far greater progress in their attitudes toward drugs than in the Balance U.S. Among adults, the pattern is inconsistent, with the heavy-up markets outperforming Balance U.S. in some cases and the reverse on other items.

There is one disappointing finding seen among the subsample of parents. They are still quite unrealistic about their children's exposure to and use of drugs and their myopia has gotten worse over the past year. Unfortunately, parental blindness is even more marked among blacks and Hispanics than among whites, despite the fact that black and Hispanic children and teens have greater exposure to and experience with drugs.

YEAR I FINDINGS

[NOTE.—All numbers reported are statistically significant at the 95% confidence level. A blank in the tables indicates that that particular item was not statistically significant at this level.]

1. Many attitudes toward drug abuse have changed—in the right direction.

Virtually none has moved in the wrong direction—any significant movement was favorable.

Attitudinal improvement is strongest among college students, followed by adults, children 9-12 and teens.

College students even report declines in cocaine use.

Evidenced by:

Greater fear of risks.

Less susceptibility to peer pressure to use (critical factor in pre-teen use).

Drugs seen as less glamorous.

Poorer image of users and better image of non-users.

2. There is very strong evidence that the advertising is playing a major role in these changes.

Varying levels of local support gave us a "natural experiment." Opportunity for exposure to the advertising ranged from very high to very low.

Eleven ADI's (13.73% U.S. population) received, on average, 50 percent more exposures than Balance U.S. (There was variation in weight within the high level markets as well as in the Balance U.S.)

People residing in the high level markets did report greater awareness and frequency of seeing the advertising. (This is important because the weight levels reported by the media services are subject to approximately 25% margin of error.)

In most instances of different levels of change between the heavy-up markets and the Balance U.S., the high level markets showed greater improvement.

REV. J. ISAIAH GOODMAN, D.D., PASTOR OF FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH OF ENGLEWOOD, NJ, CELEBRATES 40TH YEAR

● Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute to Rev. J. Isaiah Goodman, D.D., pastor of the First Baptist Church of Englewood, NJ. On September 25, the reverend's congregation, family, and friends will gather to honor him.

For 40 years, Reverend Goodman has devoted his life to his church and service to others. Through his ministry he has touched the lives of many and contributed in an outstanding way to the community of Englewood, to Bergen County, and to the State of New Jersey.

Mr. President, I am pleased to honor Reverend Goodman. I extend my warmest wishes to recognition of his 40th anniversary, and wish him continued success and happiness for many years to come.●

MAYOR FRED LAGER

● Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I rise to honor a neighbor from Long Island, NY. Fred Lager has been mayor of Atlantic Beach, NY, for the past 26 years. I congratulate him today upon his recent retirement from this post.

Atlantic Beach is a small, peaceful town on the shores of Long Island. Largely a seasonal resort area, this beautiful community consists of a winter population of 1,900 and a summer population of 4,500.

A resident of Atlantic Beach for 35 years, Mayor Lager had been active in community affairs before becoming mayor. Much of his 26-year term he spent fighting to preserve the residential flavor of Atlantic Beach: The town consists mostly of one-family homes or condominiums; its few businesses have small, inobtrusive signs. In 1987, Mayor Lager led a fight which preserved the beach's natural serenity. Because of his hard work, Atlantic Beach is now zoned as a "marine recreation" area. The beaches will now remain the peaceful, quiet haven of Mayor Lager's dreams.

I offer my heartfelt congratulations to Fred Lager on his superb job as mayor of this delightful small town. Now he can relax and enjoy the natural beauty of the community he fought so hard to preserve.●

REGULATION OF GAMING ACTIVITIES ON INDIAN LANDS

● Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, the regulation of gaming activities on Indian lands has been the subject of much controversy. Representatives of States with experience in regulating some forms of gaming activities, such as Nevada and California, have expressed concern over the potential for the infiltration of organized crime or criminal elements in Indian Gaming Activities. The Criminal Division of the U.S. Department of Justice has expressed similar concerns, although as stated in Senator McCAIN's additional views to the committee's report on S. 555, in 15 years of gaming activity on Indian reservations, there has never been one clearly proven case of organized criminal activity.

Recognizing that the extension of State jurisdiction on Indian lands has traditionally been inimical to Indian interests, some have suggested the creation of a Federal regulatory agency to regulate class II and class III gaming activities on Indian lands. Justice Department officials were opposed to this approach, arguing that the expertise to regulate gaming activities and to enforce laws related to gaming could be found in State agencies, and thus that there was no need to duplicate those mechanisms on a Federal level.

It is a long- and well-established principle of Federal-Indian law as expressed in the U.S. Constitution, reflected in Federal statutes, and articulated in decisions of the Supreme Court, that unless authorized by an act of Congress, the jurisdiction of State governments and the application of State laws do not extend to Indian lands. In modern times, even when Congress has enacted laws to allow a limited application of State law on Indian lands, the Congress has required the consent of tribal governments before State jurisdiction can be extended to tribal lands.

In determining what patterns of jurisdiction and regulation should govern the conduct of gaming activities on Indian lands, the committee has sought to preserve the principles which have guided the evolution of Federal-Indian law for over 150 years. In so doing, the committee has attempted to balance the need for sound enforcement of gaming laws and regulations, with the strong Federal interest in preserving the sovereign rights of tribal governments to regulate activities and enforce laws on Indian lands. The committee recognizes and affirms the principle that by virtue of their original tribal sovereignty, tribes reserved certain rights when entering into treaties with the United States, and that today, tribal governments retain all rights that were not expressly relinquished.

Consistent with these principles, the committee has developed a framework for the regulation of gaming activities on Indian lands which provides that in the exercise of its sovereign rights, unless a tribe affirmatively elects to have State laws and State jurisdiction extend to tribal lands, the Congress will not unilaterally impose or allow State jurisdiction on Indian lands for the regulation of Indian gaming activities.

The mechanism for facilitating the unusual relationship in which a tribe might affirmatively seek the extension of State jurisdiction and the application of State laws to activities conducted on Indian land is a tribal-State compact. In no instance, does S. 555 contemplate the extension of State jurisdiction or the application of State laws for any other purpose. Further, it is the committee's intention that to the extent tribal governments elect to relinquish rights in a tribal-State compact that they might have otherwise reserved, the relinquishment of such rights shall be specific to the tribe so making the election, and shall not be construed to extend to other tribes, or as a general abrogation of other reserved rights or of tribal sovereignty.

It is also true that S. 555 does not contemplate and does not provide for the conduct of class III gaming activities on Indian lands in the absence of a tribal-State compact. In adopting this position, the committee has carefully considered the law enforcement concerns of tribal and State governments, as well as those of the Federal Government, and the need to fashion a means by which differing public policies of these respective governmental entities can be accommodated and reconciled. This legislation is intended to provide a means by which tribal and State governments can realize their unique and individual governmental objectives, while at the same time, work together to develop a regulatory and jurisdictional pattern that will foster a consistency and uniformity in the manner in which laws regulating the conduct of gaming activities are applied. S. 555 is intended to expressly preempt the field in the governance of gaming activities on Indian lands.

I urge my colleagues to adopt this important legislation, so that we may bring a final resolution to the much-debated issue of the regulation of the conduct of gaming activities on Indian lands.

ADDITIONAL VIEWS OF SENATOR JOHN MC CAIN

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, this is the fourth consecutive year that I have been involved in the debate regarding the issue of Federal standards and regulations for the conduct of gaming on Indian reservations and lands. It is with great reluctance that I am supporting S. 555 as reported by the committee.

I characterize my support as reluctant because I believe a different and more favorable result for tribes could have been achieved. Unfortunately, tribes never banded together and offered their own gaming proposal. They also never found a consensus for supporting any particular legislative solution. Some would say that tribes were united in calling for no gaming legislation, but such a position ignores the whole debate, and, more importantly, it provides no support to those Members of Congress who have attempted to craft legislation which would be sensitive to tribal concerns. The issue has never been: should there be Federal-regulation of Indian gaming? Four years of continuous debate on Indian gaming should lead even the most casual observer of the legislative process to realize that legislation was inevitable. The focus of debate has always been on what standards and regulations should govern the conduct of gaming on Indian reservations and lands.

As a participant in the debate, I offered S. 1303 the companion to H.R. 2507 as introduced by Congressman UDALL. This bill would have allowed tribes to continue gaming activities that are consistent with current law under Federal regulations and standards, without State intrusion, while ensuring that adequate safeguards and careful monitoring are maintained to prevent criminal activity as called for by States. Unfortunately, I received no more than a handful of letters supporting this measure; only more calls for no legislation. I believe tribes and tribal organizations share part of the burden for the direction that Indian gaming legislation has taken.

As the debate unfolded, it became clear that the interests of the States and of the gaming industry extended far beyond their expressed concern about organized crime. Their true interest was protection of their own games from a new source of economic competition. Never mind the fact that tribes have used gaming revenues, and S. 1303 would have restricted their use, to support tribal governmental functions as well as addressing the health, education, social, and economic needs of their members. Never mind the fact that in 15 years of gaming activity on Indian reservations there has never been one clearly proven case of organized criminal activity. In spite of these and other reasons, the State and gaming industry have always come to the table with the position that what is theirs is theirs and what the tribes have is negotiable.

The debate now focuses on S. 555, as amended. The committe report is clear as to the purpose of tribal/State compacts as called for in section 11(d). I understand Senator EVANS' concerns regarding the potential overextension of the intended scope of the tribal/State compact approach. Toward this end, I believe it is important to again underscore the statement that appears on page 10 of the report: "The Committee does not intend to authorize any wholesale transfer of jurisdiction from a tribe to a state." From time immemorial, tribes have been and will continue to be permanent governmental bodies exercising those basic powers of Government, as do Federal and State governments, to fulfill the needs of their members. Under our constitutional system of Government, the right of tribes to be self-governing and to share in our Federal system must not be diminished.

Finally, some Members of Congress, including myself, have stated that they would rather see tribes involved in other revenue-raising activities. We must ask ourselves, however, if we have provided tribes with sufficient opportunities to generate nongaming revenues and thereby allow tribes to increase their economic self-sufficiency. The answer is a resounding no. We have not done enough. Once this gaming debate is over, I challenge those involved in this debate to devote their energies toward increasing long-term economic development opportunities for Indian tribes.●

CONSUMER FRAUD PROTECTION ACT—S. 2326

● Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my distinguished colleague from Pennsylvania, Senator HEINZ, be added as a cosponsor of S. 2326, the Consumer Fraud Prevention Act.

Senator HEINZ gave an eloquent and insightful statement regarding the problem of consumer fraud on June 28 of this year. At that time, he was to have been added as a cosponsor of my bill. However, due to an oversight on my part, he was not.

I commend the distinguished Senator for his desire to see perpetrators of consumer fraud put out of business, and welcome him as a cosponsor of the Consumer Fraud Prevention Act.●

COASTWEEKS '88

● Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I rise today as a consponsor of Senate Joint Resolution 369 which designates the 3 weeks of September 17 through October 10, 1988, as "Coastweeks '88."

Long Islanders have long prided themselves on the beauty of their beaches. This summer that pride was replaced by dismay and disgust over the tides of garbage washing ashore.

This summer many of New York's beaches were forced to close as waves of medical waste washed ashore leaving the beaches littered with syringes, needles, vials containing contaminated blood, and surgical tubing. Parents bringing their children to the beach no longer fear that their child may step on a shell or sharp stone, instead they fear contamination if their child steps on a syringe or blood vial.

Last month the Senate passed legisation dealing with ocean pollution. But more needs to be done. The purpose of Coastweeks '88 is to bring together all those interested in preserving our oceans and beaches to devise strategies to combat the problem of coastal pollution. Participants expected this year included scientists, fishermen, environmental groups, and interested citizens.

This resolution recognizes the efforts of those brought together at Coastweeks '88 and helps to educate the public in what they can do to clean up our oceans and beaches. I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.●

NATT: AMERICA'S TOWN MEETING

● Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, town and township government is the earliest form of government in these United States. New England towns of the 17th century were the first real local governments on the American continent. We owe many of our present ideas of local self-government to these colonial communities, including the town meeting and election of citizens to individual offices. Township government moved west as the country grew, and today this system of local self-government serves nearly 55 million Americans.

As the Nation prepares to elect a new President and other new national leaders this fall, it seems particularly appropriate to salute this early form of local government, and to welcome the dedicated men and women who meet here in the Nation's Capital to attend "America's Town Meeting," the annual educational conference sponsored by the National Association of Towns and Townships [NATT].

As Members of Congress, we owe a great deal to these local leaders for it is through their efforts that the Federal programs we authorize become reality. They are on the front lines, implementing the programs we create and often bearing the brunt of criticism when things go wrong.

All too often we forget the important role local officials play in effectuating federal policies. As a one-time local official myself, I know how hard they work and how difficult their job can be. I also know that their job is not getting any easier.

Quite the contrary, with fewer dollars and more Federal mandates, the job grows more difficult every year. These local officials, partners of the Federal government, are often volunteers who donate their time and their expertise to help their friends and neighbors. I rise to acknowledge them today and to let them know that we appreciate their dedication and hard work. I want to thank them for their perseverance and for the example they set of democracy in action.

We all have a small town somewhere in our past, somewhere in our hearts. My mother grew up in a small town in Michigan and I recall the many occasions on which she would talk about the beauty, warmth, and camaraderie of small town life. I urge my colleagues to remember the small town in their background and the hard work of its leaders, and to support the efforts of these dedicated Americans as we draft legislation for the future.●

CZECHOSLOVAKIA'S ECOSYSTEM

● Mr. KASTEN. Mr. President, a free economy is essential to the preservation of a healthy environment. Only a society which allows its citizens the right to create and to compete freely can possibly anticipate—and provide for—the needs of the environment into the distant future.

This is made especially clear by the case of Czechoslovakia's ecosystems. Economic stagnation—the result of a repressive, state-directed Communist economy—forced the Government of Czechoslovakia to allow widespread environmental devastation in an attempt to wring subsistence out of the environment.

This attempt is one of many aspects of today's East European political-economic scene described in a three-part series in the Washington Post entitled "Prague '68 to Moscow '88." I ask that the text of these articles be included in the RECORD, and I recommend them to any of my colleagues concerned about the future of reform in the East bloc.

The articles follow:

TWO DECADES LATER, ROLES ARE REVERSED—CRUSHERS OF CHANGE NOW LEAD THE WAY

(By Michael Dobbs)

PRAGUE.—Strolling around this beautiful but melancholy city 20 years after the Soviet invasion, a visitor is struck by an inescapable irony: invaders and invaded have swapped political roles.

When Soviet tanks rumbled through the streets of Prague on the night of Aug. 20-21, 1968, the cause of reform in Eastern Europe was set back for a generation. Two decades later, the economic forces and political ideas that gave birth to the "Prague Spring" are bubbling to the surface once again—not in Prague, but in Moscow.

The People who came to crush Alexander Dubcek's eight-month experiment in "communism with a human face" have now embarked on reforms of their own. The people whose hopes were dashed on that dramatic August night have become politically apathetic and conservative.

The invasion of Czechoslovakia was a watershed for the Soviet Bloc, leading to what Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev refers to derisively as "the era of stagnation." A four-week journey through Eastern Europe two decades after the invasion suggests that another important threshold now looms as a new generation of communist leaders grapples with the poisoned legacy of its predecessors.

Signs of economic failure abound. In Warsaw, lines snake around buildings for basic consumer goods, and black marketeers offer to buy dollars from tourists at four times the official rate. In Prague, the crumbling facades of beautiful baroque palaces are sooty from air pollution, In Budapest, economists worry about how to pay off one of the highest per capita debts in Europe.

Economic strains have undermined the unspoken social contract that kept Eastern Europe politically quiescent through the 1970s. After the invasion of Czechoslovakia, communist regimes sought to boost the living standards of their populations. The quid pro quo was political obedience and no discussion about economic reform.

Conversations with dozens of communist officials, dissidents and ordinary citizens across Eastern Europe reveal a surprising measure of agreement on the need for radical change. The region is entering a period of transition as governments and the public try out new political formulas and wait to see which way the wind is blowing from Moscow.

"The most interesting characteristic of the present situation is that real, unprecedented changes are taking place in the Soviet Union. This could alter the whole framework of Eastern European politics," said Peter Hardi, director of the Hungarian Institute of International Affairs in Budapest.

"For the first time, something is happening at the altar [of communism]. Before, it was just at the back of the church," said Aleksander Paszynski, a Polish journalist who lost his job when martial law was imposed in December 1981 and who now runs a private consulting business.

Paszynski is typical of a generation of East Europeans who have witnessed the blossoming and withering of successive reform movements. In 1956, when Paszynski was 28, Wladyslaw Gomulka proclaimed "the Polish path to socialism." In 1970, Edward Gierek urged Poles to "help me" bring living standards up to Western European levels. In 1980, Stanislaw Kania promised Poles odnowa—renewal.

Today, at the age of 60, Paszynski, the former deputy editor of the influential Polish weekly Polityka, can be forgiven for listening somewhat skeptically to Army Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's calls for a radical "restructuring" of Poland's state-run economy. The only solution now, he and many other East Europeans believe, is to accent that the socialist economic system has failed.

"Reforms of this system have been going on for 32 years—and the system has only been in operation [in Poland] for 40 years. It has been trying to reform itself—unsuccessfully—for the greater part of its existence," Paszynski said.

A similar description of the cycle of reform and counterreform came from Miroslav Pavel, official spokesman for the Czechoslovak government. Attempting to put the Prague Spring into a historical context, he listed the dates of past attempts at economic reform in Czechoslovakia: 1958, 1966-68, 1980-81. All, he noted, had failed.

He insisted that "1968 was not exceptional. It was only exceptional in the way it ended."

There are, indeed, some remarkable similarities between the years leading up to the 1968 Prague Spring in Czechoslovakia and the present period of perestroika, Gorbachev's program of restructuring, in the Soviet Union. Both reform efforts originated in the perception of economic decline by the communist elite. Attempts to liberalize the system of economic management led inexorably to demands for political reform.

By the mid-1960's, many Czechoslovak communists had concluded that their country was falling behind its natural, western competitors. Czechoslovakia, once considered one of the world's 10 leading industrialized countries, was no longer able to compete in western export markets. Blame was placed on a totalitarian system that stifled individual initiative and distorted economic development.

The liberal reforms of 1966-67—a belated response by Czechoslovakia to the 1958-62 thaw initiated by premier Nikita Khrushchev in the Soviet Union—ushered in the 1968 Prague Spring. In neighboring Hungary, a similar process was taking place, Janos Kadar, who helped the Soviets suppress the 1956 Hungarian uprising, coined the conciliatory slogan, "Those who are not against us are with us," and launched his "new economic mechanism" in 1966.0

THE LIMITS OF SOVIET TOLERANCE

The invasion of Czechoslovakia provided a dramatic reminder of the limits of Soviet tolerance. "Reform" became a dirty word in the communist lexicon. In Moscow's view, events had gotten out of control in Czechoslovakia. Measures such as the abolition of press censorship and the formation of independent political clubs threatened the primacy of Communist Party rule.

Something, however, had to be done to keep restive populations quiet. In December 1970, Polish workers rioted along the Baltic coast, causing the demise of the increasingly autocratic Gomulka. Since economic reform had become too risky, the solution communist governments adopted was to buy off the workers.

"They exploited the future," said Vaclav Havel, Czechoslovakia's leading playwright and dissident, arguing that communist governments had looked for quick, short-term solutions instead of reforming an unworkable system.

This exploitation of the future took different forms in different countries, Poland and Hungary racked up huge foreign debts that now have to be paid back. In Czechoslovakia, the country's historically sound technological infrastructure became dilapidated. The Soviet Union exploited its vast natural assets to pay for necessary imports of grain and western technology.

Throughout Eastern Europe, nature was also exploited recklessly, creating the conditions for an ecological crisis today. Factories were allowed to pollute the air and despoil the landscape with few governmental controls.

The only Soviet bloc leader who managed to preserve elements of economic reform during the 1970s was Hungary's Kadar, one of the most skillful politicians in Eastern Europe. Yet even he was forced to retreat in 1973 as a result of Soviet suspicion and domestic political opposition.

"The Czechoslovak events encouraged the conservatives in Hungary," acknowledged Gyorgy Aczel, Hungary's veteran ideologist who was dropped from the ruling Politburo earlier this year. "If you were the manager of a large factory being kept going by government subsidies, you were naturally not very enthusiastic about reforms."

The counterreform period was a time of intellectual conformity, disturbed only by a handful of stubborn dissidents. In Poland, Gierek proclaimed the "ideological and moral unity of the nation." In Romania, Nicolae Ceausescu disguised economic failure behind a facade of jingoistic nationalism. But the political repression was most severe in Czechoslovakia, where half a million reformers were expelled from the Communist Party.

"People in the West think that repression is a matter of bloodshed or going to jail. But it's more complicated than that. You die alive here. In these conditions, it needs almost a heroic endeavour to stay true to yourself and keep freedom alive in your mind," said Zdenek Urbanek, a well-known writer who was one of the original signers of the human rights document, Charter 77.

A POTENTIALLY EXPLOSIVE SITUATION

Twenty years after the invasion of Czechoslovakia, the government of Eastern Europe faces a potentially explosive situation. Living standards have risen sharply over the past two decades, as have popular aspirations to a freer and more abundant life. But the ability of communist regimes to meet these aspirations has declined.

The same factors that enabled communist leaders to postpone reform for a generation are now making it the only way out of an economic impasse. Western credits have been transformed into debts. Raw materials and labor are in short supply across the Soviet bloc, making extensive development impossible. Even nature is beginning to revolt against its predators.

"The Russian soil was able to support the communists for 50 years. It can't put up with them much longer," said Adam Michnik, one of Poland's leading dissident intellectuals. "In Poland in August 1980, it was human beings who went on strike. In the Soviet Union, we are witnessing a strike of inanimate objects."

Concerned about the rape of the environment, the Czechoslovak government last month allocated $1 billion to air-pollution controls in northern Bohemia along the East German border. When some ministers objected to spending so much money on unproductive investments, Prime Minister Lubomir Strougal suggested that they take a helicopter to see for themselves how entire forests were dying.

The mistakes of the 1970s are now openly acknowledged by communist leaders. Hungary's new Communist Party chief, Karoly Grosz, said in an interview in Budapest that too much attention was paid to "finding solutions to everyday problems" and not enough to "analyzing long-term trends."

In an interview in Warsaw, Polish government spokesman Jerzy Urban accused the Gierek government of "concealing the true condition of the economy" at a time when it was already in decline. In Prague, Czechoslovak government spokesman Pavel spoke of the "stagnation in the technical level" of the country's staple exports of machinery and equipment.

Asked why Czechoslovakia could not survive by continuing to export to the relatively unsophisticated Soviet market, he replied, "Even our Soviet customers are insisting on higher quality. The same gas or oil they sell to us, they can also sell to West Germany and Austria. These countries pay them back with goods of higher quality."

The Soviet Union, which once relied on Czechoslovakia for sophisticated technology, recently concluded an agreement with Canada for nuclear reactors. This in turn forced the huge Skoda works at Plzen, which had been supplying reactors to the Soviet Union, to look for new, frequently uneconomic markets in countries such as Syria.

Economic constraints are forcing Soviet bloc countries to get serious about reform. But they also have had the paradoxical effect of making reform more difficult.

"Reforms can mean disruption, pain," said Aczel, Hungary's ideologist, noting that things are likely to get worse before they get better. "But there is no other solution. Either we totally restructure our economies, or we sink to the level of Third World countries."

"There is a certain syndrome at work," said Jerzy Malkowski, spokesman for Polands' Economic Reform Ministry. "When the authorities are strong, they do not see the point of reforming anything. When they are weak, they see the need for reforms, but they are too weak to implement them."

LENIN'S "REVOLUTIONARY SITUATION"

Sitting in the lavish surroundings of a newly opened private restaurant near Warsaw, Polish dissident Michnik pondered Vladimir Lenin's definition of a "revolutionary situation."

"For a revolution to take place," wrote Lenin, the founder of the Soviet state, "it is not enough for the exploited and oppressed masses to realize the impossibility of living in the old way. . . . It is essential that the exploiters should not be able to live and rule in the old way."

"That seems to apply to us," said Michnik, whose calls in the 1970s for the development of a "civil society" provided the ideological inspiration for the now-banned independent trade union Solidarity. "But there's been no revolution. Why?"

The answer, according to Michnik and others, seems to be that both the rulers and the ruled have learned lessons from the past. Once-rigid bureaucracies are devising new strategies for absorbing and defusing popular protest. Revolutionary ardor has been dampened by the failure of past revolts.

"During the '70s, we thought of the communist system as a wall. We tried to remove some bricks in the hope that the entire wall would collapse. Now we discover it's not so much a brick wall as a rubber wall. It keeps moving about," said Jan Litynski who, together with Michnik, was one of the founders of the Polish Workers Defense Committee, known as KOR.

In Poland's case, the new governing formula has included the development of a private sector, massive emigration and a more extensive party and security presence in factories. An estimated half-million Poles have emigrated since the 1981 military crackdown, depriving the country of much of its young talent but effectively decapitating the opposition.

In Czechoslovakia, where living standards are still relatively high, social aspirations have been channeled into private life. Every weekend provides a demonstration of the prevailing national mood as Czechoslovaks desert the cities en masse to head for their private weekend cottages in the countryside.

In Hungary, still the most politically advanced country in Eastern Europe, the Communist Party is about to give up its organizational monopoly. This fall the National Assembly is likely to pass a new law of associations that will allow a limited role for opposition groups within the existing political system.

The era of counterreform that began with the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia has not yet been closed definitively by a similar, epoch-making event. But everywhere in Eastern Europe, there is a palpable sense of change and uncertainty in the air.

"We are in a sort of political no man's land," said Malkowski of Poland's Economic Reform Ministry. "For years, we have been trekking around this area [of reform] without really going inside. We've lived through war, communism, economic centralism, the age of stagnation. Now we are entering a new land, the shape of which is unknown—for governments as well as for society."

THE BIRTH OF A MOVEMENT—CZECH SUPPRESSION SPURRED MOSCOW DISSENT

(By David Remnick)

Moscow, Aug. 21.—At dawn on Aug. 21, 1968, Larisa Bogaraz awoke in her cramped Moscow apartment and tuned in to an underground Czech radio station.

For months, she and human rights activists like her had been listening to the broadcasts from Prague, trying to get the latest word on the great changes happening there. But now the voice was saying that the Prague Spring had been crushed.

Even 20 years later, Bogaraz can still remember that brittle voice on the radio, a woman speaking accented Russian "soft and sad, saying, 'Russian brothers, go away, we haven't asked you to come.' "

Sitting now in her kitchen in Moscow, her face weathered by years of prison, exile and trials, Bogaraz said the invasion by Soviet-led Warsaw Pact troops seemed to end all hopes for change from above. But it also led to an opportunity a spark, for another sort of reformer the Soviet dissident.

"The invasion told us that what we needed was bravery," Bogaraz said. "We needed a bold act, a movement."

For veteran dissidents like Bogaraz, this 20th anniversary of the invasion of Czechoslovakia is a reminder of how far they have come in the Soviet Union. The irony is lost on none of them: Mikhail Gorbachev's comprehensive program to "de-Stalinize" the Soviet Union—his loosening of censorship, his amnesty for hundreds of political and religious prisoners, his reform of the Communist Party, his introduction of market mechanisms into the economy—is reminiscent of nothing less than the programs of both the Prague Spring and Soviet dissidents.

But had it not been for a single "bold act" 20 years ago, the dissident movement may have been slower to start.

For several days after tanks rolled into Prague, there were no outward signs in Moscow of unrest. To the contrary, recalls dissident leader Andrei Sakharov, workers in factories were made to gather at meetings to show their "support" of the invasion. In an interview at his home in Moscow, Sakharov said the invasion was "clearly a shameful act," but the way most Soviets rallied around it was a sadly "typical picture of the way people embraced any action of the Soviet government."

The first sign the Soviet authorities had that not all citizens here would endorse or ignore what had happened in Prague came on Aug. 25, when Bogarez, physicist Pavel Litvinov, art critic Viktor Fainberg and five others headed toward the historic "executioner's place" on Red Square. Leading the way was a young poet, Natalya Gorbanevskaya, pushing her 3-month-old son in a baby carriage. At noon precisely, she reached into the pram and pulled out a Czechoslovak flag and banners reading, "For Your Freedom and Ours" and "Hands Off Czechoslovakia."

According to Gorbanevskaya, who now lives in Paris, plainclothed KGB agents immediately closed in on the demonstration. "As they ran up to us they shouted, 'These are all dirty Jews!' and "Beat the anti-Soviets!' " she said. "We sat quietly and offered no resistance. They tore the banners from our hands and beat Viktor Fainberg in the face until the blood flowed, breaking some of his teeth. Pavel Litvinov was beaten on the face."

Just after the KGB packed the demonstrators into cars and rode off to a police station, a line of black cars sped out of the Kremlin's Spassky Gate. Among the passengers was the deposed Czechoslovak leader and reformer Alexander Dubcek, who had been flown to Moscow in handcuffs on the night of the invasion.

"It would have been wonderful if [Dubcek and the other Czechoslovaks] had seen that demonstration of support for what they had been doing," Sakharov said. "But they didn't. But most important was that somewhere in this country there were some people who were willing to uphold its dignity."

BREZHNEV SQUELCHED HOPE

Ever since the death of Joseph Stalin in 1953, there have been voices of reform in the Soviet Union which have denounced the horrors of that era and have fought—in the words of the Prague Spring—for "socialism with a human face." Nikita Khrushchev's "secret speech" in 1956, which exposed Stalin's crimes, kept alive the idea for many Soviets that real change—somehow, somewhere—was possible.

Vasily Aksyonov, who now lives in Washington, was the leader of the "Young Prose" movement in the 1960s. He and such artists as poet Bella Akhmadulina, novelist Andrei Bitov and sculptor Ernst Neizvestny flourished during the Soviet Union's first attempt at de-Stalinization. "We were still at the time kind of idealistic people," Aksyonov said. "We still believed in socialism."

It was a period when the editor of the literary journal Novy Mir, Alexander Tvardovsky, was able to publish a prison camp novella, "One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich," by a relatively unknown writer named Alexander Solzhenitsyn.

But after Khrushchev hardened his stance and finally lost power to the ultimate apparatchik, Leonid Brezhnev, hope withered. Under Brezhnev, said Aksyonov, "winter was in full swing."

Only the reform movement in Czechoslovakia provided a glimmer of possibility for Soviets who dreamed of a different Soviet Union than that of Stalin and Brezhnev. Litvinov, a dissident whose grandfather had been foreign minister to Stalin, said from his home in New York: "What was going on in Prague was hope that in the Soviet Union some similar changes would take place, that there would be some kind of more enlightened leadership."

But when Warsaw Pact troops crushed the Prague Spring, Aksyonov said, it was a "nervous breakdown for the whole generation" of intellectuals who had waited and worked for a new Soviet Union. "It was absolutely clear that the climate had changed overnight," he said. "The Prague invasion was the end of the Soviet sixties."

Sakharov said that because the reform movement in Czechoslovakia had been so popular, "it disturbed the people in power in the Soviet Union at the time." Brezhnev would not tolerate popular opposition, neither in Moscow nor in Prague.

Only the small, brief protest outside the Kremlin by members of the nascent human rights movement in Moscow prevented reform-minded Soviets from feeling despair. Word of it spread around the capital and beyond within hours.

"The demonstration on Red Square hit us all like a bomb," said Alexander Podrabinek, editor of the year-old underground journal, Express-Khronika, "I was only 15 at the time, but in this country, politics starts early, and I was bowled over. It was the first time that dissidents had agreed to come together and face off against the government. I wanted to meet these people as soon as I could."

While Bogaraz, Litvinov, Gorbanevskaya and the others awaited trial, more voices, petitions, articles in the underground press and telegrams to the leadership protested the use of Soviet force in Czechoslovakia.

The poet Yevgeny Yevtushenko sent Brezhnev a telegram: "I can't sleep. I do not know how to live my life after this. . . . I have many friends in Czechoslovakia and I do not know how I will be able to look them in the eye." Bogaraz's husband, the dissident writer Anatoli Marchenko, sent a message of protest from a prison cell.

In his underground journal, "Political Diary," historian Roy Medvedev quickly published his own essay debunking the Soviet government's contention that the Prague Spring was a western conspiracy. In praising the architects of the Prague Spring, Medvedev wrote: "Today there is only one road that we can take. And that is to try to attain the level of the Czechoslovaks' initiative, to carry on what they began."

Young dissidents read Sakharov's early work, "Progress, Peaceful Coexistence and Intellectual Freedom," and Gorbanevskaya's human rights journal, "The Chronicle of Current Events." Sakharov and two other physicists—Andrei Tverdokhlebov and Valery Chalidze—eventually formed the Moscow Human Rights Committee. Solzhenitsyn, who had said he felt "ashamed" to be Russian when the troops rolled into Prague, became increasingly and directly involved in protest movements.

Activists like Chalidze knew that, as he put it, "We had to expect more cruel authority" because of what had happened in Prague. The Red Square protesters felt such cruel authority almost immediately.

Tatyana Baeva was expelled from her institute. Fainberg and Gorbanevskya were confined in psychiatric hospitals. Vladimir Dremlyuga and Vadim Delone were sentenced to labor camps. Litvinov, Bogaraz and Konstantin Babitsky were given terms of internal exile.

"Now when we think about those days in August, we have to think of them as a hope for the future," Sakharov said the other day. "What happened to the demonstrators was unfortunate. But often what happens is that those who begin a movement are unfortunate, while for history it is a necessary step, a stage that makes it easier to make the next step."

Georgi Smirnov, director of the Marxism-Leninism Institute, caused a sensation here last year when he said that the Kremlin's decision to send troops into Prague "could be one of the subjects we might look at again."

SAME SOVIET RATIONALE

No such reconsideration has taken place. In practice, Gorbachev has said during trips both to Belgrade and Warsaw that the Soviet Union intends, in essence, to avoid a repetition of 1968. While the Kremlin has waged a full-scale attack on Stalin's crimes and Brezhnev's corruption, the rationale for rendering "fraternal assistance" to Czechoslovakia has not changed at all.

On one level, there is a slight willingness to acknowledge a parallel between the reforms under Dubcek and those under Gorbachev. Last year, when Gorbachev was visiting Czechoslovakia, a reporter asked Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennadi Gerasimov what the difference was between Prague Spring and Soviet perestroika, as the current effort at restructuring here is called.

"Nineteen years," Gerasimov said. Asked the same question at a press briefing last week, Gerasimov said: "I will now amend that. The difference is 20 years."

But Gerasimov's remark and other officially sanctioned statements in the press reveal only a slight change from what was published in Pravda 20 years ago.

A commentator for the official news agency Tass blamed western newspapers last week for waging a "propaganda harvest" about the events of 1968. Tass denounced the western press for using such "terrifying terms" as "invasion," "occupation" and "suppression" to describe the "entry" of Warsaw Pact troops into Prague.

While Tass said the Soviet Union is now "reappraising" the Stalin and Brezhnev eras, the "current jubilee" propaganda campaign in the West" ignores the "fact" that the Prague Spring was merely a "coordinated action of antisocialist forces within the country and of western centers of subversion. "Had troops not rescued Prague. Tass said, western forces might have succeeded in tearing "Czechoslovakia away from the socialist camp."

An article in the party weekly, Arguments and Facts, said the Prague Spring was "a situation out of control" and "a real threat to socialism." Therefore, wrote U.S. Yagodsky, assistant director of the Institute of the Economy of the World Socialist System, the other Warsaw Pact countries decided to provide "external aid."

Like others interviewed for this article. Sakharov was outraged when he heard about the current reports in the Soviet press.

"How can they defend it? How?" he said.

Referring to a notorious neo-Stalinist article published in the press here last March, Sakharov said: "This is the sort of thinking that was involved in that article by Nina Andreyeva. [The invasion] was a great shame, and it is too bad these commentators are taking this approach. It's a sign that the Soviet leaders are defending this event, and I think it means we are now living through a very difficult period in perestroika and we find ourselves in danger."

Indeed, Soviet officialdom appeared more than defensive as police and soldiers today shut down a 20th anniversary demonstration in support of the Prague Spring before it ever started. After announcing to the crowd that the rally staged by the "Democratic Union" near Pushkin Square was "illegal," police, KGB officers and Army reservists wearing bulletproof vests began carting a few dozen protesters to police buses.

Police handled the demonstrators forcefully, employing hammerlocks and an occasional blow to the neck. One protester who shouted "Glasnost and perestroika!" from one of the police bus windows was immediately seized and beaten. One police tried to stuff a curtain in his mouth.

The crowd, which had been shouting "Prague! Prague!" suddenly began chanting "Fascists!" at the police.

Why the Soviet leadership finds it necessary to repeat the old formulas about 1968—and even drown out those who see it otherwise—remains a question. Nevertheless, the dissidents from that period see the rise of Gorbachev as a remarkable triumph, one barely imaginable 20 years ago.

"I'm not sure Mr. Gorbachev would appreciate the comparison," Litvinov said. "But he is basically what we had hoped against hope would happen.

Gorbachev is now the dominant figure on the stage of Soviet politics, while the dissidents find themselves in the curious position of having to reevaluate their role. Some, like Sakharov, seem to sense that Gorbachev has enough difficulties from conservative opponents and needs all the support he can get if the "Moscow Spring" is to continue. "Perestroika is already facing a coordinated resistance, and this makes for a very tense situation," he said.

Others, like Alexander Podrabinek, worry that Sakharov is "too close" to the leadership. "We will always need opposition in this country," Podrabinek said. "We should always keep our distance from the government and represent the constant chance for the state to improve."

Dissident or not, there are demonstrations in Moscow and other Soviet cities nearly every week. And for Larissa Bogaraz at least, who spent years in prisons and labor camps so that a "Moscow Spring" might come, the feeling is strange. A few weeks ago, on a day quieter than this one, she said: "I was out on Pushkin Square. There were seven or eight different groups, all demonstrating for one thing or another."

It all struck her as reminiscent of Prague Spring. But she was grateful for one difference: "I don't expect anyone to invade the Soviet Union and stop it all."

Bloc Tests Limits on Another "Spring"—Gorbachev's Plans, Recalling Dubcek's, Put Old Bounds in Doubt

(By Jackson Diehl)

WARSAW.—As the impact of a more reform-minded Kremlin leader ripples across Eastern Europe, the 1968 invasion of Czechoslovakia is beginning to be recognized as the most disastrous blunder by the postwar Soviet leadership.

The move divided the world communist movement, set back the Soviet Bloc's internal development by a generation and left a legacy of orthodoxy that is helping to thwart Mikhail Gorbachev's present, belated drive for modernization.

As Gorbachev pursues reforms similar to those the tanks suppressed in 1968, he is coming under pressure from Soviets and East Europeans to address two key issues that are, to a large extent, the Praque Spring's legacy.

The first is whether the Soviet leadership is now prepared to accept the landmark steps of political democratization included in the canceled program of Alexander Dubcek, or whether such moves are still regarded as "counterrevolutionary."

The second issue is whether Moscow still reserves the right to use force against an ally perceived to be drifting outside its orbit—or whether the "Brezhnev Doctrine" is dead. Gorbachev has allowed East European countries unprecedented freedom to pursue their own policies. Yet neither he nor any other Soviet authority has condemned the 1968 invasion.

If the Praque Spring haunts East European capitals, it is because the resolution of these questions can determine the fate of the bloc under Gorbachev. Although communist leaders in Poland and Hungary have already adopted much of Dubcek's program, they are stalled on the question of pluralism. And while a full embrace of Dubcek's democratic agenda is seen by liberals as a necessary step, no one is sure whether such radical change would fall within the new, post-Brezhnev boundaries of East European sovereignty.

When Gorbachev visited Poland last month, one independent intellectual was permitted to ask him an uncensored question on television. Significantly, the questioner, Catholic editor Marcin Krol, chose to bring up not Poland's Solidarity union movement or another national issue but instead asked Gorbachev to take a position on the Praque Spring and Soviet invasion.

It was equally telling that Gorbachev, the champion of glasnost, or openness, elected not to answer.

A DEBATE RAGES

As the anniversary of the invasion approached, a shrill debate raged in Prague over the relationship between Gorbachev's policies of perestroika—economic and social restructuring—and glasnost and those of the Prague Spring. Dubcek, who for many years has lived quietly in retirement in his home near Bratislava, has insisted in several interviews that Gorbachev's program replicates and vindicates his own.

In contrast, the Czechoslovak Communist Party, controlled by the same conservations that the Soviets installed in 1969, has harshly attacked Dubcek as a "megalomaniac" and stuck to its position that his program, in contrast to that of Gorbachev, was "counterrevolutionary."

In fact, a comparison of Dubcek's chief platform, the "action program" of April 1968, with Gorbachev's "theses" for this summer's Soviet Communist Party conference, published in May, reveals a point-by-point similarity, as well as several crucial differences.

The parallels are so close that it is sometimes difficult to believe that the two documents were written in such different places and times. Still, the seeming departures of Dubcek's program compared to Gorbachev's can be seen as the very factors that made the invasion inevitable.

Both programs aim at dismantling the Stalinist system of central control of the economy and totalitarian domination of political and social life. Using similar language, Dubcek's and Gorbachev's programs condemn bureaucratic, authoritarian practices of the Communist Party and call for a curtailment of its economic and political power.

The economic reform passed by Gorbachev's government last year and that drawn up by the Czechoslovaks in 1968 are virtually indistinguishable, although the Czech measure gave more power to democratically elected workers' councils in factories.

At the same time, both programs call for the reorganization of the party, with democratic procedures, separation of the party from the government and recognition of the legislature as the "supreme" authority in the state. Expansion of public debate and guarantee of individual freedoms are stressed in both platforms.

In several aspects, however, the Dubcek program appears to go further than that of Gorbachev. While the Soviet policy stresses the need for open debate of issues in the press, the Czechoslovak action program also abolished prior censorship and declared that no views, including those of "bourgeois ideology," should be banned.

SECURITY FORCES TARGETED

While the Czechoslovak and Soviet programs contain similar plans to strengthen the independence of courts and public prosecutors and enforce citizens' rights to privacy, the Dubcek plan went on to outline a radical reorganization of state security forces, drastically reducing their resources and responsibility and banning them from domestic spying. It also guaranteed citizens the right to foreign travel.

To some extent, these differences can be seen as ones of degree rather than principle, reflecting Gorbachev's careful political calculation. Some former aides to Dubcek who support the Soviet leader believe that he has learned from the failure to the Prague Spring not to plunge headlong into reform, ignoring the potential opposition. In time, they say, Gorbachev will come to embrace the more radical variants of Dubcek's plan.

Yet in one central aspect, Gorbachev and Dubcek seem to part ways. The Gorbachev plan envisions the party returning to its "Leninist norm," yielding day-to-day authority to the government and legislature but retaining its political monopoly.

In contrast, the underlying idea of Dubcek's program was that the party's rule depends on "the voluntary support of the people."

"The party,'" said the program, "cannot enforce its authority" over society, but must win it "again and again" through open competition and democratic procedures.

This radical principle led Dubcek's party to a series of democratic precepts that have been explicitly ruled out by Gorbachev. The Czechoslovak action program specified, for example, that "state power cannot be monopolized either by a single party or by a coalition of parties" but "must be open to all political organizations of the people." Gorbachev has said the Soviet Union will not have a multiparty system.

SOLIDARITY ANTICIPATED

Under the Prague Spring program, Czechoslovakia would have moved quickly toward independent unions like Poland's Solidarity and other noncommunist social movements, and the party would have been obliged to compete with them under western-style democratic procedures. But Gorbachev's program limits pluralism to movements that are "not at variance with the development of socialist society."

In historical terms, the ways in which Dubcek's program differed from Gorbachev's roughly parallel the factors most cited by Moscow in justifying the invasion. Yet more importantly, the difference on democracy encapsulates the key struggle over reform now under way in Eastern Europe's two most progressive countries, Hungary and Poland.

The freedoms Dubcek promised have now become the key demand of societies weary of failed reforms and economic austerity. In Poland, a governmental plan for economic reform considerably more radical than Dubcek's has failed to gain public support as the rule of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski has refused to allow the legalization of independent movements like Solidarity.

In Hungary, new party leader Karoly Grosz has been confronted with a host of noncommunist movements, ranging from independent unions and student clubs to embryonic political parties, that demand legalization and the right to a place in the political process. Citing Gorbachev, Grosz has declared that while some movements may be tolerated, Hungary will not abandon the communist monopoly on political power.

For now, it appears that Grosz is right, that Gorbachev does not favor the more radical democratic reforms of Dubcek and that his leaders in Eastern Europe back him up on that issue. Yet the question remains of how Gorbachev would respond if a more radical Eastern European leader—another Dubcek—were to come to power and embrace the demands for pluralism.

THE 'BREZHNEV DOCTRINE'

That, in essence, is the second question of the Prague Spring legacy: Is the "Brezhnev Doctrine" alive or dead?

One month after the 1968 invasion, the Soviet party newspaper Pravda spelled out Moscow's right to intervene in Eastern Europe in blunt terms: "Every communist party is responsible not only to its own people but also to all the socialist countries," it said. "The sovereignty of individual socialist countries cannot be counterposed to the interests of world socialism and the world revolutionary movement."

Named the Brezhnev Doctrine in the West after Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev, this principle has shadowed Soviet-East European relations for two decades. Until Gorbachev's rise to power in 1985, no East European leader could embark on a new political or economic policy without nervously awaiting Moscow's reaction. When another major reform movement erupted in Poland in 1980, the Soviet leadership immediately threatened the Polish leadership with military intervention.

In the past two years, Gorbachev's supporters in Eastern Europe have begun to argue that the principle of intervention no longer exists. In a series of speeches and in a joint statement signed with the Yugoslav Communist leadership, Gorbachev has recognized the right of Eastern Bloc countries to pursue "different roads" to socialism and has asserted that Moscow "does not want to dictate to anyone."

After Gorbachev's visit in March, a senior Yugoslav official said that the new leader's policy ruled out any repetition of the 1968 invasion. Similarly, Hungary's Grosz recently told a western interviewer that a Soviet intervention in Eastern Europe was no longer possible.

The wide diversity already existing among Eastern European regimes, some of which openly oppose Gorbachev's reform policies, bears out these claims. Yet neither Gorbachev nor any other Soviet official has suggested that Moscow would allow an Eastern European country to abandon communist party rule or withdraw from the Warsaw Pact.

On the contrary, there is considerable evidence that Moscow's will to control Eastern Europe remains strong. Under Gorbachev's leadership, the Warsaw Pact was extended for 30 years in 1985 without any visible modification in its terms. Soviet economic demands on Eastern Europe through the trade organization Comecon have intensified under Gorbachev's leadership.

Perhaps most significantly, Gorbachev and other senior Soviet leaders have yet to condemn or even express regret over the invasion of Czechoslovakia. Gorbachev's one recorded statement on the subject, made during a visit to Prague in 1987, even appeared to support the orthodox line. The people of Czechoslovakia, he said, "courageously thought over what happened. You went through a stern school. You drew good conclusions."

Many East European politicians doubt that the Soviet leader will stick to that position. In the long run, they say, the invasion must be recognized as an error, and Dubcek's program, if not his person, rehabilitated. That it has not happened until now, they say, suggests both Gorbachev's wish to avoid conflict with Prague's present, hardline leaders and his cautious approach to encouraging change in Eastern Europe.

It may also be that the Soviet leader has not yet formulated an answer to the questions the Prague Spring raises. If not, the pace of events in the region suggests that he will soon be forced to take a stand.●

AGENT ORANGE AND THE DOUBLE STANDARD

● Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, last week the administration re-released with great fanfare the results of a pilot study conducted by the Centers for Disease Control [CDC] as part of an effort to determine whether or not it was possible to conduct their version of a large-scale, records-based study of the effects of agent orange on Army ground troops in Vietnam. The announcement of the pilot study results 1 year after they became final is, to say the least, ironic, for they were already released and reviewed 1 year ago. The administration's attempt to call these results news is a curious one.

The CDC's pilot study was originally designed and conducted to test the validity of CDC's military records-based method for identifying Army veterans exposed to agent orange. The larger study, called the Agent Orange Exposure Study, was mandated in Public Law 96-151 as one of the several major studies to determine the health effects of exposure to agent orange on American ground troops in Vietnam.

In July and September of 1987, when the pilot study results were initially released, CDC said the results confirmed CDC's 1985 and 1986 pronouncements that a valid ground troop study based on military records could not be done. When the same results were released last week, just days before an expected vote on agent orange compensation legislation, CDC had a new claim—that the pilot study shows that very few ground troops were significantly exposed to agent orange.

It is a very bold move for CDC to draw such broad conclusions from such a limited study—a pilot study within a larger study that was abandoned due to inadequate design and a lack of subjects. It is bad logic, which, if followed, would lead to bad policy.

I spoke several months ago about the theory of eternal recurrence with respect to the agent orange issue. Because the administration continues to play its role in this theory, it appears that I must continue to play mine. I will repeat my most recent comments on the CDC pilot study that were part of my testimony for the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee hearing on agent orange on May 12, when the CDC story was already old news:

> As a prime sponsor of legislation [PL 96-151] mandating [the CDC Agent Orange Exposure Study], I continue to be amazed at the way it has been handled . . . . my strongest frustration regarding this study is that CDC and others have insisted on drawing conclusions about Agent Orange exposure from a study that was never actually conducted. The CDC "hit model" used to identify exposure was recognized by CDC as flawed . . . . When they found "normal" dioxin levels in these veterans, they concluded that a valid ground troop study could not be conducted and that the blood tests proved that ground troops weren't exposed to Agent Orange to any substantial degree. Since the 665 veterans were identified by the flawed hit model, the only thing that could be "proved" by the blood tests was that the original method for identifying exposure was faulty . . . .

It would also be instructive to note comments on this topic made by scientists and veterans' organizations over the last year.

In the March 18, 1988, issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Peter Kahn and his associates challenged the CDC claim that a valid ground troop study cannot be done and concluded that the CDC "hit model" tended to misclassify exposure. Dr. Kahn, a Rutgers University biochemist, has been quoted as saying the "hit model" is "as full of holes as Swiss cheese."

At the May 12, 1988, Senate hearing, the Disabled American Veterans [DAV] testimony described the CDC developments this way:

> Frankly, Mr. Chairman, we view CDC's decision to totally abort their study incredulous and simply an acknowledgment that their preferred method of conducting such research was not felt feasible . . . . Suffice it to say the best interests of the government and, more importantly, Vietnam veterans have not as yet been served . . . . [Veterans] wait for some degree of assurance that the government is really doing something to address their concerns in an honest, forthright and meaningful fashion. Many feel this is not occurring . . . . Clearly, to expect veterans to wait until a large scale epidemiological study and/or long term research is completed is not a realistic response. We view the current process to be slow, tedious and totally inadequate.

The American Legion testimony echoed the DAV's and my concerns:

> We are troubled by CDC's conclusion for several reasons. . . . [A]bout twenty months ago, The American Legion expressed concern about the fact that the Agent Orange study . . . had become moored in major administrative and methodological problems that had forced the study to a standstill. . . . It was no surplus to us then, that after conducting a pilot study of its own design, CDE has concluded that the study cannot be done. We also voiced concern about the composition of the study population almost two years ago. Among the veterans eliminated from consideration were those who served more than one tour in Vietnam, those who served in a particular unit for less than 180 days, these who were above the rank of E-5, those who transferred from one unit to another during their tour, and any veteran who served any number of days before or after the proposed study window (January 1967-December 1968). These constraints may appear trivial to some, but they eliminated thousands of veterans, many of whom were no doubt heavily exposed to Agent Orange. In fact, it is reported that 83 percent of the original study subjects were disqualified based on criteria set forth by CDC.

The exclusion of such a large proportion of the original study subjects was a major issue at the July 17, 1986 oversight hearing, which Representative BOB EDGAR and I cochaired, of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee. At that time, the CDC study was already plagued by lengthy delays, unapproved protocol changes, and administrative problems.

Mr. Richard Christian, who was the head of the U.S. Army-Joint Services Environmental Support Group charged with providing CDC with study subjects, testified that he agreed with me and many others who were concerned that the CDC method for identifying exposed veterans for the ground troop study was flawed. Mr. Christian explained that he felt a valid study could have been done if CDC had not put such stringent restrictions on the veterans who could be included in the study.

So, the CDC decision that a ground troop study could not be done comes as little surprise to most of us. We have known for years that the study design was not going to work, and many have questioned whether or not CDC even wanted to do the study. Nine years and tens of millions of dollars later, we have nothing to show for our efforts.

What does come as a surprise is that CDC would attempt to characterize this information as news. The results published in last week's Journal of the American Medical Association are over 1 year old, and they have been rehashed several times since then. There is very little to be gained by dwelling on the CDC failure.

The news of CDC's results is especially frustrating in light of the fact that important new work—studies that have actually been conducted—is being completed all the time. The recent release of three new studies, one on non-Hodgkin's lymphoma and two on soft-tissue sarcoma, is much more worthy of our attention, though you will not see these studies cited in administration press releases.

First, Dr. Sheila Hoar Zahm and her associates at the National Cancer Institute have completed a study of Nebraska farmers exposed to 2,4-D, a primary component of agent orange, that replicates their earlier work in Kansas. I ask that an abstract of the Zahm study be printed in the RECORD following my statement. Dr. Zahm found a threefold increase in non-Hodgkin's lymphoma among Nebraska farmers exposed to 2,4-D more than 20 days per year.

Second, a mortality study of Massachusetts veterans by Michael Kogan, M.A., and Richard Clapp. M.P.H., found a statistically significant increase in soft-tissue sarcoma among these veterans. This study, published in the International Journal of Epidemiology, was discussed by Senator Kerry and printed in the August 11, 1988 Record beginning on page S11717.

Finally, in the August 1, 1988 issue of Cancer, Dr. Lennert Hardell and Dr. Mikael Eriksson of the University of Umea in Sweden conducted a study that confirms findings in earlier Swedish studies that found increased risks for soft-tissue sarcoma among workers exposed to phenoxyacetic acids, including 2,4-D and dioxin-laced 2,4,5-T, the primary ingredients in agent orange. The latest Hardell-Eriksson study, which adjusted for limitations in the earlier Swedish studies, detected a threefold increase in soft-tissue sarcoma for exposed workers. I ask that a copy of this study also be printed in the Record.

In conclusion, Mr. President, I think it is important that all my colleagues be presented with all the facts on the potential health effects of agent orange exposure. While the Centers for Disease Control may not be able to find the veterans who were exposed to agent orange, they do exist. Furthermore, they and occupationally exposed workers are being studied, and scientific evidence is increasingly suggestive of the relationship between exposure to these toxic agents and negative health effects.

The studies are not yet definitive, but they are suggestive. In my view, the evidence, at the very least, meets the reasonable doubt compensation standard we have always used to determine whether or not to provide veterans' disability compensation. The research must continue, for we need to pursue clearer answers. In the meantime, we, as policymakers, must decide how to respond to the legitimate concerns of the disabled veterans who turn to their Government for help. I believe it is time for us to give it to them.

A Case-Control Study of Non-Hodgkin's Lymphoma and Agricultural Factors in Eastern Nebraska

(By S. Hoar Zahm (National Cancer Institute, Bethesda, MD 20892), D.D. Weisenburger, P.A. Babbitt, R.C. Saal, K.P. Cantor, and A. Blair)

A recent study conducted in Kansas reported a six-fold excess risk of non-Hodgkin's lymphoma (NHL) among farmers exposed to agricultural herbicides 20 or more days per year. To further investigate the association between NHL and agricultural factors, a population-based case-control study was conducted in Eastern Nebraska. Telephone interviews were conducted with 385 (201 men, 184 women) histologically confirmed NHL cases and 1432 (725 men, 707 women) controls. Among men, use of the herbicide 2,4-D was associated with a nonsignificant 50% increased risk of NHL (OR=1.5, 95% CI=0.9,2.4). Exposure to 2,4-D more than 20 days/year increased risk 3-fold (OR=3.3; 95% CI=0.5,22.1). Use of the herbicide 2,4,5-T had an OR of 1.5 (95% CI=0.7,3.2). Risk among atrazine users (OR=1.4; 95% CI=0.8, 2.2) increased with duration with ORS of 0.9, 0.8, 2.0, and 2.0 for use of 1-5, 6-15,16-20, and 21+ years, respectively. Several classes of insecticides were associated with increased risk: chlorinated hydrocarbons (OR=1.4; 95% CI=0.8,2.3), carbamates (OR=1.8; 95% CI=1.0,3.2), and organophosphates (OR=1.9; 95% CI=1.1,3.1). Specific insecticides associated with significant excess NHL included chlordane (OR=2.1), diazinon (OR=2.0), dyfonate (OR=2.4), and malathion (OR=2.2). Risk rose with increasing duration of use of lindane and sevin. Multiple exposures will be evaluated.

The Association Between Soft Tissue Sarcomas and Exposure to Phenoxyacetic Acids—A New Case-Referent Study

(By Lennart Hardell, M.D., Ph.D., and Mikael Eriksson, M.D.)

A case-referent study on soft tissue sarcomas (STS) was conducted, to see if previous findings regarding an association between exposure to phenoxyacetic acids or chlorophenols and this tumor type could be reproduced. Fifty-five male STS patients were thereby compared with 220 living and 110 dead population-based referents. Furthermore, another referent group consisting of 190 patients with another type of malignant disease was used in order to evaluate any influence of recall bias on the results. To obtain information about exposure to the studied chemicals, as well as about any other exposures that might be of interest, questionnaires were used, and if necessary these were completed over the phone by an interviewer who had no information regarding case-referent status. All analysis and interpretation of exposure data were done in a blinded manner. Exposure to phenoxyacetic acids gave a roughly three-fold increased risk for STS, thereby confirming previous findings, whereas exposure to chlorophenols was not associated with STS in this study.—Cancer 62:652-656, 1988.

Previous studies have indicated an association between exposure to phenoxyacetic acids or chlorophenols and soft tissue sarcomas (STS).[1,2] Regarding phenoxyacetic acids this finding has been supported in some other studies,[3-9] whereas other studies have been negative.[10-14] In a study from the state of Washington (U.S.),[15] an association was found in a subgroup of persons with Scandinavian names, whereas no significantly increased risk was found in the total material. In a newly published case-referent investigation from Kansas (U.S.), Hoar et al.[16] did not find any association between phenoxyacetic acids and STS, whereas an increased risk was found for malignant lymphoma of the non-Hodgkin's type. In that study, phenoxyacetic acid exposure was essentially synonymous with exposure to 2,4-D since little or no 2,4,5-T had been used in the study area.

Since the epidemiologic findings are conflicting it was of interest to see if we could reproduce our earlier findings. Different types of bias, which may occur in case-referent studies, have been suggested to have influenced our results.[12,17] In order to further evaluate these aspects, the methods were somewhat modified in this new study.

MATERIALS AND METHODS

Cases

All male patients, aged 25 to 80 years with STS who had been diagnosed during 1978 to 1983 and reported to the Regional Cancer Registry in Umea, Sweden encompassing the three most northern counties in Sweden, were included in the study. Only patients with the diagnoses based upon histopathologic examination were included. Of the 55 patients fulfilling these criteria, 18 were alive and 37 were dead when the study started. The investigation comprised all localizations of STS (Table 1). No reexamination of the histopathologic specimens was done for this study. In most cases the diagnosis was conclusive according to the histopathologic report, but in eight cases the tumor was classified as probably STS but another malignancy could not be excluded. The distribution of different histopathologic subtypes of STS is given in Table 2.

Referents

Two different population-based referent groups were used. The first group consisted of four living male referents to every case, both alive and dead, matched upon age and living in the same country as the case at the time of diagnosis. The second group consisted of two dead male referents to every case, both alive and dead. The same matching criteria were used, and they had all died during the period of diagnosis, i.e., 1978 to 1983.

To obtain a referent group consisting of cancer patients, 190 referents with another type of malignant disease were drawn at random from the Regional Cancer Registry. Malignant lymphomas and nasopharyngeal carcinomas were excluded since earlier studies have indicated an association between these tumor types and exposure to the studied phenoxyacetic acids or their related chlorophenols.[18, 19] The cancer referents were diagnosed during the same time period as the STS cases and were of the same age group. At the time of the study 112 were alive and 78 dead. The various cancer diagnosis are presented in Table 3.

Assessment of Exposure

All living persons in the study and next-of-kin for dead persons received a questionnaire by mail. Information was obtained regarding all jobs for the study person, exposure to various agents during work or leisure time, smoking habits, etc. For many different types of work, specific questions about exposure to a variety of chemicals were included. Incomplete or industrial information was completed over the phone. The interviewer had no information if it was a case or a referent. All subjects who had been working in forestry, agriculture, horticulture, carpentry or in saw mills for some period since 1948, when phenoxyacetic acids and chlorophenols were introduced in Sweden, were phoned and interviewed about exposures regardless of their statements in these respects in the questionnaire.

It has been suggested that the reporting of exposure to phenoxyacetic acids could have been biased by knowing the name of one of the researchers (L.H.) whose name has been connected to research about these substances in Sweden. Of the 220 living population referents 110 received an envelope for the return of the questionnaire addressed to L.H., whereas the other 50% (110) received an envelope addressed to a statistical research bureau independent of the Department of Oncology. These two groups were analyzed separately.

The questionnaires with added information from the interviewer were analyzed in a blinded manner. Thus, the names, ages, personal identification numbers, addresses, and information about diseases and hospital visits were removed from the questionnaires, as well as any other information regarding the status of case or referent. After interpretation of the data the case or referent status was disclosed through a coding system.

Regarding exposure to phenoxyacetic acids and chlorophenols a minimum time of one day was required. Exposure less than 5 years before the diagnosis (for referents diagnosis of the respective case) was excluded because of the induction-latency period for solid tumors. For exposure to other agents no such criteria were used.

Statistical Methods

The statistical analyses of the data were based on the Mantel-Haenszel procedures for the calculation of P values and for the estimation of overall rate ratio.[20] The 95% approximative (test-based) confidence intervals were calculated according to the principles outlined by Miettinen.[21]

RESULTS

Of all subjects in the study 5.4% refused to answer the questions. Fifty-four of 55 cases (i.e., patients with STS) answered. In the group of living population referents 12 of 220 (5.5%) did not answer whereas the corresponding figures for dead population referents were seven of 110 (6.4%). Of cancer referents no reply was obtained for 11 of 190 (5.8%) subjects; 6.4% for living and 5.4% for deceased cancer referents.

Exposure to various agents is presented in Table 4.

Exposure to phenoxyacetic acids was reported by 16.7% of the cases, exactly the same frequency among alive as well as dead cases. Of the living population referents with return envelopes addressed to L.H., 8.5% reported exposure whereas 8.8% were exposed in the living population referent group with return envelopes addressed to the Statistical Research Bureau. Thus there was no difference in this regard, so these two groups were lumped together in the further analyses. Of dead referents 3.9% were exposed to phenoxyacetic acids. In the whole population referent group 7.1% were exposed to phenoxyacetic acids, which is consistent with findings in our earlier studies in the region. In the cancer referent group 5.8% of the living and 8.5% of the dead persons, 7.8% in total, were exposed.

Exposure to phenoxyacetic acids gave a rate ratio (point estimate) of 3.3 ($P = 0.018$, CI95 = 1.4-8.1) when compared to all population referents, and when stratified for age and vital status (Table 5). If the eight cases with uncertain STS diagnosis were excluded the rate ratio was 4.1 ($P = 0.005$; CI95 = 1.7-10.0) as presented in Table 6. If these eight cases with their corresponding referents were all excluded the rate ratio was 3.7 ($P = 0.012$; CI95 = 1.5-9.1).

Regarding exposure to chlorophenols, no difference was found between cases and referents.

Exposure for dichloro-diphenyl-trichloroethane (DDT) was found in 11.1% of STS cases compared to 6.1% in population-based referents and 4.5% in cancer referents. This difference, however, was explained by joint exposure to phenoxyacetic acids. If persons exposed to both DDT and phenoxyacetic acids were excluded no differences were found, as show in Table 4.

For various other agents, as presented in Table 4, no statistically significant differences were found between cases and referents. The questionnaire asked for all types of pesticide exposure. In addition to those presented in Table 4 a number of different pesticides were mentioned, but the number of any type was low, and constituted no increased risk for STS.

Regarding smoking habits few differences were found between STS cases, population referents, and cancer referents. Dead STS cases as well as cancer referents had more frequently stopped smoking than dead population-based referents. This can be explained by the clinically well-known fact that persons who get a cancer diagnosis tend to stop smoking.

DISCUSSION

This investigation confirms our previous findings of an association between exposure to phenoxyacetic acids and STS. The median latency period was 21 years. Due to the low number of exposed subjects a dose-response calculation was not meaningful.

The study design was methodically somewhat changed. In addition to population-based referents, cancer referents were used to evaluate the possibility of recall bias due to having a malignant disease. Since the risk ratio decreased when cancer referents were used some recall bias could not be excluded, but there was still an association between exposure to phenoxyacetic acids and STS regardless of which referent group was used. Another explanation of the risk ratio reduction might be a general carcinogenic effect by phenoxyacetic acids. These pesticides can be contaminated by dibenzodioxins and dibenzofurans, some of which are highly toxic substances. The isomere 2,3,7,8-TCDD, a potent tumor promoter,[22,23] is a contaminant of the phenoxyacetic acid 2,4,5-T.

The interviews and interpretation of the questionnaires were done in a blinded manner, as to prevent the possibility of observational bias.

Some studies [10,12,14] have not shown an increased risk for STS when exposure to phenoxyacetic acids was defined as the job categories agriculture and foresty, i.e., occupations with possible exposure to these pesticides. In this study, as well as in our previous ones, neither could we find any statistically significant association between exposure defined in this way and STS.

Exposure to the dioxin 2,3,7,8-TCDD, as occurring in 2,4,5-T and trichlorophenols, gave a crude rate ratio of 3.5 when population-based referents were used, and 3.1 with cancer referents, i.e., it was somewhat higher than when calculations were made upon phenoxyacetic acids.

Regarding chlorophenols no increased risk was found in this study, in contrast to our previous findings. The number of subjects exposed to chlorophenols in this study was low, however, so this could be explained by random variation.

No differences in exposure to various other pesticides were found between cases and referents.

In summary this investigation confirmed our previous findings regarding the association between exposure to phenoxyacetic acids and development of STS. This association could not be explained by observational or recall bias. Since all of the STS cases and most of the referents were exposed to phenoxyacetic acids combinations including 2,4,5-T it was not possible to evaluate if the increased risk was attributed to the phenoxyacetic acids as such or to contaminants such as 2,3,7,8-TCDD. For chlorophenols, no increased risk was demonstrated, but this could be due to random variation since the exposed subjects were few.

"MA" LINEHAN AND THE HAM AND BEAN SUPPER

● Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I rise today in honor of a great tradition in my home State which we will be celebrating once again this week. For over 40 years, Watertown, MA, has been home to one of the greatest political traditions in a State that cherishes its politics as much as its sports: the Ham and Bean Supper.

Through the years countless politicians seeking a hand to shake and a vote to solicit have attended this biennial rite of passage. From Tip O'Neill to Mike Dukakis, they have all walked through the Hibernian Hall, between the tables and up to the microphone, to give speeches and offer themselves to the electorate.

Perhaps the most noteworthy element of this tradition is in its establishment. When Franklin Roosevelt was President of this country, a young woman named Ellen Linehan left County Cork, Ireland, to settle in Watertown. Over the next 60 years, "Ma" Linehan became a fixture in Watertown Democratic politics. She was the first woman appointed to the Watertown Housing Authority, established the Watertown Democratic Womens Club, and served as a delegate to countless State conventions. Through these efforts, and so many others, "Ma" Linehan became the matriarch of Watertown Democratic politics earning the moniker of "Mrs. Democrat."

Therefore, it was only natural that "Ma" Linehan established the Ham and Bean Supper. It was a match made in heaven. Every fall of an election year for the past 40 years, hundreds of Watertown residents and their families have come to the Hibernian Hall to have a plate of ham and beans, as they listened to those who sought their support.

But this Saturday for the first time in its rich history, "Ma" Linehan will not be there. Earlier this year at the age of 92, "Ma" Linehan passed away. In her wake she left a legacy of political and community involvement that will be difficult, if not impossible, to replicate. "Ma" gave much to this community and expected it to do the same. All of the hard work and commitment inspired respect for her and every effort she led. That respect was never more evident than every 2 years at the Ham and Bean Supper. Senators, Congressmen, and Governors alike, to the faithful voters of Watertown all thronged to this event to offer their opinions, ideas, and promises for the future.

So this Saturday, as the Watertown faithful gather once again at the Hibernian Hall to pay $2 for all the ham and beans they can eat, as well as all the speeches they can listen to, a tip of the hat goes to the memory of "Ma" Linehan. For "Ma" represented the very best that this country has to offer. And in 1988, a very important year for each and everyone of us, we should all try a little harder to emulate "Ma" Linehan for everything she so proudly represented and worked so hard to give to others.●

THE PROBLEM OF YOUTH GANGS

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, the Chicago Defender recently had an editorial on a measure that Senator BRADLEY and I have introduced relative to youth gangs. My interest is sparked obviously, because of the problem we have in Chicago, IL. Though frankly, it is a problem we also have in Rockford, IL and East St. Louis, IL.

But the problems of Chicago are small compared to the problems of Los Angeles. Chicago has about 12,000 youths and 125 gangs and Los Angeles has about 70,000 gang members. So far this year in Chicago there has been 22 gang related homicides and that is tragic. Last year in Los Angeles there were 387 people killed by gangs.

The editorial has these eloquent words that all Americans should heed:

> It is much better for the individual and society when youngsters shoot basketballs rather than each other; respect law, not imprisoned by it; carve wholesome careers rather than notches on guns; collect awards, degrees, certificates, and the like rather than criminal records; spend time learning beneficial pursuits, not dope distribution and other unsavory activities;

Those words are as eloquent as any I have seen in an editorial for months.

I hope that either the remainder of this session or next year, we can move on this particular measure.

In our cities, which increasingly are the centers of poverty in our Nation, have to become more livable.●

HONORING JOSEPH F. THOMAS

● Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I rise today to honor an old friend and mentor for his lifelong dedication to teaching and coaching and his 40-year commitment to the students of Chaminade High School in Long Island, NY. Joseph F. Thomas recently taught his 40th and final year at Chaminade, bringing to a close the end of an era.

Many students, including myself, came to Chaminade ill-focused and undisciplined, fortunately to encounter the strong influence and guiding hand of Coach Thomas. For me, it was 4 years of running track under Joe. For others, it was on the football team or the basketball team or even in the classroom where the larger than life personality of Coach Joe Thomas impressed itself upon the minds and hearts of us all.

Simply put, Coach Thomas imparted discipline. He taught us by example—patient example. By his willingness to take that bit of extra time, whether to help ease life's pitfalls, to shoreup fledgling confidence, or to review a pass pattern, he consistently demonstrated sincere concern for each youngster. Coach's patience was seldom tried, for he always made clear the point beyond which we could not deviate lest we be made to understand the true meaning of discipline.

Humility, patience, discipline. These traits are the essence—and the enduring example—of a great man I know as Coach. Mr. President, I salute and thank Joseph F. Thomas, educator, coach, mentor, citizen, and friend.●

ADDITIONAL COSPONSOR—S. 2003

● Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, on March 30, 1988, I submitted the name of the distinguished Senator from Maine, Senator COHEN, to be added as a cosponsor to my bill, S. 2003, to assure that farmers and ranchers continue to remain exempt from paying taxes on diesel fuel they use for off-highway purposes. I very much appreciate Senator COHEN's support of that measure and note that the concepts embodied therein have passed the House of Representatives as part of H.R. 4333, the Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988, and are included in the Senate Finance Committee's version of the same.

Unfortunately, however, Senator COHEN's name never appeared in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD indicating his cosponsorship.

Therefore, I ask unanimous consent that the permanent record of March 30, 1988 be changed to reflect that Senator COHEN did become a cosponsor of S. 2003 on that day.●

PLIGHT OF AIDS VICTIM

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, there are few issues that divide our communities as much as the AIDS issue. Across the Nation, families of people with AIDS are the victims not only of physical illness but also of intense hatred, fear, and discrimination.

At the same time, these communities struggle to come to terms with this fear of the unknown and to adjust to the needs of their citizens.

Those struggles are not always pleasant. Much of what an Illinois family has endured in the past 2 years has been painful. Last month, I informed my colleagues about Jason Robertson, a 7-year-old Granite City boy who has an AIDS-related complex through no fault of his own. He is a hemophiliac and received a tainted blood transfusion. A very small, but vocal, minority of the town's residents has fueled the fires of hatred and fear. School board members have searched for the difficult balance between the needs and rights of the child and the needs and rights of the community. There was no road map they could follow.

My office was contacted last month and asked to help the Robertsons. Concerning one aspect of this difficult case, my staff was informed on two separate occasions that Jason had been forced to participate in contact sports. I have since learned that that is not the case, and I want to use this opportunity to correct that error for the RECORD. It is my understanding that at no time was Jason forced to participate in physical education activities, that there is no organized contact sport program at the school and that 7-year-old Jason was to regulate and monitor his own physical activities. If, for example, Jason had told school officials that because of his hemophilia, he should not engage in running laps around the gymnasium or running and playing at recess, school officials indicate that they certainly would have allowed him to sit out during those activities.

Under such a program school officials believe they have done their utmost to provide for Jason's needs and were grossly offended by the allegation that they had "forced Jason to participate in contact sports." I appreciate their concern and apologize for the inaccurate statement.

Regardless of whether the Robertson family returns to Granite City, it is important for people to know of the good things that were done. Ultimately, that experience is critical to our successful handling of this delicate issue.

The district held 17 educational sessions in the evening hours on AIDS. Medical experts were brought in. There was an AIDS Awareness Week. The principal of the elementary school developed a filmstrip presentation for the young children to help educate them about AIDS. And as a result of that education, the children themselves, when Jason was being picketed, picketed on behalf of Jason's right to attend school.

I wish I could have witnessed that. It is a wonderful story.

I continue to hope that this family finds the peace and sense of community they seek. I hope Americans everywhere can learn from the good that has been done by many in the Robertsons' community, as well as from the harm that has come their way.●

WORKERS SPEAKING UP IN A LOT OF LANGUAGES

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, the New York Times on Saturday, August 6, 1988 ran a story entitled "Workers Speaking Up In a Lot of Languages."

It outlines the growing need on the part of American businesses and the growing interest in foreign languages.

Unfortunately, that need is not simply in American businesses it is also in the American Government, and we ought to be doing much more to encourage the development of foreign languages in our country.

I am pleased that there is a growing awareness of the situation but that growth must continue.

We still have the only foreign service in the world where you can get into the foreign service without the knowledge of a foreign language. That clearly has to change.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD this article from the New York Times.

[From the New York Times, Aug. 6, 1988]

WORKERS SPEAKING UP IN A LOT OF LANGUAGES

Donald Creadore, an attorney with a Manhattan law firm, says speaking English is no longer enough.

"The legal market in New York City is such that it has a global reach," said Mr. Creadore, who recently completed a course in Japanese at New York University.

Like Mr. Creadore, many more Americans are learning a second language in the hope that it will benefit their careers, according to the Modern Language Association, a nonprofit organization that conducts triennial surveys of language instruction at American colleges and universities. The most recent survey, completed in 1986, reported slightly more than one million registrations in foreign language course in the United States, an increase of 3.9 percent from 1983.

RISE IN OVERSEAS BUSINESS

The trend has accelerated as a direct result of the surge in American exports and the rewakened interest of business in overseas markets as a result of the dollar's decline, said Patrica Sze, director of marketing at Berlitz International Inc., a subsidiary of Macmillan, Inc.

Berlitz, which offers courses that range in price from $199 to $5,000, said its United States enrollments jumped 27 percent last year but declined to disclose its earnings or revenues. Specialized schools like Berlitz, and cultural organizations that offer courses—like the Japan Society and Deutsches Haus in New York—are not included in the Modern Language Association's survey, making it hard to gauge the full magnitude of the surge in language studies.

Revenues for the specialized schools topped $100 million in the United States last year, said Richard Huarte, executive director of Inlingua, private company that operates 20 schools around the nation and claims to be the second-largest language business after Berlitz. But Mr. Huarte warned that most schools are regional and that any estimate of how their segment of the language business is faring can only be an educated guess.

In some cases, the training is being paid for by companies who deal in foreign markets or need workers for overseas branches. Many American companies recognize that to compete overseas they must have multilingual employees, as many of their foreign competitors do. But in many instances, employees are taking the courses on their own.

For example, Montgomery Mackenzie 3d, an assistant to the New York bureau chief of a Japanese television station based in Tokyo, started taking Japanese lessons at the Bilingual U.S.A. Corporation in order to make his superiors take him more seriously.

"I think it could only improve my usefulness," said Mr. Mackenzie, who frequently meets with Japanese executives.

Mr. Mackenzie has a long way to go—he thinks that, in his first effort to say it was about to rain in Japanese, he told colleagues he was going to jump out the window. But the ambitions that he and thousands of new students share are good news for language schools and the colleges and universities that provide continuing education for adults. Income from language courses is up sharply. New York University, for example, receives about $900,000 in revenues from its courses, which range in price from $280 to $450, compared with $566,000 five years ago.

The Modern Language Association says that the most dramatic increase has been in the interest of American students in Asian language courses. The number of students studying Japanese increased 45.4 percent, to 23,454, from 1983 to 1986, the association said. The number studying Chinese increased 28.2 percent, to 16,891, in the same period.

"I think the trend is overwhelming," said William F. Cipolla, director of N.Y.U.'s foreign language and translation studies program. "There's quite a shift from the traditional European languages to Asian languages."

Interest in the far more widely studied European languages like French and Spanish also increased. The Modern Language Association reported that between 1983 to 1986, the number of people studying Spanish increased 6.5 percent to 411,293, and the number studying French grew 1.9 percent, to 275,328.

The students in Mr. Creadore's N.Y.U. class included teachers, flight attendants and engineers. Some members of the class were scheduled to go to Japan almost immediately for their company. But many could not cite a particular need for the language, only a sense that speaking Japanese would be helpful in the future.

For instance, Jean Busatti, a high school department head who has been teaching for 27 years, said she was considering a career change "into business on the management level." She is already fluent in Spanish, French and Italian, but wants Japanese, too.

"I feel that in the business world today that would be a plus," she said.

Many people who are rushed for time may take a two-week intensive course like N.Y.U.'s class in "survival Japanese." Students learn to speak simple sentences like, "I think this is pretty," but not much more than that, said Miyoko Tum Suden, who teaches Japanese at N.Y.U.

SENDING TEACHERS TO COMPANIES

Because much of the new interest comes from the business world, some schools are adding programs that will send teachers out to company headquarters. Berlitz and the Bilingual Corporation both send instructors to companies to teach small groups of employees.

N.Y.U. says it is considering such a program for fall 1989 that would allow instructors to go to corporate offices and teach on location for an hour a few times a week.

"My gut feeling is that there is a great need," Dr. Cipolla said.

In many cases, the courses not only teach language but business etiquette. For instance, Bilingual's 20-day intensive program in Japanese includes instruction on how to present business cards, when to give invitations and when to bow rather than shake hands.●

BRUCE LEONARD OF NEW MEXICO

● Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise with pleasure today to commend a man whose dedication and hard work have been invaluable assets to my home State of New Mexico. The man I speak of is Dr. Bruce Leonard, an employee of the Indian Health Service. Until recently, we New Mexicans had the good fortune of having Dr. Leonard working for us—as executive director of HealthNet, New Mexico—and we are healthier and happier because of his service.

HealthNet is an innovative, privately funded organization that Bruce and I helped to create some years ago to encourage New Mexicans to lead healthier lifestyles. As overseer of that statewide program of education, encouragement, and support for better health practices by people in our State of all ages, Bruce has enriched the lives of thousands. Indeed, during its first year, HealthNet reached more than 44,000 people in 620 worksites and some 60 communities. This year, with a program that focuses on three key components of good health—better nutrition through "Eat Right New Mexico," physical fitness through "Get Fit New Mexico," and cessation of tobacco use with "Tobacco Free New Mexico"—many thousands more New Mexicans are on their way to sounder minds and bodies.

Some of these people undoubtedly would have made these important lifestyle changes without HealthNet or Bruce Leonard. But many would not. To them, HealthNet and its simple lessons for healthy living are invaluable. And to HealthNet itself, Bruce has been invaluable. His expertise, leadership and energy since its conception have been central to HealthNet's success.

As a commissioned public health service officer on loan from IHS, Bruce brought to HealthNet considerable experience with a national scope. His many writings on topics relating to weight control and community fitness serve as a foundation for HealthNet's philosophy: A healthy life is essential to a productive and satisfying one.

Long before HealthNet became a reality, Bruce was putting his theories and philosophies into practice. One notable example is his involvement with the nationally recognized effort to increase fitness and reduce the high incidence of diabetes among the members of the Zuni Pueblo in New Mexico.

We in New Mexico are truly indebted to Bruce, and it is with mixed feelings that I mark his resignation from HealthNet. Fortunately, the loss to HealthNet is not a loss for New Mexico, as Bruce will be returning to IHS to further service an important part of New Mexico's population, the native American community. I wish him every success with his new challenges and all future endeavors.●

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, there will be no more rollcall votes today.

THE CALENDAR

Mr. BYRD. If the distinguished Senator will indulge me just an additional minute, I wonder if we could do the morning business items that we have ready.

UNITED STATES CODE AMENDMENT

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, there is an item on the calendar, I believe, which is under the rule 14 procedure. If there would be no objection, I would hope that the Chair could proceed with that item at this time without waiting until the morning business is closed, and I make that request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read H.R. 3763 for the second time.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

An act (H.R. 3763) to amend title 28, United States Code relating to foreign sovereign immunity with respect to certain activities of foreign governments, and for other purposes.

Mr. BYRD. I object to any further proceedings at this time on that measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection having been heard, the bill will be placed on the calendar.

SOUTH AFRICA SANCTIONS

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I understand that the Senate has now received from the House of Representatives H.R. 1580, the South Africa sanctions bill. On behalf of Mr. KENNEDY I ask that it be read for the first time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the bill for the first time.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

An act (H.R. 1580) to prohibit investments in and certain other activities with respect to South Africa, and for other purposes.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask that the bill be read the second time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. WALLOP. Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is objection. The bill will remain at the desk pending the second reading on the next legislative day.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I do not want to impose on the distinguished Senator from Illinois further. I thank him for yielding.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

REPORT TO THE SENATE

FACTFINDING VISIT TO SOUTH AFRICA, BOTSWANA, AND MOZAMBIQUE

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, during the August recess, I spent 5 days in South Africa and, also, briefly visited Botswana and Mozambique. I was joined on this trip by Congressman RICHARD LEHMAN of California, a House colleague of above average leadership potential. Our main purpose was to understand the South Africa situation better and to communicate to the leaders the genuine concerns we have for the future of that nation and her people.

A nation of 5 million whites, 25 million blacks, and almost 4 million categorized as Asian or coloured, South Africa is blessed with a marvelous climate and natural beauty, but a people perhaps more deeply divided than in any nation in the community of nations.

Visiting South Arrica is both encouraging and discouraging.

Encouraging, because there are people of good will in all the racial groupings. There are people in that rich nation who understand the critical problems South Africa faces, though their voices do not dominate decisionmaking.

Encouraging because the democratic majority in South Africa want a nonracial society to emerge, and want it to come about peacefully.

Encouraging, because of the industrial and business base of the country, not growing now as it could be, because of failure to confront reality, but a cause for long-term hope, nevertheless. South Africa has the most highly developed industrial complex of any nation on the continent. I add one word of concern: The business community must provide greater leadership. Some remarkable things have happened, but it is also true that timidity is not an unknown quantity in the business community—an understandable timidity, because they could suffer so much at the hands of the government. But they also will have huge losses if reality is not faced. Greater courage by business leaders is both warranted and needed.

Encouraging, because of the willingness of many South African whites to privately assure visitors that apartheid must go, and encouraging because more and more blacks and whites are speaking out publicly.

Encouraging, because educational opportunities at the university level are growing for all South Africans, including black South Africans.

Encouraging, because the religious leaders of South Africa—such as Archbishop Desmond Tutu, Archbishop Dennis Hurley, Rev. Alan Boesak, Prof. Johan Heyns, Rev. Frank Chikane, and Father Smangaliso Mkhatshwa and others increasingly, are speaking out against the injustice of apartheid.

Encouraging, because the trade union movement in South Africa has emerged with black leaders unafraid to call for equal opportunities for all South Africans.

Encouraging, because there is an increasing number of business leaders who understand that the only alternative to peaceful change is violent change.

But, discouraging is the understandable despair and hopelessness of so many blacks, and the understandable fears of so many whites.

Discouraging are the living conditions and educational opportunities of blacks in Soweto Township, Crossroads Township, and Mamelodi Township—the three townships I visited—and the other black townships and homelands I heard about.

Discouraging is the unwillingness of people in key positions in the Government to seize the opportunity to bring justice to South Africa.

Discouraging, because in the year 1988, a nation that prides itself on its Christian-Judeo heritage, still does not permit a single black to vote, not a single black to sit in Parliament, and not a single black to sit in the courts of justice as a judge, in a system that does not provide trial by jury.

Discouraging in that there is greater likelihood of meaningful dialog between the leaders of the South African white community and the real leaders of the South African black community outside of the nation rather than within South Africa.

Discouraging in the reality that South Africa today is an intensely polarized society—far beyond anything we have known in the United States in recent decades—with most whites having no real comprehension of the conditions under which blacks live and no understanding of their hopes and dreams. And, where there is no understanding, that vacuum is filled by fear and hatred.

Discouraging, because a nation that likes to consider itself a Western, civilized nation has a state of emergency that permits detention of people in prison at whim, and suppresses and discourages free expression of news coverage and of opinion.

Discouraging, because South Africa has more political prisoners than almost any nation.

Discouraging, because in addition to an overzealous security force, there exists a group called, by themselves and by the government, vigilantes, with all the power to abuse a system of justice that name implies.

Discouraging, because press freedom is limited. The week I was in South Africa, every copy of Newsweek magazine had Nelson Mandela's picture carefully cut out. How can the publication of Nelson Mandela's picture in Newsweek possibly threaten a government, unless that government fears its people?

And, for my colleagues here, this is the Newsweek magazine. I do not know if you can see it from there, Mr. President. This is the Newsweek magazine with Nelson Mandela's picture carefully cut out of every Newsweek magazine for last week. It is a strange system indeed when you have press censorship.

Those in Pretoria who say that South Africa needs improved public relations are correct, but that improvement will not come with some slick public relations campaign, nor with suppression of the news, nor with suppression of a people. When South Africa changes the substance of its policy, it will change its public image.

South Africa is drifting toward bloodshed that will dwarf the bloodshed of the Iran-Iraq war, that will exceed anything the world has known since World War II, but it can yet be avoided.

South Africa needs courageous government leadership, leadership that looks more to the approval of history than to the immediate approval of the electorate, though such a leader might be surprised to find more support from the electorate than he anticipates. South Africa needs an Anwar Sadat, a leader of uncommon courage and vision. Who that will be, I do not know. Whether such a leader will emerge, I do not know. If, 6 months prior to President Sadat's dramatic moves, someone would have suggested the possibilities of what he might do, few would have believed it possible. I certainly would not have. Can the current President, P.W. Botha, be such a leader? I do not know. Are there others who might emerge? I do not know.

What I do know is that at the present time, South Africa is in a similar situation to the United States before the Civil War, deeply divided on the issues of race. Prior to the Civil War, we had the misfortune of having as our President, James Buchanan, who danced around the edges of the fundamental problem, rather than attacking it. And the Nation paid dearly with the loss of millions of lives for that vacuum of leadership. Today, South Africa has leadership that dances around the edges of the fundamental problem, but does not attack it. Whether history will be repeated, I do not know, but it is clear that disaster is the present course, just as it is equally clear that disaster can be avoided.

No one who has visited South Africa for 5 days can claim expertise—even though we visited a broad spectrum of people.

But no one who has seen what is happening in South Africa, who has even a limited understanding, should remain silent.

There are steps that must be taken—and can be taken—without causing political chaos.

First, the leaders of the Government, together with some other representative white leaders, should meet with the real black leaders of South Africa, to discuss their mutual problems candidly, but, primarily, to jointly select a mediator who could work with both sides to bring about an agreement. In theory, a mediator is not necessary, but the chasm is so deep that divides people today that I doubt agreement can be reached without such a person or persons. Ideally, it could be someone from South Africa, though I have doubts that that is now possible. It might be Henry Kissinger or General Obasanjo or Andrew Young or any number of other possibilities or a team of three designated people. It should be someone who initially shuttles back and forth between the two sides, who gets a good feeling for what is possible and where the two sides might find compromise—and blacks and whites, alike, must understand that both sides must compromise, or both sides will lose and lose tragically.

Then, practical steps must be taken that will build for the future. The first step must include the release of all political prisoners and the freedom for organizations to meet and express their views. This must be accompanied by two essential actions:

First, an immediate cessation of the Population Registration Act and the Group Areas Act that are the bases of apartheid. These are the laws that require all South Africans to register by race, and designate where people can live. Repeal of these laws will not overnight change residential patterns, will not suddenly bring about a dramatically different society. But the repeal of these laws, like the repeal of segregation laws in the United States, will permit greater opportunity for all South Africans, and Second, a strong commitment to protect basic civil liberties for all South Africans, including freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, and freedom of the press; and no arbitrary detention.

South Africa has neighbors from whom she can learn much: one is Botswana. On a scale of 1 to 10 today, with 1 being the most repressive dictatorship and 10 being a high degree of sensitivity to the basic freedoms that should be preserved for people, I would give Botswana a grade of 10. When I was in South Africa, I heard over and over from white South Africans that the blacks cannot govern effectively. Unfortunately, there are too many examples of repressive governments in Africa. But a government that is much less repressive than the administration of South Africa, much more free in every respect, is the Government of Botswana run by black Africans. It is no accident that Botswana has experienced a substantially greater percentage increase in economic growth than has South Africa. Unless there are changes in South Africa, that difference, in both basic freedoms for people and economic growth, will continue to expand.

With those basics in place, South Africans must develop structural changes in the Government that recognize the rich potential of that nation, if the resources and talents of all her people are utilized. The structure might include:

First, a series of steps to give the nation a bicameral legislative body, fashioned somewhat on the U.S. model.

The one house, like our Senate, could be based on geography. It could initially be structured so that whites have a greater voice than their numbers justify, just as some geographical regions in the United States have more voice than others. Alaska with 500,000 people has the same number of Senators as California—and I see the Senator from California on the floor—with 24 million people. As freedom of movement is established in South Africa, inevitably over time there will be shifting patterns in the voting in these geographical units. But whites who have great fears would be assured an initial voice in the government and in the future of South Africa. That voice and contribution are needed. South Africa must become a truly nonracial society with all South Africans fully participating and contributing, if that nation is to achieve her full potential. The second house would be based on population. A new transitional parliament must include blacks in an equitable way.

Second, the judiciary must be opened immediately to qualified nonwhite candidates.

Third, the nation's chief executive should be selected, either by the people in a direct election, or by the two houses of the legislative body.

These are ideas, not a plan. They are suggested simply to help launch the dialog. But the dialog must take place. The political conversation in South Africa must shift from whether apartheid is going to go to how it is going to go.

But the plan must emerge from South Africans themselves, not from a United States Senator or anyone else outside of South Africa.

What is needed in the immediate future—before the government is likely to act—is an informal meeting—without significant government representation because they would decline to participate—somewhere outside of South Africa, with key whites and representatives of the majority of the people.

One person I met in South Africa who commands enough respect to launch such a meeting is Anton Rupert, one of the world's leading businessmen. I am sure there are others. I have not discussed this idea with him, and he will be totally surprised when he learns of this speech. If he were to undertake this successfully, it would be by far the most significant contribution he would make in his illustrious lifetime. But someone must lead. Right now that leadership is not likely to come from the government.

The meeting should last several days. From it should emerge the outline of the kind of government that South Africa might eventually have and what steps should be taken to achieve it. Over time, the outline will be changed substantially, but the plan presented can help shift the dialog to the practical steps that must be taken if South Africa is not going to explode.

Negotiation on those steps must take place between whites who have power and legitimate leaders of the blacks. The question is not whether such negotiations will take place. The only question is whether such dialog will occur before massive violence, or after such senseless slaughter. Let no South African leader fool himself or herself into believing otherwise.

The immediate policy problem we face in the United States is whether sanctions should be tightened. I see no alternative at this time. When and if the Government of South Africa sends strong signals to the international community that change is coming, I will be among the first to request that sanctions be removed. Those signals must include at least two things: First, the start of a meaningful dialog between the Government of South Africa and the significant leaders of that country. At some point, that must include the leadership of the African National Congress. Second, I do not expect apartheid to disappear tomorrow, but I do expect a timetable with a series of specific steps that will be taken to remove this scourge of injustice from South Africa.

Sanctions send a strong, clear signal to the business community that change must come. Two elements changed the laws of segregation in our country: religious leadership and the business community leadership. Then political action followed. In South Africa the religious leadership, and the university leadership, is generally trying to move that nation toward peaceful change and a just society. The businesss community must join that battle more forcefully. I recall the day the Birmingham [AL] Chamber of Commerce adopted a resolution calling for the elimination of segregation in the South. It was like a church bell ringing at midnight. We all sensed something significant had happened. Sanctions send a message to the South African business community in the only effective way possible, and the message is a simple one: We need your leadership.

No one can guarantee that sanctions will work. What we do know is that doing nothing other than occasional pious pronouncements will not work. Wishing injustice away does not remove injustice.

I hope that both political parties in our country can join in taking steps to help remove the plague of injustice in South Africa, just as both parties joined in that effort in the House. The cause of justice should not be a partisan issue. And the cause of justice can best be promoted by encouraging increasingly strengthened sanctions.

For sanctions to be effective, other nations must join in the effort, and I have reason to believe others in the community of nations are seriously considering this. They not only share our concerns of conscience, but some of them could face severe problems if uncontrolled bloodshed erupts. There are, for example, over 500,000 people in South Africa with British passports. The British have much at stake here, both for reasons of heritage, and to avoid potentially large domestic problems.

In my discussion with the South African foreign minister on sanctions, he said that sanctions are wrong because they will destroy South Africa. "South Africa," he is fond of saying, "is like a zebra. You cannot kill only the white parts of the zebra without also killing the black parts." He is partially correct in his zebra analogy. But it is also true that you cannot repress and unfairly subjugate the black parts of South Africa without also repressing and unfairly subjugating the white parts of South Africa. When freedom of expression is limited, it is not simply to those who are black. When a short-sighted policy restricts the contribution that the majority can make, it is the entire economy that suffers.

If there were a fairer, more effective way of sending a signal of disapproval to South Africa, other than sanctions, I would seize it. But those who oppose sanctions have not provided that meaningful alternative.

Do not permit history to make this judgment of us: Too little, too late.

Several business leaders spoke to me of the rich potential of the southern African region, if apartheid can be shaken off the back of South Africa.

They are correct. Post-apartheid South Africa—if that status is achieved peacefully—will experience an unbelievable prosperity. But change is essential, though I would add that it is not only South Africa that must further develop her potential.

On this trip I also visited Botswana and Mozambique. Botswana is a nation that is developing her economy and, at the same time, protecting the liberties of her people. Mozambique faces the problems of brutal atrocities and destabilization caused by Renamo—significantly referred to as "the bandits" by the people of that nation—and in my visits with the leaders in Mozambique, I sensed a strong desire to move that nation ahead, including giving greater voice to the people.

President Chissano, with whom we had a fine visit, appears determined to follow such a course, and the United States and other nations should do all we can to encourage the pursuit of that policy. Faced with governing a country when they had only 40 college graduates in the entire nation at the time of independence, the Mozambican people have struggled to gradually lift themselves. I was impressed with the quality of leaders I met and the potential of that nation. The rigid theories of Marxism are gradually being abandoned, and practicality is replacing theory. I trust that part of the future for Mozambique is a great role of participation for all her people, in freedom.

Our visit with President Masire, of Botswana, and other leaders there, in some ways, was the highlight of the trip. Their remarkably successful leadership is a shining example for recently independent nations everywhere. Botswana is ready for a regional development that can surpass everyone's expectations. Mozambique cannot be called ready yet, but she is preparing herself. Other front-line states are doing likewise.

But the key remains the giant of that area, South Africa. Will government leaders with vision and courage emerge? The people of that region and the people of the world await that answer with great concern but, also, with hope.

Thank you, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROCKEFELLER). The acting majority leader.

ANTI-APARTHEID ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1988

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I appreciate very much the remarks of the distinguished Senator from Illinois, who shares my views and those of many other Americans on apartheid and the abomination that is practiced in South Africa. I think it is great that the Senator made a trip to see firsthand the situation of South Africa, and returns to the Senate with the additional insight that he has shared with us today, strengthening the hands of those of us who are hoping to move legislation, now, that will carry us still further forward in combating apartheid, and make plain to the world our position against it and, we hope, be persuasive, finally and at long last, to those who presently rule South Africa, that changes must come there.

It is for these reasons, for the reasons that the Senator from Illinois has just expressed and for others, that I am today reintroducing South Africa sanctions legislation which closely tracks legislation I introduced last year.

The measures I am advancing today, cosponsored by Senators KENNEDY, WEICKER, SIMON, DODD, ADAMS, and LEVIN, would curb virtually all United States trade with apartheid South Africa and require most United States firms to disinvest from operations in that nation. This bill, which is very similar to the measure which passed the House on August 11, will be considered at a markup of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

It is time for the Senate to move on strong and effective legislation to combat the evil of apartheid. This issue is not new to any Member of the Senate. The House has passed a strong bill designed to penalize those who maintain a monopoly on political and economic power in Pretoria, and to increase the costs of maintaining apartheid. I have put together a similar measure—working with my colleagues Senators KENNEDY, WEICKER, and SIMON—which we will consider in markup in committee tomorrow. In most respects, the Cranston-Kennedy-Weicker-Simon bill is identical to the House passed measure. Minor changes have been made in the provision governing intelligence cooperation, the transshipment of fish products and trade in diamonds whose country of origin is unclear. None of the central features on trade and disinvestment have been changed in any way.

As the Senate prepares to consider this measure, I want to make sure one point is clear on the record. This little secret is that "constructive engagement" lives. Yes, this thoroughly discredited Reagan administration policy remains in place. We have heard from Reagan officials in numerous hearings about why the "trickle down theory" is still South African blacks' best hope for progress toward freedom. We have heard about why we need to maintain economic ties with the apartheid regime, why we need to remain fully engaged in a meaningful dialog with a repugnant government. We have even heard testimony offered—with a straight face—questioning the efficacy of economic sanctions against South Africa. This from the same administration which enforces sanctions against Nicaragua so vigorously that jeeps with baby food are prevented from driving south across the Mexican border, and this from the same administration which has reported in writing that the 1986 Anti-Apartheid Act's sanctions "registered an important message to the white South African community, and have contributed to our efforts to broaden our contacts with black opposition groups."

It is time for us now to take more meaningful action, to put in place some economic penalties that make clear that our Government will no longer tolerate Americans profiting from apartheid.

Last year I introduced S. 556, which calls for disinvestment and strict trade curbs against the apartheid regime in South Africa. I proposed that legislation because I felt the 1986 comprehensive sanctions bill did not go far enough in pressing for an end to the repugnant practice of apartheid. The South African regime has managed to circumvent several provisions of that modest 1986 law by exploiting loopholes. Provisions of the law have suffered because of weak enforcement by the Reagan administration. And other nations have taken advantage of U.S. sanctions because the President has not pursued a multilateral approach to combating apartheid, as Congress recommended in 1986.

In the meantime, South Africa has increased its repression—silencing peaceful dissenters, jailing thousands of young children, imposing a press blackout, and destabilizing other governments in the region. The South African regime has renewed and maintained its state of emergency decree, giving us little reason to hope that progress is in sight. Moreover, South Africa continues to spread the terror beyond its borders, supporting the brutality of Renamo in Mozambique, retaining its illegal control of Namibia, and, the evidence seems clear, attempting to murder its opponents in exile abroad.

Because the press has been so effectively silenced in South Africa, this horror is no longer a regular item on the United States nightly news. Perhaps this lack of information has led some to believe that the fight against apartheid is no longer a priority. But if we fail to focus on South Africa we will, in essence, allow the South African regime to declare victory—their strategy of preventing the news media from fully reporting events there will have worked. We must not let this happen. We have a moral obligation to continue to press for freedom for all South Africans. Under terms of the 1986 legislation, we are now obligated by law to recommend additional steps to curb sharply our economic relations with the South African regime. The bill we passed in 1986 over the President's veto says that—

> It shall be the policy of the United States to impose additional measures against the Government of South Africa if substantial progress has not been made within 12 months of the date of enactment of this act in ending the system of apartheid and establishing a nonracial democracy.

The situation in South Africa has hardly improved. It has, in fact, become far worse. The legislation we are introducing today will take the required next step. This measure will close the loopholes, broaden the scope of the sanctions, and require negotiations with industrialized democracies to ensure a strong, multilateral approach to resisting apartheid in South Africa.

The extent to which we as a nation choose to do business with the racist regime in South Africa boils down to a moral issue. Whose side are we on? How do we demonstrate our support to the forces of democracy in South Africa? These are the issues.

While these are moral issues, there is no question we are dealing with critical strategic interests in southern Africa as well. We must develop a strong relationship with the black leaders who will one day have a strong voice in governing South Africa. We must also find a way to convince the white minority that we will resume normal relations once progress is achieved, and that we will seek to protect their political rights under majority rule. We must make clear our commitment to human rights, democracy, and freedom for all South Africans, black and white.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a summary of my legislation be printed in the RECORD, together with a comparison with the House-passed bill and the full text of the measure we are introducing today.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MAJOR PROVISIONS OF S. 2756

Investment.—Prohibits purchase, acquisition, ownership, or holding of any investment in South Africa, except for: (1) investments in enterprises controlled and at least 90 percent owned by disadvantaged South Africans by apartheid; and (2) investments which individuals are unable to dispose of because of South African laws (ex. emigrant non-resident assets).

Requires U.S. firms to negotiate terms of disinvestment with employee unions or representatives.

Effective 180 days after enactment. One-time, 180 day Presidential waiver. (Sec. 101 (a)).

Exports.—Prohibits the export or re-export to South Africa of any goods or technology subject to U.S. jurisdiction; except for: (1) audio and visual communication media; (2) humanitarian donations; (3) commercial sales of agriculture products; (4) news media equipment and technology; (5) economic or human rights assistance to disadvantaged South Africans; and (6) contributions to certain types of charitable organizations.

Effective 180 days after enactment. (Sec. 101(b)).

Energy.—Prohibits U.S. persons from directly or indirectly transporting crude oil or refined petroleum products to South Africa.

Effective upon enactment.

Prohibits granting of U.S. mineral leases to any U.S. company which has investments in South Africa or exports oil or petroleum products to South Africa.

Effective 180 days after enactment. (Sec. 102(a)).

Nuclear Assistance.—Prohibits the Secretary of Energy from authorizing any person to engage, directly or indirectly, in the production of special nuclear materials in South Africa. (Sec. 103).

Intelligence and Military Cooperation.—Prohibits U.S. Government agencies from cooperating in intelligence gathering with the South African Government except for (1) those activities which are reasonably designed to facilitate the collection of necessary intelligence and (2) information concerning military activities and equipment of Cuban and Soviet military forces in southern Africa.

Prohibits the U.S. Government agencies from providing any intelligence to the South African Government relating directly or indirectly to the South African opposition or other Southern African countries.

Urges President to cut off exchange of military attaches. (Sec. 104).

Sanctions Coordination.—Establishes the position of Coordinator of South Africa Sanctions within the Department of State to coordinate and monitor compliance and enforcement of sanctions.

Establishes the Interagency Coordinating Committee on South Africa composed of the Secretaries of: State, Treasury, Defense, Commerce, Agriculture, the Attorney General, the U.S. Trade Representative to coordinate and monitor implementation of sanctions legislation. (Sec. 105).

Namibia.—Adds granting of independence to Namibia as one of the conditions to be met for the termination of sanctions. (Sec. 106).

Disadvantaged South Africans.—Amends the Foreign Assistance Act to provide for up to $40,000,000 annually in ESF for disadvantaged South Africans; earmarks not less than $4,000,000 of this for refugee education and assistance for South Africans and Namibians.

Effective October 1, 1988. (Sec. 108).

Sense of Congress Regarding Anti-Trust Investigation of South African Diamond Cartel, Study of Diamond Origins, and Enforcement of Prohibition on Importation of South African Diamonds into the United States. (Sec. 109).

Gold Study.—Directs the President to investigate and report to Congress on possible U.S. actions to reduce South Africa's foreign exchange earnings resulting from the sale of gold. (Sec. 110).

Terrorism Report.—Directs the Secretary of State to report to Congress on the extent of South African involvement in international terrorism. (Sec. 111).

Imports.—Prohibits the import of any article grown, produced, extracted, or manufactured in South Africa and any article marketed by a South African parastatal; except for (1) strategic minerals; (2) audio/visual media; and (3) imports from business enterprises owned by victims of apartheid.

Effective 180 days after enactment. (Sec. 201).

Multilateral Measures.—Directs the President to enter into negotiations with other nations to reach cooperative agreements on the imposition of sanctions and to report on these efforts to Congress, and to pursue sanctions similar to those imposed by the U.S. at the U.N.

Effective 180 days after enactment. (Sec. 202 (a)&(b)).

Directs the President to retaliate against foreign firms taking advantage of U.S. sanctions by limiting the import of that firm's product or service or prohibiting U.S. agencies from contracting with that firm.

Effective 180 days after enactment. (Sec. 202 (c)).

CMEA.—Directs the President to prepare a report every 30 days on the average amounts of critical material imported to the United States from member countries and observers of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance. (Sec. 204).

Strategic Mineral Dependency Study.—Directs the President to develop a program to reduce U.S. dependence on strategic minerals from South Africa and to report to Congress thereon. (Sec. 205).

Circumvention.—Directs the President to discuss with the frontline states measures to ensure the non-circumvention of U.S. sanctions legislation. (Sec. 206).

Violence.—Urges the President to: (1) denounce the use of violence by the South African Government and call for the termination of the nationwide state of emergency and the release of political detainees; (2) urge the African National Congress to condemn "necklacing" and to take action to end this practice; (3) state the United States does not condone violence as a political tool. (Sec. 301).

COMPARISON: HOUSE-PASSED BILL AND S. 2756

S. 2756, introduced by Senators CRANSTON, KENNEDY, WEICKER, SIMON, DODD, ADAMS, and LEVIN is identical to the House-passed bill except for the following six areas:

1. LOANS

Under both bills the prohibition on investments in South Africa includes loans. The House bill makes an exemption for a loan agreement entered into before April 20, 1988, as long as the terms of the loan are not changed. (Sec. 101(e)).

The Senate bill contains the same exemption but allows the loans to be rescheduled on an annual basis as long as rescheduling arrangements do not provide new credits or funds to the South African entity. (Sec. 101 (e)).

2. INTELLIGENCE AND MILITARY COOPERATION

The House bill prohibits all intelligence and military cooperation except for the sharing of intelligence on equipment and activities of Cuban and other Communist forces in southern Africa. (Sec. 104).

The Senate bill prohibits only intelligence cooperation, not military cooperation. It retains the exception in the House bill for intelligence-sharing on the activities of communist forces in southern Africa but adds a second exception for activities reasonably designed to facilitate the collection of necessary intelligence. (Sec. 104).

Both bills contain sense of the Congress language urging the President to cut off the exchange of military attaches between the U.S. and South Africa.

3. DIAMONDS

Both bills contain sense of the Congress language directing the President to ensure effective and rigorous enforcement of the prohibition on the importation of South African diamonds into the United States. (Sec. 109 in both).

The Senate bill makes minor changes in the House bill to clarify the language regarding the impact of the enforcement procedures on U.S. importers who unknowingly import South African-origin diamonds. Substantively, the provisions in the House and Senate bills are the same.

4. CONSULATES AND VISAS

The House bill contains sense of the Congress language urging the President to close two of South Africa's consulates, eliminate all honorary consuls, freeze the staffing of South Africa's embassy, and stating that U.S. visas should be granted to South Africans only after scrutinizing the South African Government's record of allowing South Africans, particularly those in anti-apartheid groups, to travel to the United States. (Sec. 111).

This language is deleted from the Senate bill.

5. PARASTATAL EXPORTS

The Senate bill adds language to Sec. 201 of the House bill to ensure that the ban on South African imports into the United States includes articles marketed by a South African parastatal organization. The definition of parastatal in the Senate bill is taken from the 1986 Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act.

6. FISH AND SEAFOOD PRODUCTS

The House bill specifies that the ban on South African imports includes fish or seafood stored in or shipped from South Africa. (Sec. 201). The Senate bill deletes this language.

TITLE I—SANCTIONS AGAINST INVESTMENT IN, AND EXPORTS TO, SOUTH AFRICA AND OTHER MEASURES (EXCEPT IMPORT RESTRICTIONS) TO END APARTHEID

SEC. 101. PROHIBITIONS ON INVESTMENT IN, AND EXPORTS TO, SOUTH AFRICA.

(a) PROHIBITIONS ON INVESTMENT.—Effective 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, section 301 of the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986 (hereafter in this Act referred to as the "Act") is amended to read as follows:

"PROHIBITION ON INVESTMENT IN SOUTH AFRICA

"SEC. 301. (a) Subject to subsections (b) and (c), a United States person may not purchase, acquire, own, or hold any investment in South Africa.

"(b) The prohibition under subsection (a) shall not apply to any investment in a business enterprise owned and controlled by South Africans economically and politically disadvantaged by apartheid where after the investment such business enterprise is not less than 90 percent owned by, and is under the control of, South Africans economically and politically disadvantaged by apartheid.

"(c)(1) Notwithstanding subsection (a), any individual described in paragraph (2), may continue to own and hold investments in South Africa during any period and to the extent that such investments are considered South African emigrant non-resident assets and subject to restrictions on their transfer or disposition under the exchange control regulations of the Government of South Africa (promulgated pursuant to the Currency and Exchange Act of 1933 and as in effect on June 2, 1988) which limit the ability of such an individual to comply with such prohibitions under subsection (a).

"(2) An individual, for purposes of paragraph (1), is an individual who, on the date of the enactment of the Anti-Apartheid Act Amendments of 1988, is—

"(A) a former citizen or resident of South Africa; and

"(B)(i) a citizen of the United States; or

"(ii) an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence in the United States.".

(b) PROHIBITION ON EXPORTS TO SOUTH AFRICA.—Effective 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, section 303 of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"PROHIBITION OF EXPORTS TO SOUTH AFRICA FROM THE UNITED STATES

"SEC. 303. (a) No goods or technology subject to the jurisdiction of the United States may be exported, or re-exported, to South Africa. No goods or technology may be exported, or re-exported, to South Africa by any person subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

"(b) The prohibitions under subsection (a) shall not apply to—

"(1) publications, including books, newspapers, magazines, films, television programming, phonograph records, video and audio tape recordings, photographs, microfilm, microfiche, posters, and similar materials;

"(2) donations of articles intended to relieve human suffering, such as food, clothing, and medicine and medical supplies intended strictly for medical purposes;

"(3) commercial sales of agricultural commodities and products; and

"(4) goods and technology for use in the gathering or dissemination of information by news media organizations subject to the jurisidiction of the United States which provide an assurance to the Secretary of State that such goods and technology will not be used, leased, sold, or transferred to any South African entity.

"(c) The prohibitions under subsection (a) shall not apply to any goods that are the direct product of technology of United States origin under a written agreement entered into on or before April 20, 1988, and that are exported prior to the date which is one year after the date of the enactment of the Anti-Apartheid Act Amendments of 1988.

"(d) The prohibitions under subsection (a) shall not apply to—

"(1) economic assistance or human rights programs for disadvantaged South Africans, South African blacks or other nonwhite South Africans, or victims of apartheid in South Africa pursuant to the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, the Export-Import Bank Act of 1945, or any other provision of law authorizing economic or human rights assistance programs; and

"(2) contributions to charitable organizations engaged in social welfare, public health, religious, educational, and emergency relief activities in South Africa.".

(c) WAIVER.—A person affected by the prohibition under section 301 of the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986 (as amended by subsection (a)) may apply to the President for a one-time waiver of the prohibition. With respect to any applicant, the President may waive the application of section 301 for not more than 180 days after such section takes effect. Such waiver may be granted only for good cause. During any period of waiver under this subparagraph, the provisions of the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986 as in effect before the date of the enactment of the Anti-Apartheid Act Amendments of 1988 shall apply and the President may not waive any such provision.

(d) REPEAL OF CERTAIN PROVISIONS OF THE ACT.—Effective 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986 is amended by striking sections 212, 304, 309, 310, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, and 323.

(e) DEFINITIONS.—

(1) Paragraphs (3) and (4) of section 3 of the Act are amended to read as follows:

"(3) the term 'investment in South Africa' means—

"(A) a commitment of funds or other assets (in order to earn a financial return) to a South African entity, including—

"(i) a loan or other extension of credit made to a South African entity, or security given for the debts of an entity;

"(ii) the beneficial ownership or control of a share or interest in a South African entity, or of a bond or other debt instrument issued by such an entity; or

"(iii) capital contributions in money or other assets to a South African entity; or

"(B) the control of a South African entity in cases in which subparagraph (A) does not apply;

"(4) the term 'loan'—

"(A) means any transfer or extension of funds or credit on the basis of an obligation to repay, or any assumption or guarantee of the obligation of another to repay an extension of funds or credit, including—

"(i) overdrafts;

"(ii) currency swaps;

"(iii) the purchase of debt or equity securities issued by the Government of South Africa or a South African entity on or after the date of enactment of this Act;

"(iv) the purchase of a loan made by another person;

"(v) the sale of financial assets subject to an agreement to repurchase;

"(vi) a renewal or refinancing whereby funds or credits are transferred or extended to the Government of South Africa or a South African entity;

"(vii) short-term trade financing, as by letters of credit or similar trade credits; and

"(viii) sales on open account in cases where such sales are normal business practice;

"(B) does not include any loan for which an agreement was entered into before April 20, 1988, nor a subsequent rescheduling of any such loan provided that any new rescheduling arrangements do not extend beyond one year at a time, and provided further that no new funds or credits are thereby extended to a South African entity or the Government of South Africa;".

(2) Section 3 of the Act is further amended by—

(A) striking "and" after the semicolon in paragraph (8)(B);

(B) striking the period at the end of paragraph (9) and inserting a semicolon; and

(C) adding at the end of such section the following:

"(10) the terms 'United States person' and 'person subject to the jurisdiction of the United States' mean—

"(A) any person, wherever located, who is a citizen or resident of the United States;

"(B) any person actually within the United States;

"(C) any corporation organized under the laws of the United States or of any State, territory, possession, or district of the United States; and

"(D) any partnership, association, corporation, or other organization, wherever organized or doing business, that is owned or controlled by persons specified in subparagraphs (A), (B), or (C) of this paragraph;

"(11) the terms 'goods' and 'technology' have the meanings given such terms by section 16 of the Export Administration Act of 1979;

"(12) the term 'goods subject to the jurisdiction of the United States' includes goods that are the direct product of technology of United States origin; and

"(13) the term 'foreign person'—

"(A) means any person who is not a United States person or subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, and

"(B) does not include any government or any agency or other entity or instrumentality thereof (including a government-sponsored agency) unless any such agency, entity, or instrumentality is a business enterprise.".

(3) The amendments made by this subsection shall take effect 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(f) Negotiations With Employee Organizations Regarding Termination of Investment.—A controlled South African entity, subject to the investment prohibition under section 301 of the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986 (as amended by subsection (a)), that employs more than 24 South Africans—

(1) shall notify all South African employees and their employee organizations of such termination of investment not less than 90 days prior to such termination; and

(2) shall enter into good faith negotiations with representative trade unions, particularly those representing disadvantaged South Africans, (or with other representative worker organizations if there are no such unions) regarding the terms of a termination.

Negotiations shall include discussions and agreements concerning pension benefits; relocation of employees; continuation of existing union recognition agreements; severance pay; and acquisition of the terminated business or the business assets by representative trade unions, union-sponsored workers' trusts, other representative worker organizations, or employees.

SEC. 102. PROHIBITION REGARDING INVOLVEMENT IN THE SOUTH AFRICAN ENERGY SECTOR.

(a) Restrictions Regarding Involvement in the South African Energy Sector.—The Act is amended by adding after section 303 (as amended by section 101 of this Act) the following new section 304:

"RESTRICTIONS REGARDING INVOLVEMENT IN THE SOUTH AFRICAN ENERGY SECTOR

"Sec. 304. (a) A United States person may not, directly or through an affiliate, provide transport to South Africa of a commercial quantity of crude oil or refined petroleum products. The prohibition under this subsection includes transport on a vessel of United States registry and transport on a vessel owned, directly or indirectly, by a United States person.

"(b)(1) Effective 180 days after the date of the enactment of this subsection, the Secretary of the Interior may not issue any lease pursuant to the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920, the Mineral Leasing Act for Acquired Lands, the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act, or the Geothermal Steam Act of 1970 to any national of the United States which is controlled by, or under common control with, any foreign person who—

"(A) purchases, acquires, owns, or holds any investment in South Africa; or

"(B) exports to South Africa, directly or indirectly, any crude oil or refined petroleum products.

"(2) Prior to issuing any lease referred to in paragraph (1), the Secretary of the Interior shall require an applicant for such a lease to certify that the applicant is not subject to the provisions of paragraph (1).".

(b) Waiver of Prohibition on Issuance of Leases.—A person affected by the prohibition under section 304(b) of the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986 (as amended by subsection (a)) may apply to the President for a one-time waiver of the prohibition. With respect to any applicant, the President may waive the application of section 304(b) for not more than 180 days after such subsection takes effect. Such waiver may be granted only for good cause.

SEC. 103. PROHIBITION ON NUCLEAR ASSISTANCE TO SOUTH AFRICA.

Section 307 of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"PROHIBITION ON NUCLEAR ASSISTANCE TO SOUTH AFRICA

"Sec. 307. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of Energy shall not, under section 57 b. (2) of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, authorize any person to engage, directly or indirectly, in the production of special nuclear material in South Africa.".

SEC. 104. PROHIBITION ON UNITED STATES INTELLIGENCE AND MILITARY COOPERATION WITH SOUTH AFRICA.

(a) Amendment to Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986.—The Act is amended by striking section 322 and adding after section 308 the following new section:

"PROHIBITION ON UNITED STATES INTELLIGENCE AND MILITARY COOPERATION WITH SOUTH AFRICA

"Sec. 309. (a)(1) No agency or entity of the United States involved in intelligence activities may engage in any form of cooperation, direct or indirect, with the Government of South Africa, except activities which are reasonably designed to facilitate the collection of necessary intelligence.

"(b) No agency or entity of the United States involved in intelligence activities may provide any intelligence information to the Government of South Africa which relates, directly or indirectly, to—

(1) a South African opposition group, movement, organization or individual, wherever based; or

(2) political, economic, or military conditions in any southern African country.

"(c) The prohibitions contained in subsection (b)(2) shall not apply to the conduct of diplomatic activities or to intelligence information concerning the military activities or equipment in southern Africa of Cuban military forces or the military forces of another Communist country acting in concert with Cuban military forces.

"(d) Any anticipated change in any form of cooperation with the Government of South Africa shall be considered a significant anticipated intelligence activity for purposes of section 501 of the National Security Act of 1947.

"(e) No agency or entity of the United States may provide any information to the Government of South Africa for the purpose, or which have the effect, of assisting South Africa to evade any sanctions or prohibitions imposed by this Act.

"(f) Funds authorized to be appropriated or otherwise made available by the Congress (including funds specified in a classified schedule of authorizations or appropriations) may not be obligated or expended by any agency or entity of the United States for any expenses related to any cooperation prohibited by this section.".

(b) Amendment to Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1987.—Section 107 of the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1987 (Public Law 99-569) is hereby repealed.

SEC. 105. COORDINATOR OF SOUTH AFRICA SANCTIONS; INTERAGENCY COORDINATING COMMITTEE ON SOUTH AFRICA.

The Act is amended by adding after section 606 the following new sections:

"COORDINATOR OF SOUTH AFRICA SANCTIONS

"SEC. 607. (a) There is established within the Department of State a coordinator of South Africa sanctions who shall be responsible to the Secretary of State for matters pertaining to the implementation of sanctions against South Africa, in accordance with the provisions of this subsection.

"(b) The Secretary of State, through the coordinator of South Africa sanctions, shall—

"(1) lead and coordinate all executive agency activities concerning monitoring of compliance with, and enforcement of, this Act;

"(2) lead and coordinate monitoring by appropriate executive agencies of other countries' trade and financial flows with South Africa (including economic relations which may undermine the effects of United States sanctions);

"(3) assist the Department of Commerce, the Department of the Treasury, and appropriate intelligence and other agencies in carrying out the functions of such agencies under paragraphs (1) and (2); and

"(4) annually prepare and submit, on February 1 of each year after 1989, a comprehensive report to the Congress which—

"(A) describes specific actions taken during the preceding year by each affected executive agency to monitor compliance with, and enforce, the provisions of this Act;

"(B) describes the trade and financial flows (by commodity, activity, total volume, and value) during the preceding year between South Africa and each of its trading and financial partners, including economic relations which may be subject to penalties under section 402;

"(C) includes the information required under section 402(b)(3);

"(D) describes the resources utilized by the coordinator, the Department of State, and other executive agencies in carrying out their functions under this Act in the preceding year, including an evaluation of whether such resources were adequate; and

"(E) provides any recommendations of the Secretary of State for improving the effectiveness of the coordinator.

"(c) In carrying out the functions under subsection (b), the coordinator shall place particular emphasis on activities related to strategically important trade in oil, coal, computers, specialized machinery and arms, and to financial credits.

"INTERAGENCY COORDINATING COMMITTEE ON SOUTH AFRICA

"SEC. 608. (a) There is established an Interagency Coordinating Committee on South Africa. The Committee shall coordinate and monitor implementation of this Act.

"(b) The committee shall be composed of—

"(1) the Secretary of State,

"(2) the Secretary of the Treasury,

"(3) the Secretary of Defense,

"(4) the Secretary of Commerce,

"(5) the Secretary of Agriculture,

"(6) the Attorney General,

"(7) the United States Trade Representative, and

"(8) such other heads of executive agencies with functions under this Act as the President considers appropriate.

The Secretary of State shall be the chairperson of the Committee.".

SEC. 108. ASSISTANCE FOR DISADVANTAGED SOUTH AFRICANS.

(a) AMENDMENT TO FOREIGN ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1961.—Section 535(a) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended—

(1) by amending paragraph (1) to read as follows:

"SEC. 535. ECONOMIC SUPPORT FOR DISADVANTAGED SOUTH AFRICANS.—(a)(1) Up to $40,000,000 of the funds authorized to be appropriated to carry out this chapter and any other economic development assistance activities under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, for the fiscal year 1989 and each fiscal year thereafter, shall be available for assistance for disadvantaged South Africans. Assistance under this section shall be provided for activities that are consistent with the objective of a majority of South Africans for an end to the apartheid system and the establishment of a society based on nonracial principles. Such activities may include scholarships (including scholarships for study in the health care professions and the health sciences), assistance to promote the participation of disadvantaged South Africans in trade unions and private enterprise, alternative education and community development programs, and training and other assistance (including legal aid in challenging government media restrictions) for South African journalists.";

(2) in paragraph (2) by striking "programs for South Africa's trade unionists." and inserting "and other support programs (including legal assistance) for trade unions in South Africa and Namibia, including COSATU (Congress of South African Trade Unions), NACTU (National Council of Trade Unions), and NUNW (National Union of Namibian Workers), their affiliates, and other viable unions in order to develop a balanced assistance program which is representative of the trade union movement."; and

(3) by adding after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

"(3)(A) Not less than $4,000,000 of the amounts provided for each fiscal year pursuant to this subsection shall be available for programs of refugee education and assistance for South Africans and Namibians.

"(B)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), funds provided pursuant to this paragraph—

"(I) may not be used for assistance to individuals who are residing in areas under the control of or administered by the South West Africa People's Organization (hereinafter referred to as 'SWAPO') or the African National Congress (hereinafter referred to as 'ANC'); and

"(II) may not be administered through SWAPO, the ANC, or any other group or individual affiliated with SWAPO or the ANC.

"(ii) The President may waive any limitation concerning the African National Congress (ANC) under clause (i) if the President determines that the ANC has provided assurances that it does not support any form of violence against individuals who are not members of the South African military or security services actually engaged in military or paramilitary operations against the ANC or other resistance organizations or if the President determines that it is in the national security interests of the United States.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall take effect October 1, 1988.

SEC. 109. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING ANTITRUST INVESTIGATION OF SOUTH AFRICAN DIAMOND CARTEL, STUDY OF DIAMOND ORIGINS, AND ENFORCEMENT OF PROHIBITION ON IMPORTATION OF SOUTH AFRICAN DIAMONDS INTO THE UNITED STATES.

It is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) the President should direct the Attorney General of the United States to conduct an investigation of the South African-controlled international diamond cartel in order to ascertain if any enforcement action is appropriate under the antitrust laws of the United States;

(2) the President should direct the Secretary of Commerce and the Commissioner of Customs to conduct a study to determine the feasibility of identifying at port of entry, without harm to producers and processors of diamonds outside of South Africa, the national origin of diamonds entering the United States; and

(3) the President should—

(A) ensure effective and rigorous enforcement of a prohibition on the importation into the United States of uncut diamonds of South African origin by—

(i) applying direct pressure on the Central Selling Organization in London to identify and segregate diamonds by country of origin and encouraging other nations (including diamond-producing nations) to take appropriate measures to achieve that result; and

(ii) entering into negotiations for agreements with the principal exporting nations of uncut diamonds to the United States (particularly the United Kingdom and Switzerland) to ensure that uncut South African diamonds will not be exported to the United States;

(B) ensure that the implementation of the import prohibition contained in section 302(a) of the Act and the enforcement measures described in this section do not interfere with the ability of any United States importer to import uncut diamonds whose origin is unknown to such importer, despite any unknowing importation of South African diamonds that may result; and

(C) direct the Secretary of the Treasury to submit a report on the status of the effort to identify and segregate uncut South African diamonds to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President of the Senate 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and every 180 days thereafter.

SEC. 110. STUDY OF MEASURES TO REDUCE SOUTH AFRICA'S FOREIGN EXCHANGE EARNINGS FROM GOLD.

(a) STUDY.—In consultation with other industrialized nations and international financial institutions, the President shall conduct a study of possible actions by the United States to reduce the foreign exchange earnings of South Africa which accrue through sales of gold. The President shall consider possible international and domestic consequences of any course of action and shall evaluate mechanisms to avoid or minimize any adverse effects on the United States gold mining industry.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to the Congress a report of the findings of such study.

SEC. 111. REPORT ON SOUTH AFRICA'S INVOLVEMENT IN INTERNATIONAL TERRORISM.

Not less than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall prepare and submit a detailed report to the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate concerning the extent to which, if at all, the Government of South Africa has been involved in or has provided support for acts of international terrorism.

(iii) by striking "; and" and inserting in lieu thereof a period at the end of paragraph (3); and

(iv) by redesignating paragraph "(3)" as paragraph "(2)".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

TITLE II—SANCTIONS AGAINST SOUTH AFRICAN IMPORTS INTO THE UNITED STATES

SEC. 201. PROHIBITIONS ON IMPORTS FROM SOUTH AFRICA.

(a) PROHIBITION ON IMPORTS.—Effective 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, section 302 of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"PROHIBITION ON IMPORTS INTO THE UNITED STATES FROM SOUTH AFRICA

"SEC. 302. (a) No article which is grown, produced, extracted, or manufactured in South Africa may be imported into the United States; and no article which is grown, produced, extracted, manufactured, or marketed by a parastatal organization of South Africa may be imported into the United States.

"(b) The prohibition of subsection (a) shall not apply to the import of—

"(1) any strategic mineral (including any ferroalloy thereof) with respect to which the President certifies to the Congress for purposes of this Act that the quantities of such mineral which are essential for the economy, public health, or defense of the United States are not available from alternative reliable suppliers; and

"(2) publications, including books, newspapers, magazines, films, television programming, phonograph records, video and audio tape recordings, photographs, microfilm, microfiche, posters, and similar materials.

"(c) The prohibition under subsection (a) shall not apply to imports from business enterprises in South Africa that are wholly-owned by persons economically and politically disadvantaged by apartheid.

"(d) The prohibition under subsection (a) includes—

"(1) uranium hexafluoride that has been manufactured from South African uranium or uranium oxide; and

"(2) fish or seafood—

"(A) processed on shore in South Africa or processed aboard South African-flag or South African-owned vessels, or

"(B) harvested by South African vessels and not incorporated as a part of a product in a third country or aboard a non-South African flag processing vessel.

"(e) For purposes of this section, the term 'parastatal organization' means a corporation, partnership, or entity owned, controlled, or subsidized by the Government of South Africa, but does not mean a corporation, partnership, or other entity which previously received start-up assistance from the South African Industrial Development Corporation but which is now privately owned."

(b) CERTIFICATION.—The certification of the President with respect to any strategic mineral under section 303(a)(2) of the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986 (as in effect prior to the date of the enactment of this Act) shall be effective for purposes of section 302(b)(1) of such Act as amended by this Act, unless the President rescinds or modifies such a certification.

SEC. 202. MULTILATERAL MEASURES, INCLUDING IMPORT RESTRICTIONS, TO DISMANTLE APARTHEID.

(a) NEGOTIATING AUTHORITY.—

(1) Section 401(b) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) The President, or at his direction, the Secretary of State (in consultation with the United States Trade Representative), shall, consistent with the policy under subsection (a), confer with the other industrialized democracies in order to reach cooperative agreements to impose sanctions against South Africa to bring about the complete dismantling of apartheid.

"(2) Before the 180th day after the date of the enactment of the Anti-Apartheid Act Amendments of 1988, the President shall submit a report to the Congress containing—

"(A) a description of United States efforts under paragraph (1) to implement multilateral measures to bring about the complete dismantling of apartheid;

"(B) his evaluation regarding whether the efforts described in subparagraph (A) have been successful in achieving multilateral measures to bring about the complete dismantling of apartheid; and

"(C) if the efforts described in subparagraph (A) have been successful, a detailed description of economic and other measures adopted by the other industrialized countries to bring about the complete dismantling of apartheid, including an assessment of the stringency with which such measures are enforced by those countries.".

(b) United Nations Sanctions.—Section 401(e) of the Act is amended by striking "It is the sense of the Congress that the President should" and inserting "The President shall".

(c) Limitation on Imports From and Contracting With Certain Foreign Persons.—Section 402 of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"LIMITATION ON IMPORTS FROM AND CONTRACTING WITH CERTAIN FOREIGN PERSONS

"Sec. 402. (a)(1) Subject to subsection (b), effective on and after the 180th-day after the date of the enactment of the Anti-Apartheid Act Amendments of 1988 (or the 360th day after such date if the evaluation of the President under section 401(b)(2)(B) is affirmative), to the extent that a foreign person takes significant commercial advantage of any sanction or prohibition imposed by or under this Act, the President shall impose not less than one of the penalties under paragraph (2).

"(2) The President may impose one or both of the following penalties under paragraph (1):

"(A) Limit the importation into the United States of any product or service of the foreign person.

"(B) Restrict the foreign person from contracting with departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government.

"(3) For purposes of applying this subsection—

"(A) the European Community shall be treated as being a single industrialized democracy; and

"(B) any limitation imposed under paragraph (2)(A) shall, to the extent possible, offset the value of the significant commercial advantage obtained by the foreign person.

"(b)(1) The President may waive the application of subsection (a) with respect to foreign persons of an industrialized democracy that is party to an agreement that has entered into force with respect to the United States under section 401.

"(2) The President shall revoke, for such time and subject to such conditions as he considers appropriate, a waiver made under paragraph (1) if the President finds that the industrialized democracy that is party to the agreement in force under section 401 is not adequately enforcing the measures provided for under the agreement.

"(3) The annual report required under section 607(b)(4) shall include, with respect to the period covered by the report—

"(A) an evaluation of the extent to which the import restrictions, if any, provided for under each agreement in force under section 401 are being enforced by the industrialized democracy concerned and the effect of such enforcement; and

"(B) the reasons for each waiver and revocation made under paragraphs (1) and (2).".

SEC. 203. REFERRAL IN THE HOUSE OF JOINT RESOLUTIONS PERTAINING TO IMPORT RESTRICTIONS.

Section 602(a)(2) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(2)(A) A joint resolution, other than a joint resolution referred to in subparagraph (B), shall, upon introduction, be referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives.

"(B) A joint resolution under—

"(i) section 311(b), if the joint resolution suspends or modifies any import restriction in effect under title III, section 402(a), 501(c), or 504(b);

"(ii) section 401(d), if the joint resolution approves an agreement encompassing any import restriction measure; or

"(iii) section 501(d), if the joint resolution would enact any import restriction under section 501(c); shall, upon introduction, be jointly referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives.".

SEC. 204. REPORTS ON UNITED STATES IMPORTS FROM MEMBER STATES OF THE COUNCIL FOR MUTUAL ECONOMIC ASSISTANCE.

Section 502 of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"REPORTS ON UNITED STATES IMPORTS FROM MEMBER STATES OF THE COUNCIL FOR MUTUAL ECONOMIC ASSISTANCE

"Sec. 502. Beginning 30 days after the date of the enactment of the Anti-Apartheid Act Amendments of 1988, and every 30 days thereafter, the President, through the Secretary of Commerce, shall prepare and transmit to the Congress a report setting forth the average amounts of imports of coal or any strategic and critical material entering the United States from each member country and observer country of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (C.M.E.A.).".

SEC. 205. PROGRAM TO REDUCE DEPENDENCE UPON IMPORTATION OF STRATEGIC MINERALS FROM SOUTH AFRICA.

Section 504(b) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) The President shall develop a program to reduce the dependence, if any, of the United States on the importation from South Africa of the materials identified in the report submitted under subsection (a). In the development of such program, the President shall determine (in consultation with knowledgeable individuals in industry, government, and academia) whether, to what extent, and in what time period, adequate quantities of such materials could reasonably be obtained from (A) alternative reliable domestic and foreign sources, and (B) improved and effective methods of manufacturing, substitution, conservation, recovery, and recycling. Such determination shall include consideration of the quality and cost of such materials.

"(2) Not more than 270 days after the date of the enactment of the Anti-Apartheid Act Amendments of 1988, the President shall submit a report to the Congress concerning the program under paragraph (1), particularly the respective roles in the implementation of such program of the Federal Government, users of such materials, and other affected persons. On February 1, 1990, and on February 1 of each subsequent year until the termination of sanctions under this Act, the President shall submit a report to the Congress concerning progress in implementing such program.".

SEC. 206. PREVENTING CIRCUMVENTION OF UNITED STATES IMPORT RESTRICTIONS.

Within 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and at such times thereafter as are appropriate, the President, or the designee of the President, shall confer with the governments of the African "frontline" states regarding the content and implementation of appropriate measures to prevent the circumvention by South Africa of the import restrictions on South African products placed in effect by the United States under the authority of this Act.

TITLE III—GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 301. POLICY TOWARD VIOLENCE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Strike section 108 of the Act and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"POLICY TOWARD VIOLENCE IN SOUTH AFRICA

"Sec. 108. (a) The Congress finds that—

(1) the use of violence for political purposes has increased over the last four years in South Africa;

(2) the South African Government has resorted to force as a means of stemming anti-apartheid protests and activities;

(3) the South African Government has maintained a nationwide state of emergency since June 1986 and granted the security and police forces widespread powers under state of emergency regulations;

(4) more than 30,000 people were detained in 1986 and 1987, many of them children under the age of 18, and several were the victims of torture and brutality at the hands of South African Government officials;

(5) over 500 South Africans died as a result of a heinous practice commonly known as "necklacing", in which an individual is executed by placing a tire filled with gasoline around the neck;

(6) violent clashes have occurred between supporters of different anti-apartheid organizations in South Africa, in some cases leaving hundreds dead; and

(7) a growing number of bombings have taken place, many of them claiming the lives of civilians in white areas.

(b) It is the sense of the Congress that the President should—

(1) denunciate the use of violence by the South African Government and call upon the South African Government to immediately terminate the nationwide state of emergency and release all detainees;

(2) urge the African National Congress to issue a clear condemnation of the practice of "necklacing" and to take effective actions against necklacing of any person in any country; and

(3) clearly state that the United States does not condone the use of violence as a means of achieving or thwarting political change in South Africa."

SEC. 302. EFFECTIVE DATE.

Except as otherwise provided, this Act and the amendments made by this Act shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce with Senators CRANSTON and KENNEDY the House-passed version of the Anti-Apartheid Act Amendments of 1988. I believe this legislation to be the necessary next step in the fight against apartheid.

Apartheid is alive and uglier than ever in South Africa, if not as visible to the American people, owing to press censorship which worsens with each passing week. Lacking the fresh images on our nightly news, we find it harder to muster the sense of urgency required. Still, the tragedy unfolds. In fact, most supporters and opponents of sanctions agree that conditions are deteriorating. The two largest anti-apartheid newspapers, the New Nation and South, have been shutdown, while others have been threatened with like treatment. Some 30,000 individuals have been detained without charge. As many as 10,000 of them are children. Such detentions routinely involve physical assault and torture. Almost all antiapartheid organizations including the United Democratic Front [UDF] have been banned. The moderate antiapartheid leaders of the past are aging—many of them behind bars—and being replaced by younger, more radical leaders who have lost hope and are more willing to resort to desperate means to accomplish their ends.

The question that confronts us is what the U.S. role should now be—and this is where the disagreement begins.

Some of my colleagues are saying that we should repeal sanctions—that they have not worked and have actually hurt blacks and the possibility of reform in South Africa. To them, I respond that in 1986 the Congress redirected American foreign policy when we overrode a Presidential veto of the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act. This legislation was not everything that I wanted, but it was a new direction and sent a message of hope to South African blacks. America stood up and said that we are on your side—the side of the majority of South Africa's people. That needed saying.

As to the repeated charge that sanctions hurt blacks by taking away jobs, I do not contest it any more than those who bear the burden of that loss contest it. Still, they support sanctions and so do I. In fact, moderate black leaders and organizations are calling for stronger sanctions. Archbishop Desmond Tutu, Rev. Alan Boesak, the South African Council of Churches, and COSATU and NACTU—the two largest black trade unions—want comprehensive international economic sanctions. To repeal this landmark legislation and return to the failed policy of "constructive engagement" would signal betrayal to them.

Others of my colleagues are not convinced that the Congress should take any more action on South Africa. It is true that the impact of the 1986 legislation has been much less than was hoped for—both the President in his report on the effectiveness of sanctions and the General Accounting Office in its report agree on that. Another study released recently by the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights under law reveals some of the reasons why. It criticizes the administration for its unwillingness to wholeheartedly implement the current sanctions, and further points out: "The current sanctions are selective often skirting the key pressure points in the South African economy." I urge those who question whether the track record of the first bill warrants further action to reconsider. I believe a close examination of the facts will convince them otherwise.

One failing of the 1986 law was that it gave the President an option with regard to multilateral measures to undermine apartheid. The current President has chosen to ignore his option. In the context of a superpower summit, he speaks volumes about the "dignity of the individual in the face of the modern state" and marvels at what people will "suffer to be free." Yet he fails to give the people of South Africa the same credit. One lost opportunity was the Toronto summit. This economic summit of the seven major industrialized nations has come and gone with only one statement on apartheid, which is—we abhor it. Well, this is just not enough. A few words mumbled between cups of tea are no substitute for concerted international action. With this in mind, this legislation calls on the President to confer with other industrialized countries "in order to reach cooperative agreements to impose sanctions against South Africa."

The best way to get South Africa's attention is to cut off their oil in concert with other nations. Oil is the achilles heel of the apartheid regime.

Last, let me say that even if the comprehensive economic sanctions became the law of the land, I am not naive enough to believe that they would bring overnight change in South Africa. I do, however, believe that they represent one of our last hopes to help bring about "peaceful" change in that tortured nation. We need to fan the winds of hope, instead of pouring gasoline on the anger and hate of blacks and whites alike. Mr. President, I believe that the Anti-Apartheid Act Amendments of 1988 can help do that and I hope the Senate will move expeditiously on it.

TAFT INSTITUTE AUTHORIZATION ACT

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, on behalf of Senator KENNEDY, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives on H.R. 4585.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the House of Representatives:

Resolved, That the House disagree to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4585) entitled "An Act to extend the authorization of appropriations for the Taft Institute through fiscal year 1991", and ask a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Ordered, That Mr. Hawkins, Mr. Ford of Michigan, Mr. Gaydos, Mr. Williams, Mr. Owens of New York, Mr. Hayes of Illinois, Mr. Perkins, Mr. Jeffords, Mr. Goodling, Mr. Coleman of Missouri, and Mrs. Roukema be the managers of the conference on the part of the House.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist on its amendments and agree to a conference requested by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses and that the Chair be authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. PELL, Mr. MATSUNAGA, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. HATCH, Mr. STAFFORD, and Mr. THURMOND conferees on the part of the Senate.

ORDERS FOR THURSDAY

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today it stand in recess until the hour of 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that after the two leaders, or their designees, have been recognized under the standing order on tomorrow morning there be a period for morning business to extend until the hour of 10:30 a.m. and that Senators may speak during that morning business period for not to exceed 5 minutes each, and that at the hour of 10:30 a.m. the Senate resume consideration of the pending measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS UNTIL TOMORROW AT 10 A.M.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent that the Senate recess according to the order previously entered.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 6:29 p.m., recessed until Thursday, September 8, 1988, at 10 a.m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Wednesday, September 7, 1988

The House met at 12 noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James David Ford, D.D., offered the following prayer:

We are aware, O gracious God, that You know us by name and care for us as individuals and the vocations we pursue. Yet, O God, give us that healthy spirit that allows us to focus our prayers not only on our own needs and our problems, but also to sense more clearly the joys and sorrows and hopes of others, to appreciate differing vocations, to learn of diverse cultures and faiths. May we gain the fullness of life by seeing the breadth and length and depth of Your glorious creation and the gifts and responsibilities of Your wonderful world. This we pray. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

MOTION TO DISCHARGE COMMITTEE ON ARMED SERVICES FROM FURTHER CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 4264, NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT, FISCAL YEAR 1989

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged motion.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. WALKER moves to discharge the Committee on Armed Services from further consideration of H.R. 4264.

MOTION TO TABLE OFFERED BY MR. GLICKMAN

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged motion.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. GLICKMAN moves to lay on the table the motion to discharge.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. GLICKMAN] to lay on the table the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 217, nays 148, not voting 66, as follows:

Hon. A.P. LUTALI,
Governor of American Samoa, Pago Pago, American Samoa

DEAR GOVERNOR: Please accept this letter of resignation from the position of Delegate to Congress from the Territory of American Samoa, effective September 6, 1988.

Respectfully yours,
FOFO I.F. SUNIA,
Member of Congress.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication from the Clerk of the House of Representatives:

WASHINGTON, DC,
August 12, 1988.

Hon. JIM WRIGHT,
The Speaker, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Pursuant to the permission granted in Clause 5 of Rule III of the Rules of the U.S. House of Representatives, the Clerk received at 10:15 a.m. on Friday, August 12, 1988 the following message from the Secretary of the Senate: That the Senate passed without amendment H.R. 1841, H.R. 2370, H.R. 3617, H.R. 4143, H.R. 4318, H.R. 4458, H.J. Res. 140, H.J. Res. 539, H.J. Res. 583 and H. Con. Res. 61; that the Senate agree to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate No. 25 and recede from its amendments numbered 1-24 to H.R. 5026; and that the Senate agree to the House amendment to S. 2560.

With great respect, I am,
Sincerely yours,
DONNALD K. ANDERSON,
Clerk, House of Representatives.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to announce that pursuant to clause 4 of rule I, the Speaker signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolution on Friday, August 12, 1988:

H.R. 3617. A bill for the relief of the Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana;

H.R. 4458. A bill to simplify the process of obtaining licensing by States for participation in parimutuel wagering by allowing consolidated requests to be made to the Federal Government for identification and criminal history records relating to the applicant for such licensing;

H.R. 4694. A bill to amend the Perishable Commodities Act to increase the statutory ceilings on license fees;

H.R. 5026. A bill making dire emergency supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988, and for other purposes;

H.R. 5141. A bill to delay temporarily certain regulations relating to sea turtle conservation; and

H.J. Res. 140. Joint resolution designating August 12, 1988, as "National Civil Rights Day."

And the Speaker signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions on Thursday, August 18, 1988:

H.R. 1841. A bill to provide for the establishment of additional safety requirements for fishing industry vessels, and for other purposes;

H.R. 2370. A bill to provide for the establishment of an economic development plan for, and Federal services and assistance to, the northwestern band of the Shoshoni Nation, and for other purposes;

H.R. 3679. A bill to clarify the Federal relationship to the Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians as a distinct Indian tribe, to clarify the status of members of the band, to transfer title to trust lands, and for other purposes;

H.R. 3960. A bill to authorize the establishment of the Charles Pinckney National Historic Site in the State of South Carolina, and for other purposes;

H.R. 4143. A bill to establish a reservation for the confederated tribes of the Grand Ronde Community of Oregon, and for other purposes;

H.R. 4318. A bill to improve the administration of the personnel systems of the General Accounting Office;

H.R. 5174. A bill to make clarifying, corrective and conforming amendments to laws relating to Indian education, and for other purposes;

H.J. Res. 539. Joint resolution designating the week beginning September 18, 1988, as "Emergency Medical Services Week"; and

H.J. Res. 583. Joint resolution designating the week beginning September 11, 1988, as "National Outpatient Ambulatory Surgery Week."

RESIGNATION AS MEMBER OF SELECT COMMITTEE ON HUNGER

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following resignation as a member of the Select Committee on Hunger:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, August 22, 1988.

Hon. JIM WRIGHT,
Office of the Speaker, H-204 Capitol, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: I would like to resign from the House Select Committee on Hunger effective September 7, 1988.

Thank you very much for your assistance in this matter.

Sincerely,

GUY V. MOLINARI,
Member of Congress.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the resignation is accepted.

There was no objection.

WITHDRAWAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 2148

Mr. FAWELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my name as a cosponsor of H.R. 2148.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

NEW LEADERSHIP NEEDED FOR WAR ON DRUGS

(Mr. GLICKMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Speaker, we are beginning debate today on a comprehensive bill to literally wage war on drug abuse, attacking the problem from every angle. As we head into the debate, I think it is important that we take a moment to look at the inadequacies of the policies of recent years.

While Vice President BUSH has headed the administration's drug interdiction efforts, the flow of drugs into our country has escalated dramatically as has the tragedy of drug abuse among Americans. Let's take cocaine as an example. Since 1982, the quantity of cocaine entering this country has tripled. Only 6 to 8 percent of that is being interdicted by our Government. The number of deaths attributable to cocaine use doubled just between 1984 and 1986.

The next occupant of the White House is going to have to be ready to act, not just talk about the problem and give excuses for why we aren't doing any better. The record is clear. In the drug war, we need to commit new resources, but we also need to bring on new, effective Presidential leadership to give direction, strength and commitment to our war on drugs.

ACID RAIN

(Mr. CONTE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, last week the Vice President revived an oldtime religion of the Republican Party. In the tradition of Teddy Roosevelt, he pledged a new "conservation ethic" for his administration, including the need to preserve wetlands, to punish ocean dumpers, to protect environmentally sensitive offshore waters and an ambitious goal to reduce acid rain causing emissions.

The Vice President highlighted the devastation of acid rain and recognized this environmental threat as nonpartisan killer requiring immediate control.

Even the President has recognized the seriousness of acid rain, and he is negotiating an emissions control treaty with Canada. And the first acid rain bill to clear a committee of Congress occurred when Republican's were in control of the Senate. However, the record in the House is one of delay, excuses and stalling for 7 years. The Democratically controlled Energy and Commerce Committee has stifled the acid rain debate and prevented the House from working its will on this important environmental issue.

GEORGE BUSH was right to highlight the devastating problem of acid rain, and I hope my colleagues on the Energy and Commerce Committee will take GEORGE BUSH's lead on acid rain and move a bill in this 100th Congress.

TODAY IS THE DAY FOR CONGRESS TO SAY "NO"

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, there is an old adage that, if you tolerate something, you get more of it, and we have tolerated drugs and murder too long here in America.

Now we have tried negotiation, and we have tried compromise. We even ask our kids to say, "no," but the truth is the drug problem and its violence keeps growing.

Let us face it. The drug barons are armed better than our police, and they do not have to read anyone their rights. They just keep laughing all the way to the bank. To protect their millions of dollars worth of dope they will simply kill anyone in their way, and they do.

Let us not forget Officer Byrne of New York earlier this year.

Today is the day, Mr. Speaker, for Congress to say, "no." Today we should impose the death penalty for those who kill during the transmission of a drug event.

Now there will be those who argue that prosecuting capital cases is too costly. I say today we consider it a pain and a cost to the American family. The death penalty that will be offered in amendment today will not require the death penalty. It will allow for it.

Second, a convicted drug dealer and murderer, once executed, will never kill again and certainly never sell drugs to our kids again.

THE ULTIMATE WEAPON—THE DEATH PENALTY

(Mr. GEKAS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, it is true the war on drugs cannot be won without the use of the ultimate weapon, and that weapon is the option of the death penalty for those who would kill in the furtherance of that criminal enterprise that has become so profitable and so deadly to our young people. It is not a theoretical option that we are talking about. Murders have been committed, murders of judges, drug law enforcement officers, of law enforcement officers who are protecting witnesses in pending drug cases. All along the landscape there are bodies of individual fellow American citizens who lost their lives at the hands of drugs dealers.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that when the bill comes up and the amendment for the death penalty that we give it consideration and vote in favor of it.

MAKING A PLEDGE AND KEEPING IT

(Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota. Mr. Speaker, does this language sound familiar? "We are sick and tired of having this country run down by phonies who don't understand hard work and patriotism." That was Spiro Agnew speaking in 1969. The reason it might sound familiar is because it is the same foolishness we are hearing from the Republicans on the campaign trail today. Here is a sample of theirs: Today: They say we Democrats show "disdain for the simple and basic patriotism of most Americans." That foolishness came from Education Secretary Bennett this week. It's essentially what BUSH and QUAYLE have been saying for several weeks.

Some years ago, in Massachusetts, the legislature passed a bill that would have required teachers to lead schoolchildren in the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag each day. The Supreme Court advised Governor Dukakis that the requirement was unconstitutional, so he vetoed it. On that basis, years later, some Republicans are now questioning the basic patriotism of Michael Dukakis and Democrats. It represents another low road in politics.

This worm's eye view of politics from the Republican campaign reminds me of something Emerson once said, "The louder he talked of his honor, the faster we counted our spoons."

Shame on GEORGE BUSH, DAN QUAYLE, and William Bennett for leading the party of Lincoln back into the darkness of demagoguery. Shame on them for trying to build themselves up by tearing others down. Shame on them for questioning the patriotism of their opponents.

So, Mr. BUSH, please understand that we all believe in the Pledge of Allegiance, but we believe in other pledges as well—pledges you ought to start making and keeping.

You ought to make a pledge to balance the Federal budget. You did that once and then ran up the debt by over a trillion dollars. You should pledge not to sell arms to international outlaws such as Ayatolla Khomeini. You did that once and then you sent Oliver North to Iran loaded with a cake, a Bible, and a supply of guns for the Ayatolla. You should pledge to support education. You did that once and then you tried to cut the education budget by one third. You should pledge to support our elderly. You've done that before and then you voted to cut their Social Security benefits. Finally, you should pledge to run an honest campaign on the issues. You did that before as well, but look at you now.

No. GEORGE BUSH, the Pledge of Allegiance doesn't belong to the Republican Party. We all say the Pledge of Allegiance. The real question, Mr. BUSH, is what pledges will you make about America's future and this time, which ones will you keep.

NATIONAL FIREFIGHTERS RECOGNITION DAY

(Mr. WELDON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WELDON. Mr. Speaker, over the last several weeks, and even as we assemble here today, we follow with great admiration the heroic efforts of the firefighters in the western part of the Nation who have been battling raging forest and brush fires. These individuals exemplify the proud group of professionals across the country who epitomize what this great Nation is all about, our firefighters, some 2 million strong.

Mr. Speaker, it is only fitting that we set aside 1 day each year to honor and recognize these brave men and women who make up our fire and emergency services network.

Tomorrow I will introduce legislation to designate Saturday, October 15, as National Firefighters Recognition Day. I, as chairman of the Congressional Fire Services Caucus, along with my cochairs, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALGREN], and the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT], and our 235 Members of what has become the fourth largest caucus, and soon to be second largest caucus on Capitol Hill, ask all of my colleagues to join with us in this fitting tribute to these national heroes.

U.S. FOREST SERVICE NEEDS MORE CONGRESSIONAL OVERSIGHT

(Mr. RICHARDSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, my constituents think that the U.S. Forest Service is out of control and want more congressional oversight of their operations.

Specifically, they are appalled about the policy allowing the Yellowstone to burn. They are appalled at the huge increase in translator fees on public lands for broadcasting. They are appalled at decisions they believe are being made on road improvements, logging and other practices without adequate public input.

Mr. Speaker, many of these decisions are made without adequate congressional oversight. They are made by executive decision.

Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Agriculture should look at the Forest Service operation and review whether we need some policy changes. They are a fine agency, but need desperately some direction. They should make decisions on their own.

HERE WE GO AGAIN

(Mr. ROBERTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Speaker, well, here we go again. Return with us now to those not so thrilling and those counterproductive days of the 1970's when America's farmers and ranchers were faced with all sorts of price freezes, grain embargoes, boycotts, government manipulation, and market interference, sold by well-meaning consumer groups, but groups who were very misled.

Mr. Speaker, like the poltergeist movies, they are back. The Consumers Union, the Nutrition Institute, and the Consumer Federation of America apparently believe that the drought we are surviving and working through, and as a result the higher market prices at the country elevator, will be responsible for skyrocketing prices or food shortages at the year's end.

These folks have called for an end to the Export Enhancement Program, the very program that has resulted in increased market share for our farm commodities and our prices.

Consumers of America, my urban colleagues, not to worry. We have a reliable supply of grain. The cost will be minimal. How much grain, what cost, see page 2 when we have 1-minutes the next time around; but a warning to these groups. Do not lead us down this road again. There has been too much pain, too much suffering, too much trauma in rural America when we are experiencing that price recovery.

AIR STATION CHICAGO AND THE COAST GUARD BUDGET TANGLE

(Mr. PORTER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, on August 1, the Chicago Air Station saved two more lives when it plucked Sarah and Wayne Christenson from Lake Michigan after their plane ditched in the water. That brings to 157 the number of lives this vital installation has saved since 1982.

Yet, the future of this search and rescue station and others like it continues to hang in the balance of a strange congressional funding scheme. This year the House Transportation appropriations bill assumes money from other budget functions. For fiscal year 1989, the Defense appropriations bill is relied upon to provide $60 million for operating expenses and $350 million out of a $435 million AC&I account. In the Senate $200 million for operating expenses is to come from Defense, and $50.3 million from yet another budget function, military construction.

This situation may lead to the Coast Guard getting short changed, and heroics like those that saved Sarah and Wayne Christenson may be a thing of the past. Until Coast Guard funding is put under just one budget function, we must do everything possible to ensure that vital lifesaving services like Chicago's air rescue station do not slip through the cracks of the hectic October rush to adjourn.

OMNIBUS DRUG INITIATIVE ACT

(Mr. WEISS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, the devastation caused by drug abuse and drug trafficking is overwhelming. Drug-related crimes are escalating in Washington, DC, New York, Los Angeles, indeed, throughout the Nation. The urgency of finding solutions cannot be overstated.

The problems we face today are a sad reflection of the failed policies of the Reagan administration's so-called war on drugs. In 1982, Vice President BUSH was put in charge of the administration's task force to coordinate drug enforcement efforts. It's been 6 years, Mr. Speaker, and the Vice President's record speaks for itself. Even he cannot pretend that progress has been made. In fact, matters have become much worse.

It will take more than rhetoric to solve this complex and destructive problem. As we begin consideration of the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act today, it is my hope that we will adopt the thoughtful, comprehensive, and effective program it incorporates which deals with the reality of the drug problem and reject the unconstitutional, unprincipled, and one should say phony panaceas, which will be offered by way of amendment. Mr. Speaker, the Vice President has taught us by example that flailing efforts and hot air cannot succeed. I hope we have all learned that lesson.

OPERATION ALLIANCE

(Mr. SKEEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SKEEN. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the committees and Members for the bipartisan effort to address the growing menace of drug use and abuse in the United States. With the enactment of several strengthening amendments, this Congress will have produced one of the most comprehensive and hard-hitting drug bills in history.

There is no doubt that a coordinated effort on the part of law enforcement is necessary to fight this influx of illegal drugs. Local, State, and Federal agencies must work together and can work together to effectively stem the tide of imported drugs.

The 2,000-mile border between the United States and Mexico provides a corridor for nearly one-third of the heroin, one-third of the cocaine, and one-third of the marijuana entering our country. My own district, which covers the entire border between the State of New Mexico and the nation of Mexico, has benefited from a drug interdiction program named "Operation Alliance."

Operation Alliance is comprised of 16 Federal Government agencies, all local law enforcement agencies, and the Government of Mexico. Its initiative was to choke the life out of drug trafficking across the border. And choke it has. In the first year alone nearly 7,700 kilograms of cocaine were seized—a 241-percent increase over the previous year.

Local law enforcement officials have indicated to me that Operation Alliance has been a boon to their drug interdiction programs—Federal and local agents working side by side against a common foe.

It is obvious that this kind of concerted effort must be expanded to protect all the borders of the United States. The Omnibus Drug Initiative Act will provide the mechanism to develop an Operation Alliance type of system nationwide. We must work together to end the terror.

As our forefather stated, "We must all hang together, or surely we shall all hang separately." This is not a separate or a parochial problem—we truly must hang together and hang tough—tough on drugs.

THE OMNIBUS DRUG BILL

(Mr. BUSTAMANTE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BUSTAMANTE. Mr. Speaker. I want to express my appreciation for demonstrating true leadership on the drug issue. Unlike the administration, you do not just talk tough about fighting illegal drugs, you act tough. And today, Mr. Speaker, your efforts to spearhead congressional action on our Nation's drug problem has borne fruit. This House will pass H.R. 5210, the omnibus drug bill.

As you know from your past visits to my district in south Texas, Mr. Speaker, there is a daily large-scale flow of drugs along the United States-Mexico border. That's why I am pleased by this legislation's establishment of a Latin-American regional antinarcotics force. Your efforts are a far cry from the Reagan-Bush administration, which says it has a "zero tolerance" for drug smuggling, but nevertheless tolerated Mr. Noriega's drug running for many years.

The Vice President also has a lackluster record in our war on drugs, having been the head of the National Narcotics Border Interdiction System, which the DEA has called to be abolished because it was harming the Nation's antidrug efforts.

If you want to really make a difference in our war on drugs, support this bill.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF RELEASE OF NEW GUIDE TO STATE AND FEDERAL RESOURCES FOR ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

(Mr. WOLPE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WOLPE. Mr. Speaker, as cochair of the Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition, I am pleased to announce the release of our new "Guide to State and Federal Resources for Economic Development." This major publication represents the most comprehensive catalog and analysis of current economic development initiatives across the country. It features more than 60 case studies of State programs designed to spark economic revitalization and growth. It also analyzes Federal development programs and tax incentives which—though reduced—still provide the foundation for considerable development activity.

The guide, prepared as a service to members of the coalition, will serve as a handbook of basic information to help promote economic development activities. It aims to examine the economic development process and many of the tools used to promote private investment and create jobs.

I would strongly recommend the guide to my colleagues in the coalition.

THE OMNIBUS DRUG INITIATIVE ACT OF 1988

(Ms. PELOSI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, today the House takes up a strong initiative against illegal drugs, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988. It is essential for Congress to act on this bill, which will enable us to battle the drug epidemic because it is clear that the current administration has not.

In 1982, President Reagan formed a special task force designed to combat the drug problem and named George Bush as its director. Since that time, the flow of cocaine into this country has increased more than four times and we have experienced a doubling of cocaine-related deaths. The administration's own Director of the Drug Enforcement Agency called for the abolition of the Bush task force on the grounds that it was actually harming the Nation's antidrug efforts.

George Bush, placed in charge of the Nation's antidrug activities for 7 years, was unable to deliver. Bush was charged with coordinating the Nation's antidrug activities, but the various Government agencies involved in the drug war have turned into warring factions. Customs and Coast Guard officials assail each other's failure at stopping drugs. Treasury Department officials and State Department officials engage in a continuing war of words. The DEA fights with the CIA, and the Border Patrol has been brought into the war on drugs fitfully, if at all.

The administration's own official acknowledge that under Bush the NNBIS has failed to make any contribution to the antidrug effort.

We must send a message to the administration, Mr. Speaker, that we want actions, not words, on the drug issue; and in that spirit.

THE OMNIBUS DRUG BILL

(Mr. GORDON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

(Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, at a time when we are asking our Nation's children to say no to illegal drugs, we in the House of Representatives this week have a chance to say yes to a broadside of programs that will attack our country's drug problem.

We must say yes to helping law enforcement agencies detect and prosecute drug pushers and smugglers.

We must say yes to making sure all young people in my district and in this Nation are told the full story about the consequences of using illegal drugs.

We must say yes to tough new measures that will make drug users think again before buying illegal drugs.

And we must say yes to helping people free themselves from drug use by making sure rehabilitation programs are available to all.

Drug abuse is not just a big-city problem. It touches us all, in every community whether it is rural or urban, rich or poor.

My constituents in middle Tennessee are worried. They have seen drug abuse touch their communities. They are demanding action, now, to turn the tide, to get illegal drugs out of our society.

We must do our job this week and pass this bill. The American people are counting on us.

DRUG PUSHERS FEEL HEAT OF DUKAKIS DRUG PROGRAMS

(Mr. ATKINS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ATKINS. Mr. Speaker, while the administration boasts that it has not lost one square inch of ground to the Communists, it is in the process of losing an entire nation—this one—to an equally insidious enemy—drugs.

While cocaine imports have tripled in the past 6 years and cocaine deaths doubled between 1984 and 1986, the Reagan-Bush administration has sought deep cuts on many fronts in the war against drugs. Let's fight that war with programs, not platitudes.

In Massachusetts, under Governor Dukakis, those programs exist and the results have been impressive. Drug pushers have felt the heat from the Governor's drug task force that sent five times as many pushers to prison in 1987 than in 1983. The Governor's alliance against drugs, a school-based campaign has been called a model for the Nation by the Drug Enforcement Agency.

In Massachusetts, drug use by high school students has declined much faster than the national average, twice as fast for all categories of drugs and five times as fast for cocaine.

The administration talks a good fight, but Massachusetts is winning it despite the lack of Federal assistance. Crime is an obvious byproduct of drugs, but while crime has increased by 4 percent nationwide over the past 5 years, the crime rate in Massachusetts has decreased by 13 percent. In addition, Massachusetts now has the lowest homicide rate of any industrialized State in the Nation.

That is a solid record, not a broken record.

PROLIFERATION OF DRUGS THREATENS SECURITY OF OUR NATION

(Mr. LEWIS of Georgia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. LEWIS of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I rise to urge the support of the Members on H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act.

Mr. Speaker, we are here today to draw the line. We are here today to say that we are sick and tired of drugs in our community. We are disgusted with the despair and violence associated with cocaine, heroin, and other controlled substances which have crossed our borders by the ton in recent years.

Mr. Speaker, the greatest threat to the security of our Nation is not from forces from the outside but the proliferation of drugs which are destroying the minds of a whole generation of young people. The passage of this legislation will send a clear and distinct message to the drug barons that we will regain control of our streets and our neighborhoods. This must be our message today.

BIPARTISAN DEBATE NEEDED ON DRUG PROBLEM

(Mr. LUNGREN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LUNGREN. Mr. Speaker, in a few moments we are going to begin the debate on the bipartisan antidrug bill. I hope the debate will be bipartisan. However, some of the comments of some of my colleagues on the other side have concerned me in that they seem to have a partisan tinge to them.

It just seems to me that the Rip Van Winkles of the Democratic Party ought to recall where we were when this administration came into office.

We had received cuts in the number of people who served in the FBI and the DEA prior to the time that this administration came into office. It took this administration two budget cycles to get the manpower levels of the FBI and the DEA up to what they were before the Carter administration came into office.

People should recall the FBI was never involved in drug matters until this administration came into office. They had a concern that being involved in drug investigations would have the possibility of corrupting some of their personnel. There was a longstanding tradition in the FBI, a tradition that no administration was able to overcome prior to the Reagan administration coming into office.

For the very first time we now have the FBI involved in drug investigation combined with the DEA, both of whom had to increase their manpower in the beginning of this administration to bring it up to what it was before the Carter administration came into office.

Mr. Speaker, if people want to talk about numbers and if they want to talk about personnel, if they want to talk about criticism, there is plenty there. We are happy to debate it. It would be far better if we had a bipartisan debate dealing with the problem before us and how we are going to solve that problem. We will not solve the problems of drugs in this country until we have a comprehensive attack which results in the change of the culture of America from some tolerance of illegal drug use to zero tolerance.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MUST LEAD IN BATTLE AGAINST DRUGS

(Mr. SMITH of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I certainly liked the remarks of the previous speaker, but I tell the Members the truth, we are only going to win the war on drugs in this country when we begin to be honest with the American people.

Do the Members want to know how this administration fights drugs? Last year this body proposed and passed a bill that required a report of official foreign corruption by government officials and heads of state every 6 months. It is called the 2013 Report, and the first time they had to submit it, it was late. The second time they just submitted it 4 months late.

How did they treat official corruption in Laos? They admitted that the whole Government is corrupt, and then invoked the national waiver saying that we are not going to cut off their money because it is not the right thing to do at this time, but they admitted that the whole Government is corrupt.

In Mexico they admitted that there is no hot pursuit right, that one cannot get any resolution to the torture murders of Camarena or Cortez' brutal, vicious beatings.

Mr. Speaker, how did they treat that and the corruption which they admitted existed? Another national interest certification so that they do not have to deal with it.

The best one of all is Noriega. How did they treat Mr. Noriega, folks? Here is a little honesty for you: He was canned by Mr. Delvalle before Mr. Delvalle was overthrown. Therefore, Mr. Noriega is no longer part of the government. Therefore, they do not have to report on him. Therefore, there is no corruption in Panama. With a wave of the hand, with a wave of the hand, the most corrupt drug individual in government around the world today was made to not exist.

This is the Government's approach. This is this administration's approach to drugs and to the way to stop it.

It is this House that is going to be the catalyst for real drug fighting, and it is going to be the Democrats who are going to lead this battle, and in November the people are going to reward the Democrats for having done it.

VISIT TO HOLOCAUST CAMPS INDESCRIBABLE

(Mr. DORNAN of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Speaker, during the district work period I did some work that was not in my district. I went to the Soviet Union for a week and met with some of the internal security forces there, the two top people who run the prison camp system, all of their prisons, and the gentleman that also is head of all of the police forces in the state then met with about two dozen refuseniks, most of them Jewish.

I am going to do a special order tonight about that and some of my experiences at the end of that week in the nation of Poland where I visited all six Nazi extermination camps, including Treblinka, Sobibor, Belzec, Chelmno, where there is nothing left but rolling fields and the foundations of the crematoria.

Mr. Speaker, I then visited Auschwitz-Birkenau, two camps which are separated by only 3 kilometers and Maidanek outside of the city of Lublin, where there are the remains of the decayed buildings of the camps.

Mr. Speaker, it is an experience that will stay with me for the rest of my life. I thought I was approaching being an expert on the Holocaust and what had happened to Soviet Jewry and 6 million other citizens who were torn up by the Nazi horror, but to visit all the sites where so many souls were sent to God, where so many human beings were destroyed is just an absolutely almost indescribable situation. However, I will attempt to describe what I learned further in depth, further on the Holocaust on a special order tonight or tomorrow.

THE OMNIBUS DRUG ABUSE BILL

(Mrs. LLOYD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the omnibus drug initiative of 1988. The drug epidemic in this country is taking a terrible toll. Large numbers of our citizens are suffering the direct effects of drug use—addiction, overdoses, unemployment, even death. We, as a society, are also the victims of abuse. Reduced productivity and higher health care costs impact our entire Nation.

The drug abuse problem in this country continues to grow instead of dissipate, reaching younger and younger victims with a wider selection of drugs. Enactment of the comprehensive omnibus drug initiative before us today is essential. The American people have told us that they are fed up with the state of affairs regarding the drug crisis, and that they are looking to the Congress for concrete answers, strong leadership, and commitment. This bill fits that criteria with reasonable, thoughtful programs which allow us to use all the resources at our command. It authorizes funds for drug enforcement, treatment, prevention, and education and makes various changes to existing law which are intended to discourage or prevent drug use and improve antidrug law enforcement efforts. It builds on the omnibus drug legislation we enacted in 1986 and allows us to continue to send a strong signal to those involved in criminal drug enterprises, who are poisoning the minds and bodies of our children, that their crimes will not go unheeded. We must pass this legislation without prejudice and send it to the President with all possible speed.

I have made it a point to meet with many of the individuals in my district who are working in the community to combat the narcotics crisis and I am gravely concerned that our resources are not being directed to our county and city governments responsible for enforcing the law with the greatest possible efficiency. This critical measure would streamline drug enforcement assistance to local jurisdictions and increase the assistance for States and localities to $500 million beginning in fiscal year 1990. It would create a system of block grants and mandate prompt delivery of those funds to city governments. If States do not expeditiously apply for the assistance, municipalities can apply directly to the Department of Justice. It also provides a pilot grant program to provide additional training and recruitment of local drug enforcement officers.

I have always been deeply committed to educating our youth, in their formative years, to the dangers of drugs. The economic and social costs of drug trafficking and addiction to this country are unacceptably high and our children must be reached before they fall prey to curiosity or peer pressure to experiment with illegal narcotics. The 1987 survey on drug use among high school seniors, sponsored by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, indicated that over half (57 percent) of high school seniors had tried an illicit drug, and over one-third had tried an illicit drug other than marijuana. One in six or seven high school seniors has tried cocaine (15.2 percent) and one in 18 (5.6 percent) has tried crack cocaine specifically. These numbers are far too high and illustrate the tremendous need to reach our kids before the onset of drug usage.

The comprehensive drug initiative of 1988 establishes a new program of formula grants for States, to develop more effective juvenile justice programs targeted to drug abuse, and to refer juveniles and their families to drug abuse prevention, treatment, and rehabilitation services. The bill also establishes a new program of competitive grants for public and private nonprofit agencies. These grants could be used for drug abuse education designed to reduce juvenile delinquency, to support relevant research, to develop community outreach and counseling programs, and to provide training and technical assistance relating to innovative and effective drug abuse education programs.

I believe that drug interdiction and international narcotics control must be stepped up if we are to stop the flow of drugs into our country. This bill authorizes the Coast Guard to engage in maritime air surveillance and interdiction and provides significant increases for the Customs Service to enhance customs' air interdiction program. It includes provisions to encourage development of a Latin American regional antinarcotics force; modify procedures for certifying countries as cooperating with narcotics control efforts and makes various other changes in laws related to international narcotics control.

Mr. Speaker, the economic and social costs of drug trafficking and addiction to this country are high and rising. Americans spend an estimated $130 billion each year on illicit drugs. The cost of narcotics abuse in the United States amounts to more than $100 billion annually in increased health care costs, lost productivity, and related crime and violence. We cannot sit by and allow the menace of illegal drugs to endanger our schools, our workplaces, our streets, and sometimes our families. We must defend the American people against this scourge. We must let the public know that there are many voices of reason on this issue in the Congress, and they must not allow themselves to be swayed by those who are ready to acquiesce. We will move forward, as a country, and address these issues head on. By fashioning this legislation we have acknowledged that the war on drugs will be long and hard-fought, but that it can be won. I urge my colleagues to join with me in strongly supporting the omnibus drug initiative of 1988.

OMNIBUS DRUG INITIATIVE ACT OF 1988

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 521 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 5210.

□ 1312

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5210) to prevent the manufacturing, distribution, and use of illegal drugs, and for other purposes, with Mr. CARR in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY] will be recognized for 1 hour and 30 minutes and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MCCOLLUM] will be recognized for 1 hour and 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY].

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I designate the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL] to control general debate, and I ask unanimous consent he be allowed to yield blocks of time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL].

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mr. RANGEL asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, this afternoon we will have an opportunity to, in part, meet the challenge of the great scourge that drugs has brought upon our congressional districts, our regions, our States and, indeed, the world. We will have an opportunity for 3 hours to generally discuss this bill, and we look forward to having two or three amendments today, and the rest of the amendments and the conclusion of the bill tomorrow.

Mr. Chairman, I think that we all can go home pretty proud of the fact that once again the initiative and the leadership, in an attempt to do something about this serious problem, was initiated in our House of Representatives, and that we expect to have the full cooperation of the other body.

I think that our Speaker in, once again, selecting our majority leader to work with our whip and to reach across the aisle to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL], the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS], and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MCCOLLUM], has made the effort to make certain that we come out of here whole, not with Republican or Democratic legislation, but the type of legislation so that we can say we have done the best that we could.

I would like to take time to reach out to the gentleman from New York

[Mr. GILMAN] who has worked so hard over the years on the Select Narcotics Committee, and all of its members, all of whom serve on legislative committees like the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES], who in the Committee on the Judiciary will probably control much of the debate on the serious and important amendments that we will be addressing and, or course, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SMITH] as we address the issues in foreign affairs and, or course, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. ENGLISH] as we bring our military into what I think is an important role, and that is the protection of our Nation against this threat to our national security.

□ 1315

In 1986, for the very first time, comprehensive legislation was created by this body and the other body and signed into law. That was in October 1986.

In January the next year the administration, led by the Office of Management and Budget, was asking for severe cuts in the very programs that before the last election we were asking the American people to support.

Well, this time we can be certain that once we pass this bill it will not be the same people asking for cuts. Maybe sometime next year we will not have these drug initiatives coming from the Congress but we will find an administration to present to us for the first time a comprehensive program, a policy, a strategy, and ask this Congress to support it. Meanwhile, we cannot afford to wait. Even though Secretary Shultz has not asked us to do anything, we think it is about time to bring together the heads of these countries where the cocaine is being grown, processed, and exported to see whether or not, as friendly allies and partners, we can come up with some strategy to have these fragile democracies survive.

So we are sending help, military and economic assistance, we are going to the Export and Import Banks and saying, "Help these countries to help themselves."

But we are not stopping there. It is true that we have never gotten a request from Ed Meese to give any assistance to local and State law enforcement; it is true that the administration has, for 8 years, violently opposed any assistance to be given to local and State law enforcement.

But how can we have a war on drugs when our lead agency, the Drug Enforcement Administration, has a mere 2,800 agents to cover the United States and the entire world?

So we are moving to pump up and to give assistance to local and State law enforcement. We also are going to give support to our Federal agents.

We know that we never got a request from Secretary Bennett in Education, but under the leadership of Chairman HAWKINS, we know that we are going to have to do something to reduce the demand, especially by our youth. We have to make a special appeal in sports to attract kids to do something besides ruin their lives, the runaway kids, the homeless kids, the kids involved in gangs. So we can be proud of the Committee on Education and Labor because they are not waiting for Cabinet people to ask for help; they are doing something.

And, of course, we did hear from the Watkins Commission. They said we should do something about this AIDS epidemic. Those of you who have visited the maternity wards and have seen these little children born addicted, born with AIDS, those of you who are so cost conscious to see that it costs $500, $600, $700 a day to take care of these AIDS patients know that we have to do something about it before these diseases happen, and we have to be able to try to educate and to rehabilitate.

So we are not waiting for the administration to tell us as legislators what to do; we are doing it because the Committee on Energy and Commerce has brought to us comprehensive programs to deal with the AIDS and intravenous drug problem.

So we cannot win this battle just by throwing dollars at it. This bill would add some $1.3 billion, bringing our overall antidrug effort to a total of some $5 billion, but still we have to work to make certain that there is accountability.

You cannot make certain that local and State governments are doing what we would want, but all of us together can send a message to the American people that we expect the next administration to be held accountable for what we are doing.

I do hope, as my colleagues have suggested, that we do not get partisan as we start to discuss this bill. But more importantly, that we do not allow the emotionalism of some of the amendments we are going to hear discussed tomorrow to distract from what we really have to do and that is to try to give assistance to those people that are on the front line.

I do not know where we would be if Ed Meese had not been in charge of coordinating our national effort. That is a partisan question which I have agreed that I will not discuss.

I do not know where we would be if our Vice President did not dedicate himself to protect our borders against the drugs that have come in over the years. Again, I promised that that is a partisan question that I will not deal with. But I know one thing, that if we cannot find a national policy and we cannot find a national strategy, that we all should be able to thank Nancy Reagan for at least giving us her program in "Just Say No."

But today for our omnibus drug bill, H.R. 5210, I hope that you will be able to find it in your hearts to "Just Say Yes."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL] has consumed 9 minutes.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Reclaiming my time, I would like very much to very briefly analyze what this bill does and where we are going. It is a bipartisan effort that has gotten us here. I want to thank all of the parties, the leadership of both the Democrat and Republican sides of the aisles for bringing this bill out today, and the myriad of staff who worked very hard. I especially want to thank the 55 members of the House Republican task force who worked diligently to create and promote some of the ideas that have been incorporated in the bill itself that will not be debated during amendment time. I think their process, their work product, and the adoption of much of those proposals in the subcommittee and committee process leading to today, merits some comment and some praise, and also some praise of their staffs who worked very hard to do that.

Over 30 million, according to the American Medical Association, over 30 million Americans use marijuana today; over 500,000 are addicted to heroin, over 3 million regularly use cocaine; more than 12 million have tried it once in the past 3 years. I submit that that is a rather conservative figure and unfortunately I am afraid the usage is probably much more widespread than has been documented.

The bottom line is that we are engaged and we have been for some time in the war on drugs in this country. I do not know of many people who do not understand that. That is the No. 1 issue right now facing the United States.

The war, in terms of its strategy and the scope, has not changed much. But the need for certain specific programs continues to change.

Two years ago this body and the other body adopted legislation, the President signed into law a bill of omnibus nature similar to what we are doing today. The scope of all of this legislation, the scope of the program the Vice President has fought for and much of this administration has fought for and this Congress has endorsed basically comprises four components.

No. 1, the component of eradication: If we are going to win the war on drugs it has to be comprehensive, it has to start overseas where the crops are grown that lead to the production of the product, whether that be cocaine or heroin or marijuana. We need, as we always have had, to have the resources to do that. We also need the cooperation of the foreign governments. That involves a diplomatic, an executive, and a legislative initiative. It involves in this case and what this bill before us today attempts to do further, it involves the use of herbicides and the funding and support concept to spray where possible.

It involves the support of our Drug Enforcement Administration; it involves attacks on the laboratories that are clandestine in those countries where the product is grown and where the product has to be refined. It involves restrictions on the shipment of those precursor chemicals that are necessary to produce the cocaine, for example, from the coca plant and the coca paste.

If we can do those things, and this legislation further promotes that, we can win part of that war in the eradication area, then we have made a successful step. And we are making those steps as we have been for the past several years. This bill enhances it considerably.

Second, to win the war on drugs we have to have an effective interdiction program.

Probably more attention and more publicity is in the area of interdiction than anywhere else. That is where the Coast Guard and the Customs and the military come in. That is where the Immigration Service comes in because they actually capture through their stopping of those who might be illegal immigrants into our country more people possessing narcotics than any other single law enforcement agency. More resources are needed and this legislation addresses it. But a lot of the past efforts of the administration and of this Congress have been devoted to that area.

We also, if we are going to win this war on drugs, have to support our local law enforcement. That means that we have to have grant programs like we adopted a couple of years ago.

We have to do everything we can to give local law enforcement, in addition to funds, the necessary tools in terms of legislative initiatives. And we need to give our Federal law enforcement folks on the street in the Federal judicial system the tools they need. That means not only the laws that we currently have on the books, but some that we can put on the books in this particular omnibus bill, such as the change in the exclusionary rule so that when we actually prosecute and have somebody arrested we do not have the evidence thrown out because of some technicality. We need to have the death penalty as a deterrent. We do not have that today for drug kingpins.

We have the opportunity in amendments before us in the next couple of days to adopt that additional tool for law enforcement.

We have the opportunity to do a number of things that will aid law enforcement very significantly. And I submit that we can and we should do that.

Perhaps the most significant thing is to add additional prisons and to add additional U.S. attorney areas.

We need to address that. It is somewhat addressed in the bill. A lot more can be done in the amendments that are to be offered.

It is that area that I have heard the most about in the last few days from local law enforcement back home in my State. I am confident most Members have heard that in their States as well.

But there is a fourth area besides eradication and interdiction and law enforcement that we have to address and that we have to enhance. Perhaps in this area we have been weakest of all. We have not appropriately, in my judgment, addressed the issue of demand.

If we Americans continue to use and consume the amount of narcotics that we are today, there is no amount of interdiction, eradication, or local law enforcement efforts that is going to win this war. Too many Americans are demanding it. It is the law of supply and demand, pure and simple.

We cannot seal the borders, we cannot stop the stuff from coming in in the quantities it is coming in unless we address the demand side.

That really involves three things. It involves education, not just Mrs. Reagan's "Just Say No to drugs" but a lot of education other than that in our schools. We have made an effort at that in the omnibus bill 2 years ago.

We are making more efforts here. The administration is making an effort. We have to do more.

It involves also rehabilitation. We do not have enough rehabilitation centers, we do not have enough effort in that area. That effort has been ongoing and it needs to be supplemented. The proposed legislation before us would do that.

It also involves a third component, one we have not adequately addressed at all in the past. That is creating some kind of a deterrence on the user side, to make a user accountable and to say to that young person in particular who does not heed the warning of the education component, who is not yet an addict, who is not beyond the pale, but who is thinking about it because of peer pressure or the enticements or whatever around him, thinking about using it or trying it or experimenting with it. We need to put on the books something besides jail time which is not practical, to say to that young person, "If you use and make that choice you are going to be held accountable, you are going to have to pay a price that is greater than you will want to pay." Such ideas as the New Jersey suggestion which has come from their law, of a period of time of suspending or revoking a driving privilege of a 16-year-old or someone else who has been convicted once of possession, or taking away some Federal benefits for student loans and college opportunities for those who are convicted twice, subject of course to their opportunity to rehabilitate themselves and get their rights and those benefits back.

Civil penalties, perhaps and a lot of those kind of things.

The bottom line is this is a comprehensive effort. It is a part of an ongoing war which we have all been involved in, this Congress, the past Congress, the President, the administration. No amount of politics, no political rhetoric here on the floor over the next 2 or 3 days, no political rhetoric between the Presidential candidates in this campaign we are involved with will win this war.

□ 1330

Mr. Chairman, it is not something that will be won in 1 year, with one master plan and with one new concept. It will be won with the overall concept and effort that we have been involved with. We can win, and we will win it. The legislation before us can be improved, and it will be improved, I am sure, by amendments over the next 2 or 3 days which will enhance that legislation and, I believe, give us a great boost in winning that war.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCOLLUM. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to rise in support of H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988 and I commend the leadership on both sides of the aisle for their work in formulating this bipartisan, comprehensive measure and for bringing it to the floor of the House for consideration, and particularly the Speaker, Mr. WRIGHT, and the distinguished minority leader, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL], and the distinguished majority leader, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY], the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS], the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. EDWARDS], the gentleman from Florida [Mr. McCOLLUM], and the distinguished chairman of our Select Committee on Narcotics, the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL], and the distinguished chairman of the Judiciary's Subcommittee on Crime, and the chairman of our Foreign Affairs Task Force on Narcotics, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES].

This measure builds upon the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986 and authorizes urgently needed resources for drug crop eradication, for interdiction, for local law enforcement, treatment, and most importantly, for education. H.R. 5210 would authorize $6.1 billion for fiscal year 1989, a significant increase in resources over the $2.7 billion provided by the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986.

H.R. 5210 includes many proposals that are essential to a coherent and effective national narcotics strategy. The bill expresses clearly and unequivocally the sense of Congress in opposition to the legalization of drugs; it streamlines and increases drug enforcement assistance to local jurisdictions; it establishes new drug prevention programs targeted at youth gangs and at runaways; authorizes $1.5 billion for treatment of those who have acquired AIDS through IV-drug use, as recommended by the President's AIDS Commission, and calls for a Western Hemispheric Summit Conference on Drugs.

The significant 1986 Anti-Drug Act made substantial progress but did not win the war against drugs and this 1988 Anti-Drug Act alone cannot win this war. We are in a long-term struggle against the curse of drugs with the soul of our Nation at stake. The American people, in poll after poll, indicate that they view drug trafficking and drug abuse as the most important issue facing this country. And with good reason.

Illegal drugs have overwhelmed our Nation. No neighborhood, town, city, or school, is immune from its evil effects. Drug-related crime and violence have made bloody shootouts an everyday event in some areas. Millions of Americans have lost control of their lives and become addicted to drugs.

Mr. Chairman, I have one major concern regarding H.R. 5210—a concern we must all address—and that is the question of where will the money come from to underwrite these worthy initiatives? Is it going to come from the Defense Department? Are we going to have to tap into the entitlement programs? I must remind my colleagues that a bill for this urgently needed drug initiative will be due. In that regard, I recently proposed an excise tax measure that would have increased the tax on beer by only 1 penny a can, on cigarettes by 2 cents per pack, and 3 cents on a bottle of wine, a modest increase that would have raised more than $1 billion and was virtually no impact on the taxpayer. I urge my colleagues to bear in mind that the American people fully support greater efforts to wage a war on drugs but they are entitled to know where the scarce dollars are coming from to underwrite this initiative.

The war against drugs has many fronts and we must fight on all of them simultaneously. If our efforts are sustained over an extended period of time and if we provide our frontline troops—the law enforcement officers, the drug educators, and the treatment, rehabilitation and prevention specialists with the urgently needed resources—then we will be able to make a difference in reducing the supply and demand for drugs. Mr. Chairman, this legislation before the House is an important step in the right direction in waging our war against drugs and I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to cast aside political differences and to expeditiously resolve our differing views and to present to our Nation a strong unified strategy in stamping out this evil which is undermining our social institutions and which is killing so many of our young people.

Mr. Chairman, again I commend the gentleman from Florida [Mr. McCollum] for his industrious work on this measure, and I hope we are going to be able to fully support what is now before us. I want to thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentleman from New York [Mr. Gilman]. His effort has been indeed a measure of great accomplishment on his part, both now and for a long time in the past on this issue. It has been a tremendous compliment to us that he has spent so much time on this issue, and I thank him for his time.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of title II, the Education and Labor Committee title of the bill. In the most recent annual Gallup poll of the public's attitude toward the public schools, 32 percent identified the use of drugs by students as the biggest problem facing local schools. This is the third consecutive year in which the public has identified drug abuse as the biggest local school problem. Lack of discipline scored a distant second, whereas in 1986 only 2 percentage points separated the two issues in the minds of the public.

The United States has the highest rate of drug use among young people of the world's industrialized nations. More than half [57 percent] of last year's high school seniors have tried an illicit drug, and more than a third have tried illicit drugs other than marijuana. No wonder then, that the public has become more acutely aware of drug abuse as a problem in our schools. The Gallup poll also revealed that there is general confidence in the schools' ability to deal with this societal problem.

In title II of this bill, H.R. 5210, the Education and Labor Committee attempted to address the need for greater education, information and outreach with respect to drug abuse and prevention. These efforts will come through a variety of programs including programs for youth gangs, incarcerated individuals, children of alcoholics, disadvantaged youth, runaway and homeless youth, and participants in the WIC Supplemental Food Program.

The problem of drugs cannot be addressed by focusing on the supply side only. Attention must be given to the demand as well. The programs authorized in title II complement those activities included in the 1986 Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act, a program extended earlier this year as part of Public Law 100-297, the Augustus F. Hawkins-Robert T. Stafford Elementary and Secondary School Improvement Amendments of 1988.

Drug abuse results in costs related not only to higher health care costs, drug-related crime and violence and lost productivity, but in the number of lives lost unnecessarily. The effects of the problem are being felt across all economic levels and age groups. We must face this problem with a comprehensive approach which allows communities to develop a coordinated effort toward arresting the problem.

I would also like to address my remarks briefly to title IV, which concerned the drug-free workplace requirements imposed upon Federal grantees and contractors.

When the Education and Labor Committee considered its portion of the drug bill, I was successful in attaching an amendment requiring Federal grantees and contractors to have in place a drug-free workplace policy which is administered in good faith. Shortly thereafter, the Government Operations Committee reported its drug-free workplace bill, which imposed a similar, albeit more detailed, requirement. On their face, the two bills appeared to contain substantial differences. But, in spirit, they were virtually identical.

Because of this commonality of intent, I am pleased to inform the House that we have resolved our differences and the drug bill, therefore, contains a single unified approach to this problem. My principal concern with the Government Operations bill was with its prescriptiveness. I was afraid that it would place certain hurdles before a grantee or contractor which would be both administratively and financially burdensome. To create such a burden would be particularly inappropriate since it is so obvious that employers today already realize that it is in their own best interests to maintain a drug-free workplace.

With this in mind, Chairman Hawkins and I worked very closely with the Government Operations Committee to modify the most potentially troublesome provisions. Most of these have now been clarified with committee report language which will dispel any potential ambiguities. Meanwhile, the text of the bill has been mofified to remove the employee certification requirement, which was identified by members of the business community as the single most troublesome aspect of the bill.

In working out our differences, a key role was played by the original author of this requirement, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. Walker. He is certainly to be commended for bringing this whole area to the attention of the House and for having the perseverance to see that something is actually done about the problem.

The result of all of our efforts is a drug-free workplace requirement that every Member of this House should be able to support.

Finally, I want to thank the chairman of the committee, Mr. Hawkins, for his leadership in this area of grave concern. His willingness to work with the minority members of the Education and Labor Committee is appreciated.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL].

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. ST GERMAIN], and I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman be allowed to yield blocks of time out of his allotted time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

(Mr. ST GERMAIN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ST GERMAIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ST GERMAIN. I yield to the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988. I would like to commend the majority leader and the members of the committees who shaped this legislation for their excellent work. The bill we have before us today is a reasonable and effective bill which will allow us to implement a comprehensive assault on drugs. It provides the means to help stop the flow of drugs into our Nation and to fight and punish those who produce and sell drugs. It also provides the means to help prevent our children from being seduced by drugs and to treat those who are caught in the nightmare of addiction.

Our Nation can ill-afford to pay the high price of drug use any longer. No longer can we afford to lose the contributions of our citizens whose drug addiction diverts their energies and talents. We cannot afford the deaths caused by drugs or the shattered lives of the innocent victims of drug-related crimes. We cannot afford to have our young people turn to drugs from despair or have their talents wasted on running messages for drug dealers. And we cannot allow the continued tragedy of our Nation's babies being addicts before they have even taken their first breath.

H.R. 5210 is a comprehensive assault on the drugs which are tearing apart our Nation. It provides the tools to halt the drugs which are flooding our borders. The bill will improve international cooperation to fight drug production and trafficking. The bill also increases drug enforcement assistance to State and local governments to provide them the tools they need to fight drugs on the streets and in our neighborhoods.

Furthermore, this legislation responds to the challenge of prevention. No matter what we do to stop the trafficking of drugs, it will be ineffective if we do not lessen the demand for them. H.R. 5210 does more than provide a catchy slogan. It contains important provisions to help reach and educate our citizens and our youth. H.R. 5210 also provides much needed funding for increased rehabilitation and treatment programs for our citizens who are suffering from abuse and addiction.

Mr. Chairman, we are making some strides in our war against drugs. But, much, much more needs to be done and we cannot afford to stop now. We must develop responsive, effective measures which will truly reduce drug abuse in America. This bill is an important step in that direction. I urge my colleagues to support this measure.

Mr. ST GERMAIN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988. In particular, I would direct my colleagues attention to title I of the bill—the Money Laundering Control Amendments of 1988 which was unanimously ordered reported out of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs on June 9, 1988.

Mr. Chairman, it is news to no one that drugs generate massive sums of cash. This cash must be laundered—slipped into the mainstream of commerce—if the drug traffickers are to be successful. We intend to make these laundering operations as difficult and costly as possible. We cannot allow financial institutions, insured by the U.S. Government, to be used—whether by accident or design.

The subject of money laundering and the use of financial institutions to launder funds derived from illegal sources such as drug trafficking is not new to the committee. In fact, over 18 years ago, the Committee on Banking concentrated its efforts on ways to combat drug trafficking, organized and white collar crime, tax evasion and other crimes in which criminals use the Nation's financial institutions as a means to conceal or launder funds.

Just 2 years ago, the Banking Committee made a major contribution in combating drug trafficking and money laundering. The Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986, Public Law 99-570, contains the Comprehensive Money Laundering Prevention Act—which constituted the Banking Committee's efforts in combating drug trafficking. Although effective, we are mindful that certain improvements to that act need to be made. Title I in today's bill reflects those needed improvements. The provisions of title I will improve law enforcement efforts to get at the drug trafficker and money launderer without unduly burdening the recordkeeping or reporting requirements of financial institutions.

In addition, the committee has in certain instances amended the Right to Financial Privacy Act [RFPA] in an effort to prevent insider abuse and fraud within our Nation's depository institutions and to prevent drug dealers from taking over these entities.

As reported out by the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, title I of the bill would do the following:

AMENDMENTS TO THE BANK SECRECY ACT

First. It prohibits a financial institution from issuing or selling a bank check, cashier's check, traveler's check, or money order to any individual in connection with a transaction that involves cash of $3,000 or more unless such individual either has an account with the institution or the individual furnishes identification as prescribed in regulations by the Secretary of the Treasury. In addition, the institution is required to maintain a record of such transaction and report to the Secretary, upon request, the purchase of such instruments by any individual.

All too often a money launderer purchases these monetary instruments for less than $10,000 in cash to avoid kicking off the currency transaction report [CTR] required to be filed by financial institutions for cash transactions of more than $10,000. For the money launderer, carrying cashier's checks or money orders is much more convenient and easier to dispose of than having to carry an equal amount of cash around in his pockets. The Department of Treasury agrees that section 1002 will be a useful deterrent to the practice of smurfing through the purchase of monetary instruments and will not be overly burdensome for financial institutions.

Second. Section 1003 authorizes Treasury to target financial institutions in certain geographic locations for a certain period of time, involving cash transactions at an amount less than the current $10,000 threshold. The purpose of this section—which has been favorably endorsed by the Treasury Department—is to use the authority of the Bank Secrecy Act to respond to epidemic drug money laundering in certain locations that: First, have been identified by law enforcement; and second, where launderers are dealing in transactions below the $10,000 reporting amount. The reports would be analyzed separately from other currency transaction reports on the spot in an effort to break up the money laundering rings.

It should be noted that this provision does not automatically lower the more than $10,000 threshold reporting requirement for cash transactions required by financial institutions under current law. Only those institutions specifically targeted for a limited duration would be affected by this new provision.

AMENDMENTS TO THE RIGHT TO FINANCIAL PRIVACY ACT

Third. Section 1004 amends the Right to Financial Privacy Act [RFPA]. That act was intended to protect the customer of financial institutions from unwarranted intrusion into his or her financial records—while at the same time permitting law enforcement to conduct legitimate investigative activity. The Right to Financial Privacy Act seeks to strike a balance between the privacy rights of bank customers and the need for law enforcement officials to obtain financial records in legitimate investigations.

Section 1004 provides a limited exception to the notification requirement under RFPA and would permit a financial institution or a supervisory agency to provide the financial records of any officer, director, employee, controlling shareholder, or any major borrower from such institution whenever there is reason to believe that records are relevant to possible criminal activity against the financial institution or supervisory agency by such individuals. I would hasten to add that in the case of the major borrower exception, the records of such individuals would be provided only if there is reason to believe that such borrower may be acting in concert with any officer, director, employee, or controlling shareholder of a financial institution.

Mr. Chairman, this provision will help law enforcement authorities to detect money-laundering schemes that may be drug related and would help prevent bank fraud and other insider abuse which has taken a heavy toll on this Nation's deposit insurance funds.

I would point out to my colleagues that the Right to Financial Privacy Act, which was reported out of the Banking Committee in 1978, was never meant to protect these insiders who violate their position of trust—and their coconspirators. Under present law, the insider under investigation often has access to his own as well as his coconspirator's vital bank records and can alter, destroy, or conceal them if notified that some information has been transferred to a law enforcement agency, usually by way of a criminal referral.

The Department of Justice and the Subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer and Monetary Affairs of the Government Operations Committee agree that insider criminal misconduct in financial institutions today involve both insiders and borrowers acting in concert. There is mounting evidence that more major borrowers defrauding financial institutions are part of organized criminal elements and when acting in concert with insiders of financial institutions—can effectively kill major criminal investigations.

Section 1004 is a very limited exception to the notification requirement under the RFPA and will provide law enforcement officials the vital information they need to detect, prosecute, and convict all criminals—including those who are drug traffickers and dealers.

In addition, Mr. Chairman, in an effort to respond to the concerns of financial institutions who are hesitant to make criminal referrals or turn over evidence even when they are victimized by an insider because of potential civil liability, the good faith defense from civil liability available to financial institutions under present law is made applicable whenever records—exempted by the insider and major borrower provisions of this section—are provided to law enforcement agencies. Further, any State or local law which would otherwise prohibit disclosure of records of insiders and affected major borrowers is preempted.

NEW CIVIL MONEY PENALTIES

Fourth. Section 1006 provides civil money penalties for failure to comply with certain recordkeeping requirements. A civil penalty up to $10,000 per violation per day is imposed on insured banks, thrifts, and other financial institutions for a willful violation of recordkeeping regulations pursuant to the Bank Secrecy Act. Violations of the recordkeeping provisions of the Bank Secrecy Act can be as harmful to law enforcement efforts to eradicate drug trafficking as violations of the reporting provisions of the BSA.

However, the committee trusts that Treasury will exercise its good judgment when imposing penalties for recordkeeping violations.

EXPORT-IMPORT BANK FINANCING AMENDMENT

Fifth. Under present law, the Eximbank is legally prohibited from financing sales of defense articles to Third World countries. There is, however, certain equipment which can be used for both defense and antidrug purposes. In order to ensure that all possible resources are made available to combat drug trafficking, an exception to the current Eximbank prohibition is provided in section 1011.

In order to maintain a balance between the bank's traditional role of helping exporters and its new role of helping with the war on drugs, this provison limits antidrug assistance to 10 percent of the Eximbank's overall guarantee authority per fiscal year.

Further, to ensure that the sale of defense articles or services would be in the national interest of the United States, the President shall take into account wheher the sale would: First, be consistent with the antinarcotics policy of the United States; second, involve the end use of a defense article or service in a major drug-transit country; and third, be made to a country with a democratic form of government.

MULTILATERAL BANK PROVISIONS IN DRUG BILL

Sixth. Provisions encouraging the increased direct participation of the multilateral development banks in the fight against illicit narcotics are also included in the Banking Committee title. Specifically, the U.S. Executive Directors of the World Bank and Inter-American Development Bank are required to seek the establishment of targeted loan programs to reduce the economic dependence on illicit narcotics in the developing countries. We call on these banks to pursue those programs which would serve to provide legal economic alternatives to income derived from the illegal drug trade. The committee believes that such a role is most appropriate for the MDB's. The plain truth is that drugs will continue to be produced unless the poor peasant farmer who grows the coca is provided with alternative means for acquiring the basic necessities of life. The MDB's can help provide these alternative means.

Let me just briefly comment on the other provision of the legislation relating to the MDB's. Section 3050 of the Foreign Affairs Committee title amends the Foreign Assistance Act by removing the MDB's from the country certification process. The purpose of removing the banks from this process is to streamline the certification procedure and remove unnecessary delays regarding resolutions of decertification. The U.S. "no" votes required in the MDB's if a country is not certified have little practical effect in any case. However, the so-called Rangel amendment requiring a negative vote by the United States if a country is making inadequate efforts to stem the flow of illegal drugs into the United States, remains in effect. Finally, I would point out that, through an understanding between myself and Chairman FASCELL, the presence of this provision in the Foreign Affairs title has no jurisdictional implications.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the ranking minority member of the committee, Mr. WYLIE and other members of the committee—both majority and minority—for their full cooperation for the work the committee has done under title I.

Only with this kind of participation and full cooperation can we truly combat effectively the drug epidemic that unfortunately engulfs this Nation.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. TORRES].

Mr. TORRES. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of the omnibus drug abuse bill. This issue affects every citizen of this country as the plague of drug abuse and related crimes reaches everywhere; onto our streets, into our schools, and across the borders of our Nation.

There is no singular solution to the drug problem and it remains an ongoing battle in our society. In 1986, with enactment of the Omnibus Drug Act, Congress took a major step to provide the ammunition to step up the war on drugs. The bill today provides additional critically needed resources and programs to continue to combat drugs on all fronts, from education and treatment to crop eradication.

I am particularly pleased to note that this bill also includes important money laundering provisions which strike at the very essence of narcotics related crime. As a member of the House Banking Committee, I have been advancing these proposals for a number of years. Working with the chairman and my colleagues on the committee, the Treasury Department, the FBI, and the DEA, we have significantly strengthened provisions of the 1986 money laundering statute.

Southern California, in particular, is awash with dirty narcotics related cash. It is estimated, perhaps conservatively, that $1 billion in drug generated cash is being laundered annually in the Los Angeles area alone, which I represent, through a variety of money laundering schemes. Our Nation's banks are being caught up in these schemes.

The money laundering provisions in this bill will allow the Treasury Department to target individuals banks or banks in a geographic area for stricter enforcement of bank recordkeeping and reporting requirements for cash transactions. In addition, in order to purchase certain monetary instruments, an individual will either have to have an account at the bank or present identification. This identification requirement will make it much more difficult for money launderers to carry out their schemes.

Mr. Chairman, these enhancements will help provide law enforcement personnel with the tools they need to prosecute and penalize those engaged in money-laundering operations. By doing so, the bill goes a long way to shut down the drug lords in our society. I urge my colleagues to lend their support for these provisions and the entire drug bill. It is critically needed legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair wishes to state that the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. ST GERMAIN] has 45 seconds remaining.

Mr. ST GERMAIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO] is recognized for 45 seconds.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Chairman, H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act, is a good bill that, with the adoption of several amendments, can become a great bill. I want to commend the committees that worked on this legislation for their hard work and diligent effort in putting together a package of such a comprehensive nature. I also want to commend the Rules Committee and its chairman, the distinguished gentleman from Florida, Senator PEPPER, for allowing such a fair and equitable rule on the bill which allows for 36 amendments to be considered.

There has been some criticism that we are rushing this legislation too quickly. I reject that argument, for I do not believe that we can move fast enough in the war on drugs. Nor can we deal with the drug problem by using the same old ineffective approaches that have been tried in the past.

Americans are deeply concerned about the drug problem. And in every poll taken about the issues affecting the American people, the issue of drugs is always at the top of Americans' concerns.

One of the provisions in the legislation that I support strongly is the 7-day waiting period before anyone buying a handgun would be permitted to take possession of the firearm. This waiting period will allow local law enforcement authorities to check the background of the purchaser to make certain that the sale would not violate Federal or State law. This provision would go a long way toward keeping handguns out of the hands of criminals. While it is true that not all criminals buy their weapons over the counter, a Justice Department study has shown that more than 20 percent of criminals do buy weapons from registered gun dealers. And in New Jersey alone, more than 500 convicted felons a year buy handguns over the counter using their own names.

The 7-day waiting period is not going to solve the problem of criminals obtaining guns, but it will have an effect on the problem. And even if we can stop only a few guns a year from getting in the hands of criminals, isn't it worth the effort? Civil libertarians often say, "it is better to acquit 100 guilty people than to convict one innocent person." Let me suggest then, isn't it better to stop one murder by requiring a 7-day waiting period, than it is to allow no waiting period at all, which may lead to hundreds of murders? Isn't a 7-day waiting period a small price to pay for stopping crime?

It should be pointed out that this provision in the legislation applies only to handguns. It will not stop the hunter who suddenly remembers that duck season opens the day after tomorrow and needs to get a new shotgun for the season, unless the hunter wants to go after duck with a .22 caliber snub-nose revolver.

As I said earlier in my statement, this is a good bill, it can be turned into a great bill with the adoption of several amendments. The gentleman from New York [Mr. WORTLEY] and I will offer an amendment that will allow the Justice Department to obtain records on money laundering cases from other Federal agencies without requiring that the Justice Department notify the person whose records are being obtained. This amendment is important because it will enable the Justice Department to build a case against the drug dealer who is laundering money without the drug dealer knowing about the investigation. Under existing law, the Justice Department must notify the drug dealer of the investigation, which of course, gives the drug dealer ample time to flee the country or go into hiding. This is an important amendment that needs to be added to this bill.

I will also be supporting the amendment to add the death penalty for drug related killings. This amendment will allow the death penalty for anyone who intentionally kills a person during the course of committing or in furtherance of a drug felony, or while attempting to avoid the apprehension for or service of a prison sentence for a drug felony.

Mr. Chairman, it had long been my intention to offer a death penalty amendment to the drug bill. I had even gone so far as to instruct my staff to work on an amendment, and I have had conversations with other Members concerning my introduction of such an amendment. However, I felt that since I am not a member of the Judiciary Committee, the committee which would have jurisdiction over the death penalty provision, I decided that once I was certain that a death penalty amendment would be offered that I would let a member of the Judiciary Committee offer that amendment.

Pride of authorship is not important in this legislation nor with this amendment. Stopping drug dealing in the United States of America is what is important. And I intend to support every provision in the legislation and every amendment that will move toward that goal. The American people want a strong antidrug bill. The American people want strong criminal penalties against drug dealers. The House of Representatives is the house of the people, and we should give the people what they want.

☐ 1345

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE], and I ask unanimous consent he be allowed to yield blocks of time to other Members.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Chairman, the legislation that we are debating today is one of the most important the 100th Congress will consider. Everyday we read about the drug problem—almost every night another homicide results from drugs. It has been estimated that Americans spend $80 to $150 billion a year on drugs. Organized crime, deeply involved in the drug trade, earns anywhere from $40 to $60 billion a year. As one can see this is a problem of massive proportions, and that is why this legislation designed to curb drug use and punish drug dealers is critically important. The problem is so bad that we need to try in many ways to combat drug use.

One method of combating drugs in the financial community is to limit the ability of drug dealers to launder money. This too is a sizable problem. An estimated $5 to $15 billion a year is laundered through financial institutions every year. In 1986, the Congress began the fight against this problem by improving the Bank Secrecy Act. Under those changes, we made it a crime to structure transactions to avoid that act's reporting requirements. Moreover, we clarified that financial institutions could give limited information about accounts to Federal investigators where criminal activity is suspected.

It has been 2 years since the passage of Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986, and having had a chance to review the implementation of that law, the Treasury and Justice Departments have recommended some changes to build on the effectiveness of the law.

Title I of this bill will require that some limited information be recorded by the financial institution when issuing travelers checks, cashier checks, and other similar instruments over $3,000. Additionally, the Treasury Secretary will have the authority to require more extensive transaction information for transactions of less than $10,000 in targeted areas. For example, if the Secretary determines that money laundering is worse in the Los Angeles area—then he can require stiffer reporting requirements. I think this is a sensible provision.

This legislation will also make an important change in the Right to Financial Privacy Act. For the first time, law enforcement authorities will have the ability to review financial records of bank insiders without having to notify them that their records are being reviewed for possible criminal activity. As the Justice Department testified before our committee, they had a file cabinet full of cases where the suspect headed for the airport immediately after being notified that his records had been subpoenaed. Insiders are designated as officers, directors, employees, controlling shareholders, and in some cases, major borrowers.

Finally, the chairman mentioned title I allows the Export-Import Bank to provide financing for sales of military equipment, but only if the equipment is to be used to combat narcotics. A study is authorized as to whether $100 bills should be removed from circulation and also to improve lending to Third World nations to lessen dependence on the drug trade. Title I is a good title, and will improve law enforcement in the money laundering area and I commend Chairman ST GERMAIN for leadership on this title. It definitely adds strength to this bill.

AMENDMENTS TO TITLE I

Mr. Chairman, let me also discuss the two amendments that will be offered to this title. First, my Banking Committee colleagues Mr. ANNUNZIO and Mr. WORTLEY will offer an amendment that will allow a government agency to transfer financial records to the Attorney General or State law enforcement authorities without notifying the suspect. Why is this needed? Let me give you an example. Let's assume that a Federal agency in the course of routine examination uncovers some suspected fraudulent activity in an account. In order for a criminal investigation to begin they have to give these records to the Justice Department or a State authority. What happens when they inform the suspect that his records are in the hands of the Justice Department—the suspect is on the first plane to Europe or the Cayman Islands. You can see why we need to allow this transfer without notification.

The second amendment to be offered by my good friend Mr. WORTLEY is purely technical in nature. Current law requires the actual financial records of a suspect to be presented to a grand jury. Physical presentation, however, sometimes means traveling miles to a warehouse to simply look at stacks of records. How many jurors are going to physically review a warehouse full of records. You guessed it right if you said none. What the jurors will rely on is a summary of the records. This amendment would simply allow a summary of those records to be substituted for the actual records, when presenting the actual records is physically impractical. Again, the Justice Department testified that in many cases grand juries only sit for 1 day a month—that day can be wasted visiting a warehouse full of records. Finally, Criminal Rules of Procedure already protect against any tampering of subpoenaed records. Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support both of these amendments. Both have been requested by the administration, and are badly needed to combat drug-related crimes.

AMENDMENT TO TITLE VI

Mr. Chairman, later on in this debate, some amendments will be offered to assist HUD in cleaning up the drug problem in public housing. A constituent wrote me on this issue earlier this year, and the letter read as follows:

> The drug problem is worse than ever here. People live here who are not on leases. I have told my friends that live here, that there is hope that we can clean this place up, and make it the nice place it once was. With God's help and yours I have told my neighbors that we can clean it up.

Well we can start the cleanup by kicking drug dealers out of public housing and putting them in jail where they belong. Representative DIOGUARDI's amendment will provide HUD with the authority to coordinate and provide training in drug prevention efforts for the purposes of establishing drug-free public housing. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment when it is offered.

This amendment will strengthen an otherwise excellent bill.

Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WORTLEY].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. WORTLEY] is recognized for 4 minutes.

Mr. WORTLEY. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased that the Congress is finally undertaking one of the most important pieces of legislation it has faced in the 100th Congress. Every person in the United States is touched in one way or another by the massive problem we are having with drugs. From the horrors of heroin addicts, to cocaine in the office, to pot in our schools, to drivers on our highways, to murdered police officers in our streets, we all yearn for a society that will be free of drugs.

Over the last several years, we have developed an increased awareness of the extent of the drug problem, the damage it can cause to individuals, families, and neighborhoods, the effect it has on productivity, and the connection between drug use and crime. This increased awareness has led to the necessity of what I call a four-pronged attack on drugs, all of which are interrelated.

We must make every attempt at eradicating all drug production at home and abroad. This includes the spraying of marijuana fields and limiting the diversion of cocaine-refining chemicals made in the United States to laboratories in drug-producing countries, such as Colombia. Moreover, we can halt drug production abroad by assisting, in both monetary and human terms, those countries in locating and dismantling drug processing sites.

The next leg of the drug war is the interception of illegal shipments of drugs entering the United States. We need to give any and all assistance, including the military, to stop this importation. I am disturbed that the bill does little to allow our Armed Forces to lend its support to drug interdiction efforts. However, I am pleased to see that the drug bill bolsters the U.S. Coast Guard interdiction efforts by appropriating money specifically for marine and air drug interdiction assets, including surveillance aircraft.

The foreign affairs title also calls for the Organization of American States to establish an antinarcotics force. With $10 million set aside for this effort if other members of the OAS lend their support, this could prove to be a substantial investment to combat what Secretary of State George Shultz properly calls the "pirates of the 20th century." The drug bill additionally assists allies by allocating some funds, by way of the Department of Defense, to train Latin American defense forces and police in antinarcotic techniques.

We must shore up our existing laws through more rigorous law enforcement which, unfortunately, is not adequately addressed in this bill. We should also pass tougher legislation to serve as a deterrent and at the same time rightly punish those who insist on dealing in drugs. This includes heightened penalties for production, distribution and use of all drugs—including marijuana—complete forfeiture of all assets, increased support for all law enforcement officials including prosecutors and a general concept of "zero tolerance." I would also urge my colleagues to support the amendment that would give the death penalty to drug traffickers and kingpins who cause the loss of human life.

A solid amendment to this drug bill is what many refer to as "user accountability." This provides that persons with drug possession convictions are ineligible for Federal benefits, contracts, or licenses for 5 years unless they have completed a drug rehabilitation program. Furthermore, there are 10 years of ineligibility after 1 conviction for drug traffickers. User accountability is also demonstrated by suspending drivers' licenses for drug offenses—I have to ask what could better deter our youth from experimenting with drugs?

Civil fines, in addition to current criminal penalties, would also deter many "casual users" from using drugs. These fines, up to 25 percent of the person's income, would give prosecutors another tool as they would not have to prove guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Revenue collected from civil fines could also offset the enormous cost of this bill and avoid sequestration.

I will be offering two amendments to the drug bill on the floor of the House of Representatives that will strengthen law enforcement by cracking down on money laundering, a practice that drug kingpins and traffickers have mastered to an art. I would like to ask my colleagues to take a close, hard look at my amendments. I sincerely believe that they will greatly add to the current bill and will help our law enforcement officials investigate and prosecute drug dealers who launder money.

I am pleased that an important provision was included that permits the Export-Import Bank to guarantee bank credits for the export of military equipment, if the military hardware is used "primarily for antinarcotic purposes." This arrangement is especially crucial to countries such as Colombia who are shifting from a drug-producing to a drug-consuming society. Ironically, this has forced those governments to more fully realize the harmful effects of drugs. Unfortunately, those governments do not have the financial wherewithal to thoroughly combat the "narco-trafficants." This Export/Import Bank guarantee will ensure that countries like Colombia can more effectively secure loans in order to buy equipment to combat the drug menace.

The fourth, and most important, leg of the attack is demand reduction, to convince people, especially our youth, that drugs are bad and can kill. This is also the broadest part as it requires pieces of the above three legs along with education, prevention, rehabilitation, drug-free workplaces and assistance to individuals, including pregnant women, who are in special need of aid.

Public education about the ills of drugs will be greatly enhanced as many urban areas will receive direct block grants from the Federal Government. This will bypass the normal path of allocating money to the States, where much of the money gets bogged down in bureaucratic redtape, or is diverted to other favored programs. These block grants will especially help education children in our schools, where all too often experimenting with drugs leads to abusing drugs. A higher level of education will directly lead to enhanced prevention which will in turn lead to a reduced demand.

The Congress is faced with an excellent opportunity to enact new comprehensive antidrug legislation that will combat the growing menace of illegal narcotics. The war on drugs will undoubtedly need constant attention and updating from our courts, communities, families, churches, coaches, legislators, and the public in general. Through hard work, and through direct and indirect pressure from all branches of government, we can overcome this scourge of our society.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. HAWKINS], and I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from California be allowed to yield blocks of that time out of his allotted time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. HAWKINS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

One of the best ways to eradicate drugs from our communities is through a coordinated and comprehensive effort of education, prevention, and supportive counseling and other social services.

Title II of the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988 provides a good beginning for education and social service programs to augment community resources in the war on drugs and to intervene directly with at-risk populations.

It authorizes the Secretary of Health and Human Services to target funds to fight the epidemic of youth gangs which commit drug-related crimes, by supporting educational outreach by local law enforcement, as well as informing gang members and their families of the availability of treatment and rehabilitation services.

The Secretary of HHS is also authorized to make grants to conduct a free-standing National Youth Sports Program [NYSP] targeted to economically disadvantaged boys and girls, a key target population for efforts to address the demand for illegal drugs.

The boys and girls receive instruction in sports, and education and counseling in such areas as drug and alcohol abuse prevention, and personal health and nutrition. Each youngster receives a free medical examination and followup, and a free daily nutritious meal.

The activities authorized include training staff in the most effective methods of drug abuse education and prevention and involving parents of NYSP participants in the drug abuse education and prevention activities.

Title II would increase the number of colleges and universities currently participating in the NCAA-sponsored program—138 in 1988—by about 30 a year for 3 years. Currently, the NYSP is conducted only in the summer, but we could make it into a year-round program.

Title II also authorizes a new program, administered by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention [OJJDP] in the Justice Department, with two components. Part 1 provides formula grants to States to further the development of more effective juvenile justice programs targeted to the illicit use of drugs by youth and to provide juveniles and their families referral to education, prevention, treatment, and rehabilitation.

The Administrator of JJDPA is also authorized to make grants, on a competitive basis to: First, prevent or reduce juvenile delinquency by drug abuse education; second, develop community outreach and counseling programs; and third, provide training and technical assistance relating to innovative and effective programs.

Title II establishes a new program to prevent and reduce illicit drug use among runaway youth. It authorizes the Secretary of HHS to make competitive grants to: First, provide counseling to runaway youth and their families, and to homeless youth; second, develop and support peer counseling programs and community education programs; and third, provide similar assistance to runaway and homeless youth in rural areas.

The programs authorized reflect the prevailing professional view that substance abuse problems among youth are frequently a consequence of similar problems within the family or an attempt to cope with family problems. Therefore, substance abuse problems of youth must be addressed in a comprehensive manner.

The bill also ensures that women receiving nutrition assistance through the WIC program are given drug abuse education; that the Secretary of Education be allowed to fund innovative alcohol abuse education programs; that States may use Adult Education Act funds for drug abuse education programs for incarcerated individuals; and that VISTA fund innovative community-based volunteer demonstration projects which provide drug abuse education to youth during the summer months.

These are extremely modest programs that are intended to build on the Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act which has already been reauthorized. They merit the strong support of all Members.

I am deeply concerned, however, about a proposal which came before the Education and Labor Committee.

The committee has twice been faced with amendments that would, if adopted, prevent students convicted of drug-related offenses from receiving student financial assistance under title IV of the Higher Education Act. On both occasions during the consideration of two different bills, the committee rejected these amendments. The majority of the committee believed that this is an ineffective deterrent to drug abuse and that enacting such user accountability provisions would prove to be an obstacle to rehabilitation.

It is perverse to deny offenders particular benefits while other convicted criminals continue to receive them. Do the proponents of such proposals mean to imply that we find even a relatively minor drug-related offense more heinous than murder, rape, and other violent felonies?

Rather than deter drug use or provide an incentive to rehabilitation, user accountability has the potential to permanently condemn drug users to addiction and inferior status in our society, and increase, not reduce, our Nation's drug problem.

I, therefore, urge you to reject the amendment to be offered by Mr. McCollum which punishes victims for their inability to say "no" to drugs.

Instead, I strongly urge you to support the Montgomery-Dingell-Rangel alternative which is a much more thoughtful approach to user accountability. Its aim is to push drug users into rehabilitation and treatment programs rather than into the streets.

□ 1400

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. Moorhead].

Mr. MOORHEAD. Mr. Speaker, the drug problem in America continues to have the dimensions of a plague. It has and will continue to scar each of us physically and economically until the scourge is defeated by the combined best efforts of each of us. The International Narcotics Control Strategy Report, issued by the State Department, indicates that every major drug-producing nation increased production of drugs in 1986 and 1987.

More potent forms of drugs are making the war more difficult as crack and black-tar heroin continue to infiltrate our cities and towns. In 1986 more than 150 tons of cocaine, 12 tons of heroin, 60,000 tons of marijuana, and 200 tons of hashish, entered the United States. Since then the demand has increased. In 1987, Americans spent $140 billion on illegal drugs. The social and economic costs of drug use—prevention, treatment, related crime, violence, death, property destruction, lost productivity, and drug enforcement—totals an additional $100 billion.

The Federal Government is doing more than it ever has in the past to fight drugs but clearly enough has not been done. In that regard, H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988, is an important and timely initiative that will provide additional resources for the war on drugs. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Hughes] and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. McCollum], the chairman and ranking member of the Judiciary Subcommittee on Crime are to be commended for their work on H.R. 5210. By the same token, the distinguished majority and minority leaders, Mr. Foley and Mr. Michel, have been instrumental in fashioning this important piece of legislation, as well as the gentleman from New York, Mr. Hamilton Fish, the ranking Republican on the full Judiciary Committee.

Earlier this year I attended hearings in Los Angeles conducted by the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Crime on gangs and their nationwide drug-selling operations. The hearings contributed several worthwhile ideas that have since been incorporated in H.R. 5210, such as the establishment of a new drug prevention program targeted at youth gangs.

When the legislation was being considered by the Judiciary Committee, I added an amendment to provide $1.4 billion in funding for the Federal prison system for fiscal year 1989. My amendment was based on the recognition that overcrowding is currently the most serious problem confronting the Bureau of Prisons. Accordingly, as we consider initiatives such as H.R. 5210, that will clearly impact on the Federal inmate population, I believe that it is imperative that we provide the Bureau with the resources necessary to cope with an ever-increasing-inmate population.

At the present time our Federal prisons are 50 percent overcrowded. We also have the problem of letting prisoners out very early. I was approached not long ago by a constituent from my district whose sons were both drug dealers. He was complaining that they were let out after 2 months in jail, saying that they did not even have a chance to begin to try to reform them or to change their ways so that they would go directly out on the streets. We cannot allow this to happen.

I also introduced an amendment to increase criminal penalties for drug dealers operating in or near public parks. Although this amendment was not made in order by the Rules Committee, I am hopeful that down the road the concept will in some way be implemented as an important safeguard for our children, as has been a similar amendment that deals with the public schools.

Finally, it had been my intention to offer an amendment to H.R. 5210 that would modernize and consolidate the existing statutory provisions relating to the Marshals Service and to provide a clear statutory basis for its current responsibilities. This amendment is based on H.R. 3551, the U.S. Marshals Service Act, which was introduced by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Kastenmeier] and which I was pleased to cosponsor. It is my understanding that this amendment will be offered as part of a noncontroversial bloc amendment by the distinguished majority leader, Mr. Foley.

Additional amendments will be offered by my Republican colleagues to add the death penalty for those who commit murder during a drug felony, to change the exclusionary law to make it easier to convict drug offenders and to make drug users more accountable. Southern California is now the Nation's distribution center for PCP, heroin, and cocaine. In the past year, drug-related arrests in Los Angeles jumped nearly 20 percent. In 1987 over 7 tons of cocaine were seized by Los Angeles police.

It is important that we give support to our police forces and to the Border Patrol, which has done more to capture narcotics that have been sent to the United States at the border than any other law enforcement agency.

The abuse of dangerous drugs remains a visible and disturbing aspect of American life. We must continue to diligently pursue effective and responsible legislative solutions to combat one of the most pressing problems of our generation, the war on drugs.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SMITH] and I thank the gentleman for the distinguished job he has been doing to share with us section 3 of the bill.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SMITH] be allowed to yield blocks of time out of his allotted time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. SMITH of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. I want to commend the gentleman from New York for his continuous long-term battle in the war against drugs and his significant leadership in this fight.

Mr. Chairman, title III contains the contribution of the Foreign Affairs Committee. As chairman of the Task Force on International Narcotics Control, we have written much of what is in the foreign affairs title and the task force and the committee wholeheartedly endorse these proposals.

I think it is very, very important for those who are listening to this debate to understand that it is the Foreign Affairs Committee that was in the forefront in the international battle against narcotics for years. With the help of the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL], who years ago with others dreamed up a significant and important part of the battle, the Rangel-Gilman amendment, which cut off aid which makes the U.S. cooperation with other countries contingent on their cooperation with us, and other people, we have had some major and significant advances; but more is being grown, more is being thrown at us, and unfortunately we have not kept pace with the problem.

So in the 1986 omnibus antidrug bill, the Foreign Affairs Committee fashioned what I think was a very good package, and in 1988 once again we have contributed what I think is an important part of the total bill. It is one of the least costly in terms of dollars, but I think it can be utilized effectively in the fight against narcotics and drugs, which is the cheapest part of the fight, and that is eradication and interdiction.

Roughly half of the title consists of narcotics-related provisions of H.R. 3100, which is the foreign aid bill as passed by the House. Another portion is largely technical corrections designed to unify the standards used in the certification process for bilateral and multilateral aid and for trade.

I might say, Mr. Chairman, that this morning I did a 1-minute speech on how this particular administration unfortunately deals with the problem of certification by closing their eyes to it, waving away those people in foreign governments who are involved in drugs and corrupt practices.

The remainder of the title consists of modest new initiatives. The most significant include asking the OAS to review the need for a multinational regional antinarcotics force and regional strategy, with a hemisphere conference to follow if there is agreement on these concepts.

I might add in that regard, Mr. Chairman, just in the last few weeks we have seen a group known as IDEC, the International Drug Enforcement Conference, actually foster and develop and make a significant drug raid simultaneously in three different countries: Colombia, Peru, and Bolivia. With all those and other countries cooperating in the region, even Western European countries, this can work. The regional approach does work. They confiscated tons of cocaine, millions of dollars, put clandestine laboratories out of business and bombed clandestine airstrips. It can work if we get cooperation.

Another item is a special assistance package for Colombia, which is trying hard but suffering mightily under the drug traffickers and because of the connection between narcotics traffickers and terrorists, what we call narcoterrorism.

There is a process for determining which countries are major drug transit countries for the purposes of certification as to whether they receive foreign aid, a waiver of section 660 which prohibits the provision of weapons and ammunition to foreign antinarcotics police, so that we will be able to provide some training and some weaponry for people if they qualify, with appropriate human rights safeguards.

There is a prohibition on economic and military aid to drug traffickers, which may sound silly, but right now some drug traffickers have in fact applied for some AID grants.

It waives the Export-Import Bank's prohibition on financing military sales if the sales are for equipment to be used for antinarcotics purposes.

It makes the Secretary of State the coordinator of and the reporter on all American overseas antinarcotics aid, as he now does for antiterrorism aid. It requires the Secretary of State to revoke passports for convicted drug felons and authorizes the President to stamp travel documents of drug violators.

Finally, we authorize funds to the State Department to develop machinery for visas. This is a problem, because quite honestly drug traffickers who have valid passports who would otherwise need a visa cannot be discovered because some of our machines are not capable of having the information stored.

So we have done a number of things, which again will marginally help beyond where the Foreign Affairs Committee has already gone in terms of the last few years.

All of this, together with all the other items that are in this complete package, are significant when taken as a whole. If in fact this House passes, and I hope they do, this package, I believe it will go again further down the road in making the battle against drugs more winnable and more successful.

I think that if there is a place to commend people for having been involved in this fight for a long time, it is right here in the House of Representatives. The men and women who serve here, I believe, have been more attuned to the needs and the problems of this Government and of the governments around the world and have done more than anywhere else, not in the other body, not in the administration that have come and gone or are currently in power, but in this body there has been more of a significant response to the problem of drugs than anywhere else.

□ 1415

Mr. Speaker, a lot of the Members, my good friend, the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN], over on the other side, who was a cochair of the task force with me, have been involved for many years in fighting this battle. I am proud to be with them once again on an issue like this where with bipartisan support the American people know that somebody, at least, is going to stand up and lead the battle against drugs and try to win the war.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FASCELL. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 5210, the 1988 omnibus antidrug bill.

I am pleased to have sponsored title III of this bill, the Foreign Affairs Committee's contribution to the legislation. Title III is substantially the same as H.R. 4841, which the committee approved on June 15. It is the latest in a long list on narcotics control legislation sponsored by the committee over the past two decades.

The committee has not only enacted legislation, but has carefully monitored the impact of that legislation as well. Since passage of the Omnibus Antidrug Abuse Act of 1986, the committee's Task Force on International Narcotics Control has held almost two dozen hearings on international narcotics control issues. Many of the provisions in title III stem directly from those hearings. Also included are several recommendations made by a series of GAO reports mandated by the committee.

The committee's long and active history in narcotics control issues has led to the conclusion that there are no easy answers or quick fixes to the problem of international narcotics control. Title III of the bill therefore contains none of the more radical proposals which might be politically attractive in an election year. Instead, it authorizes a number of modest but nonetheless sensible approaches which will assist in the fight against narcotics production and trafficking. These include:

Asking the Organization of American States to review the need for a multinational regional antinarcotics force, and requiring the Secretary of State to consult with these nations to develop a comprehensive regional strategy to combat cocaine;

Authorizing a special assistance package for Colombia;

Establishing a process for determining which countries are major drug transit countries for purposes of certification;

Providing aid to foreign law enforcement agencies for antinarcotics purposes, under specified conditions;

Waiving the Export-Import Bank's prohibition on financing military sales if the equipment is for antinarcotics purposes;

Revocation of passports for convicted drug felons;

Making the Secretary of State the coordinator of, and report to Congress on, all U.S. Government overseas antinarcotics aid; and Authorizing funds to the State Department to develop machine-readable visas.

I continue to believe that demand reduction provides the only realistic long-term hope for effectively dealing with the narcotics problem. Nonetheless, these and other measures in the bill provide useful tools in the battle overseas. Finally, I want to commend Congressman LARRY SMITH and Congressman BEN GILMAN for their long hours of work on this legislation. As chairman and cochairman of the committee's task force, along with Congressman ED FEIGHAN, they have made vital contributions to this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Florida [Mr. SMITH] has 1 minute remaining.

Mr. SMITH of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield my 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLARZ].

Mr. SOLARZ. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, the administration tells us we are engaged in a war against drugs, but it really turns out that we are barely involved in a skirmish.

In July I went down to Peru, where most of the cocaine in the world is produced, and to Colombia, where much of it is processed. It turned out, in talking to our people down there, no thought, no planning, no consideration whatsoever has been given to the development of a master plan for breaking the back of the cocaine cartels in Latin America.

A provision of this title would mandate the Secretary of State, in consultation with the producing and processing countries in South America and with the other industralized nations that, like ourselves, are the victims of cocaine, to report to the Congress on a master plan for the eradication of the production and processing of cocaine in South America, how much it will cost, how long it will take, and how it can be done so that at long last we will be able to have before us a plan and a master strategy for winning this war against drugs by beating it at the source.

Mr. LUNGREN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the remarks of the previous gentleman were most interesting and certainly we must do something on the supply side. But I think all of us have to recognize that unless we do something on the demand side, which is something many of the governments of the world have been suggesting we do and something many in this Congress have been suggesting we do, we are fooling ourselves. Until we have user accountability, until we hold the the user responsible as well as the provider of this poison, we are not going to defeat the problem. While we still have the sights on national television of coaches bemoaning the fact that certain million dollar athletes cannot play a couple of games because they have been caught repeatedly using drugs and yet no one suggests that the individual is responsible for his own actions, the individual is insulting the young people of America, and the individual is the one who is bringing problems upon himself. Unless we change this attitude, we are not going to solve the problem here in America; we are only going to fool ourselves.

One of the major elements of this bill, hopefully, on final passage will be user accountability. I hope people keep that in mind.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BROOMFIELD] and I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Michigan be allowed to yield blocks of time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I supported the foreign affairs section of the drug bill as reported out of committee. My colleague, Chairman FASCELL, also supported the bipartisan effort to craft an effective Foreign Affairs Committee section of the drug bill. I believe that we were successful. Many Republican drug bill initiatives have been included in whole or in part in the bill before us today.

Some of these new initiatives call for the creation of a Latin American antinarcotics strike force and permit police training for foreign antinarcotics units to combat the drug problem in their own country.

Also included are funds for weapons and ammunition for foreign police units who confront the drug producers and traffickers on a daily basis.

Another commendable proposal in the bill authorizes funds for training programs for personnel from drug producing and trafficking countries.

In addition, MAP funds are authorized for equipment that will be used in antinarcotics efforts in Colombia.

If America is to win the battle against illegal drugs, both domestically and internationally, we must use all the available tools possible to aggressively confront and shut down the international drug traffickers.

I have an amendment which I intend to offer during consideration of the bill. It is very simple and promotes yet another arrow to America's quiver in the war against drugs. My sense-of-Congress initiative calls upon the executive branch to actively use covert action, military and paramilitary activities specifically, in the war against drugs.

America should not fight the drug lords with one hand tied behind its back. If we are really in a war, let us use all of our Nation's formidable resources in the attack. We clearly cannot afford to lose this battle.

Mr. Chairman, I yield for 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of title III of H.R. 5210, the foreign affairs section of the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988. I would like to commend the distinguished Foreign Affairs chairman, Mr. FASCELL, the ranking minority member, the gentleman from Michigan, [Mr. BROOMFIELD], and our narcotics task force chairman, Mr. SMITH for their good work in putting together title III, the foreign affairs section of this bill.

The foreign affairs section of this measure contains a number of significant provisions: the authorization of $10 million for a Latin American regional antidrug force; earmarking of $900,000 to arm antidrug aircraft and $3.5 million for weapons and ammunition to Latin America and Caribbean police for narcotics control purposes; providing $5 million for rewards to those helping law enforcement authorities capture narco terrorists; in addition to denying passports to convicted drug violators and the requirement that the United States oppose multilateral development bank financing to uncooperative countries. This omnibus antidrug legislation also includes increased funding for the DEA, the FBI, INS, the Federal prison system, the Coast Guard and Customs.

This legislation also calls for a long overdue Western Hemispheric drug summit. Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to fully support title III.

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. LAGOMARSINO].

(Mr. LAGOMARSINO asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Chairman, I rise to offer my support and to congratulate my colleagues for the expeditious manner in which they have brought this much needed and most important legislation to the floor.

As a member of the Task Force on Drugs, I have been involved in formulating an antidrugs measure which would accomplish several necessary objectives if we are to obliterate this menace to society. Since the problems caused by the widespread use of drugs touch people in all parts of the country and at every level of the social spectrum, including our schools, the workplace—both the private and public sectors, sports, and law enforcement to name but a few, it is imperative that we accomplish this long overdue task.

I would, of course, like to ensure that the minority initiatives are included in the final package which is to be debated further here this week. The Republican bill, H.R. 4842, contains several key provisions which I believe would strengthen this bipartisan effort.

There are several provisions in the Republican bill which zero in directly on the problem of drug abuse and the best avenue of attack to use against this problem.

One of the primary provisions which I hope to see included in this legislation is the death penalty for certain drug related murders. I believe this would act as one of the greatest deterrents possible in putting a stop to the thousands of drug related deaths which occur each year. Last year alone over 37,000 deaths occurred as a direct result of drug use. In addition, we must stop future generations from killing themselves. Statistics show us that drugs are responsible for many more deaths than through the direct use of these illegal substances. For instance, most experts agree that there is a direct correlation between the use of drugs and teenage suicide. In addition, 10 to 15 percent of all highway fatalities involve drug use. Drug users also are three times more likely to be involved in on-the-job accidents. The most horrendous example of this would be the recent Amtrak collision which cost many innocent people their lives.

Whether we examine the cost in terms of human life—including future lives which will be lost and ruined—or in terms of the continuing strain this scourge puts on the entire populace, we must recognize the fact that we cannot continue to pay the high price this abuse demands. We must endeavor to eradicate the drug cartel which has made our streets a virtual battleground. Death to those who profit from death and who kill is the price we must demand—a lesser price will only cause our Nation to continue on the same path of destruction. Aristotle put it quite succinctly when he said: "The generality of men are naturally apt to be swayed by fear rather than by reverence, and to refrain from evil rather because of the punishment that it brings, than because of its own foulness." What was true then, is still true today. The death penalty as proposed in the Gekas amendment would certainly be a signal to members of the drug cartels that we mean business.

There is also an urgent need to adopt the exclusionary rule amendment to be offered by Representative LUNGREN. If we do not adopt this provision, we weaken our efforts in the fight to bring more drug dealers to trial. This provision would not be in violation of fourth amendment rights as some might suggest because use of this type of search would not be sanctioned unless it was done in a "good faith" manner. That is, the belief that it was constitutional. Fighting drugs is not a game. Drug dealers should be brought to trial where searches and seizures are made in good faith.

We must also do all we can to insure that those seeking help to recover from drug and alcohol abuse have some place to go. This type of rehabilitation requires long-term treatment and followup programs.

Last, we must do all that we can to stop these illicit drugs from ever entering our country. There are several important mechanisms at our disposal which we must employ in conjunction with the cooperation of our friends in the international community to make sure this aspect of the war on drugs is successful. We should have a sense of Congress resolution stating that fighting narcotics trafficking is an important foreign policy goal. Along with this we should urge the President to convene a Western Hemisphere conference on antinarcotics cooperation. In addition, we need to: Encourage extradition agreements, waive prohibition on export-import financing of military sales to major producer countries if equipment is needed to combat drugs, and also insure that passports of people who have committed drug violations should either be revoked or marked.

There must also be the establishment of a multinational anti-drug strike force so that we can combat illicit narcotics production and trafficking. In connection with this, we must not cut Coast Guard funding as the majority did last year. The Coast Guard has been instrumental in stopping the flow of illegal drugs into this country. We must also make better use of our Armed Forces by giving them the authority to locate, pursue, and seize aircraft and vessels suspected of carrying narcotics on board. We also should encourage, and, where, appropriate, demand that private and public institutions follow the example of the U.S. armed services in stopping use of drugs in the workplace. We need to do more to make drug users accountable; some such amendments will be offered by Republican sponsors, including things as loss of driver's licenses.

Mrs. Reagan deserves a lot of credit for the "Just Say No" campaign. It is very clear, really, that if there is no demand, there is no sale—no buy, no sale.

Throughout my years in the California State Senate and here in Congress, I have consistently supported, authored, and voted for efforts to control the spread of illegal drugs and to increase penalties for those who bring this poison to our streets and to our children.

In the past, I have cosponsored several measures designed to stop the spread of drug abuse. Many of the bills I have cosponsored relating to the drug problem will be addressed in the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988. I look forward to seeing this bipartisan effort becoming law.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BROOMFIELD] has 3 minutes remaining.

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS], and I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Texas be allowed to yield blocks of time out of his time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, title IV of the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act is identical to H.R. 4719, the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988, as approved unanimously by the Government Operations Committee on June 29 of this year.

H.R. 4719 has broad bipartisan support, and I know of no opposition to the measure. A drug-free workplace is essential for the safety of American workers and for the production of high quality goods and services.

Title IV provides that an organization cannot be a Government contractor or grantee unless it has certified that it will provide a drug-free workplace by adhering to six separate and specific requirements, including:

First, publishing a statement prohibiting the unlawful manufacture, distribution, dispensation, possession, or use of drugs in the workplace and specifying sanctions that will be taken against employees;

Second, establishing a Drug-Free Awareness Program for employees;

Third, requiring each employee to certify that he or she received a copy of the statement, understands it, and will abide by it, and that the employee will notify the employer of any drug conviction in the workplace;

Fourth, notifying the contracting agency within 10 days after receiving notice from an employee;

Fifth, imposing a sanction on a convicted employee, or requiring his satisfactory participation in a Drug Abuse Assistance or Drug Rehabilitation Program; and Sixth, continuing, in good faith, the implementation of these five requirements designed to maintain a drug-free workplace.

Members should note that this bill does not require drug testing. This is a highly controversial issue, which is currently being examined in litigation before the Supreme Court, and the committee did not believe that such tests or searches should be incorporated as a requirement in this bill.

Federal Government contractors and grantees will be subject to suspension and debarment if they fail to meet any of the six requirements I have outlined or if such number of their employees have been convicted of drug violations in the workplace as to indicate that the contractor has failed to make a good faith effort to provide a drug-free workplace. The suspension and debarment proceedings would be carried out by the Boards of Contract Appeals in the case of contracts, and in accordance with applicable law and regulations in the case of grants. If a contractor or grantee is debarred, it shall be ineligible for any Federal contract or grant for a period up to 5 years.

Title IV of the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act would enlist the Government's contractors and grantees in our Nation's efforts to combat drug abuse. It clearly sets out the requirements that those contractors and grantees must follow to maintain their business with the Government, and it provides a fair process for determining if they have met those obligations. The bill is comprehensive and tough, but it is also rational and fair.

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROOKS. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Chairman, 2 years ago Congress passed the Antidrug Abuse Act of 1986. That law marked an important first step in developing a long-term approach to the war on drugs.

However, it is clear that more is needed. Drug-related crime continues to be an epidemic plaguing our Nation. The price of cocaine is low. We are running out of prison space. There are yearlong waiting lists to get into drug rehabilitation programs. The 1986 bill was a start, but now it's time for the next step.

Earlier this year, I introduced a comprehensive bill as a model for addressing demand reduction, international programs, and law enforcement efforts. I am pleased to see that the core bill which we will consider over the next few days bears a remarkable resemblance to that model.

The core bill provides more grant moneys for States and localities; more funds for education; more personnel and assets for the agencies; and more incentives for foreign source and transshipment countries.

One of its effects will be to build accountability into our efforts in the war on drugs. In the past, we have not had the mechanisms in place to determine which programs work and which don't. This bill includes feedback provisions so that we can encourage successful education, rehabilitation, and law enforcement programs, and weed out those that are not working.

This legislation builds on the foundation which Congress laid 2 years ago for a sound and long-term antidrug abuse strategy. It addresses issues of vital concern in all areas of drug abuse—from treatment, rehabilitation, and education, to law enforcement and interdiction.

In most respects, this core bill presents a bipartisan approach to the war on drugs. It includes increased funding for the Drug Enforcement Administration, the FBI, the Customs Service, and the Coast Guard. It includes chemical diversion provisions to track precursor chemicals. It includes standards for laboratories performing drug testing. It encourages the development of a Latin American regional antinarcotics force. And it revises and extends grants to States for drug abuse programs.

Mr. Chairman, as we begin debate on the controversial amendments which will be offered in the next few days, let's not lose sight of this core legislation. With a few exceptions, the amendments which will command the headlines will have little effect on the war on drugs.

But the core bill is sound. It is important. And it will provide the resources for turning the tide in the war. The House of Representatives has done an excellent job with this core bill, and that fact should not be forgotten.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LUNGREN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. HORTON] and I ask unanimous consent that he be allowed to yield time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988. The Government Operations Committee worked in a truly bipartisan manner to develop this provision.

Drugs adversely affect the quality of the American workplace. One study indicated that productivity loss due to substance abuse—both drugs and alcohol—reached nearly $100 billion in 1983. The same study reported that workers using drugs are 28-percent less productive than their peers.

In June, the Republican Leadership Task Force on Drugs heard from a former Greene County, OH, undercover agent. He now works with corporations to determine the extent of company drug use and to rid them from the workplace. That former undercover agent testified that the "safest place to sell drugs is in the corporate setting." He explained that the workplace is the safest place to deal drugs for two main reasons. First, the dealer knows his peer group—who is using and who is susceptible. Second, the dealer knows that law enforcement won't be present.

The problem is grave. The Drug-Free Workplace Act uses the enormous leverage of the Federal procurement and grant systems to crack the problem. As a result, we'll reach hundreds of thousands of people with the message that drugs will not be tolerated.

When we first became involved with this issue, I was concerned about the feasibility of what was being attempted. But through the work of the Government Operations Committee, especially Chairman BROOKS and Mr. WALKER, the act is very workable. It doesn't set up new enforcement mechanisms. It uses those currently in place. Important procedural due process is already built into these systems. The Drug-Free Workplace Act will work, and will benefit American workers.

For all of these reasons, I strongly support title IV, the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. McCANDLESS].

Mr. McCANDLESS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from New York for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of title IV of this bill, the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988. This concept has been championed by my good friend from Pennsylvania, Mr. WALKER. It has been reworked in a bipartisan fashion by another friend, the distinguished chairman of the Government Operations Committee, JACK BROOKS.

The act is crucial. Drugs in the workplace must be made unacceptable in the United States.

Drugs in the workplace hurt the country. They make us less competitive in the world market. Drugs in the workplace cause defective products to be released on the American public. Neither the American public nor the Japanese nor the Europeans nor the South Americans want defective products produced by impaired minds and uncoordinated hands. Quite simply, if we want to be the best, we've got to be in the best shape.

Drugs in the workplace jeopardize the lives and health of innocent coworkers. A saw that slips, a forklift that drops its load, the switch that doesn't get thrown: These are the hazards of drugs in the workplace.

Users of illegal drugs are dangerous to themselves and those around them. We must make it socially unacceptable to use illicit narcotics. The only way to win the war on drugs is to eliminate demand. So long as a market exists, big-money smugglers will find a way to bring drugs into the country. This act will create an avenue by which to reach hundreds of thousands of people with this message.

American industry and American labor must fight for market share with superior products. We've got to ensure that something stamped "Made in U.S.A." sets the world's standard for quality and performance.

Setting that standard begins with a drug-free workplace.

I strongly support the provisions of title IV, the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER], who is one of the coauthors of this bipartisan effort as far as the drug-free workplace is concerned.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] is recognized for 4 minutes.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, a few months ago the idea of taking action against drugs in the workplace was merely an idea. But it is an idea that has now been through a process that I think has made it into a workable concept and one which will contribute markedly to this bill.

I rise in support of title IV. I want to congratulate the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS], chairman of the committee, for the work that he did in helping to fashion this particular provision in the drug bill, and also thank my good friend, the gentleman from New York [Mr. HORTON], for the work that he has done along the way to make certain that we did accomplish this portion of the bill. I think it is a good provision.

As has been pointed out by my colleagues, this is a problem that we deal with in our society. We are, in fact, in a position where in world competition we are undermined by drugs in the workplace. We will improve our competitive position, we will improve our ability to have a responsible work force by having drugfree workplaces.

The question was how to go about achieving that, and the concept here is one of using Federal leverage, of having the power of the Federal Government, the power of contracting and grants to the Federal Government used in order to assure compliance.

We are coming at this from two approaches. Later on today we will have an appropriations bill on the floor that will shut off all money under the appropriations act to anyone who does not have a policy, and under this provision under title IV in this bill we put a strategy into place where we put a policy into place whereby the Federal Government can implement that kind of a standard. I think it works, and I think it will work well.

I think the bottom line is that what it will create in the workplace is peer pressure against drug usage. As the situation now stands, too often fellow workers of someone using drugs protect that person, not that they like it, but they simply are not in a position for calling in law enforcement officials or going to management about someone using drugs. Under this provision, knowing that a Federal contract could be lost, knowing that their work could be jeopardized by a drug user, or by drug usage in the workplace, workers will now begin to have peer pressure go the other way. They will begin to tell their fellow workers that their use of drugs jeopardizes my job and I am not going to tolerate it any more.

With that we can begin to change what happens with drug use. It seems to me that in the workplace that is important, and it seems to me that in society that is important.

This is a step. It is one way that we can deal with this problem of drugs as it pervades our society, and I rise in strong support of title IV and hope that this particular provision of the bill, as well as the whole bill, will be endorsed by the House.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I thank my friend for yielding time to me and I rise in strong support of the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988.

I recently spent an entire evening with the Trenton police, the proactive use unit in Trenton, at which time a number of drug busts were made, and I saw firsthand the devastation that drugs are causing in our communities.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988. H.R. 5210 represents a comprehensive bipartisan response to beef up Federal efforts in this war on drugs.

Mr. Chairman, drug abuse in the United States has cast its ugly shadow on every aspect of life in America. Today, the widespread use of drugs such as heroin, cocaine, and marijuana and their inescapable social consequences are found in the cities and the suburbs; white-collar and blue-collar occupations; among the famous and the infamous; among the best and the brightest; among the destitute and the lonely; and among the weak and the strong. By now, every American has known at least one friend whose family life has either been terribly disrupted or tragically affected by the American drug problem.

The adverse consequences of drug abuse are devastating, not only for the user and his or her immediate family, but for society as a whole. A study conducted for the Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Administration [ADAMHA] estimated that the economic cost of drug abuse to the United States was $59.7 billion in 1983—the most recent available figures. This estimate does not include the cost of the drugs, but is inclusive of estimated crime costs, upgraded enforcement procedures, incarceration, reduced productivity, medical treatment, and other related expenses.

Mr. Chairman, I recently witnessed firsthand the incredible drug trafficking and drug abuse problem in Trenton, NJ, which is part of my congressional district. During several drug raids of the night of August 27, I observed the courage and professionalism of the pro-active units of the Trenton Police Department. Drugs on our streets is a shocking reality and local law enforcement units do their best to change this situation given their limited resources.

Mr. Chairman, how to prevent illicit use of drugs has been a public policy concern for at least a century. And while opinions continue to vary on exactly what the Federal Government should do to control drug abuse, most agree that the drug crisis has grown to such proportions that a more comprehensive, nationally coordinated approach must be enacted if we are to have any chance of winning the drug war.

Mr. Chairman, the bill before us is a blueprint for such an approach to wipe out America's drug problem. H.R. 5210 incorporates the provisions from reported bills and recommendations of 10 House committees. This comprehensive legislative package will provide approximately $2.5 billion in new moneys for our antidrug effort. The bill will bolster both fronts of the American war on drugs. H.R. 5210 attacks the supply front through increased efforts of enforcement, interdiction, and confiscation; it attacks the demand front through increased efforts in the areas of education, treatment, and research.

On June 22, the House Foreign Affairs Committee, of which I am a member, reported out its antidrug bill. As a cosponsor of this initiative, I am proud of contributions the committee has made to H.R. 5210 to halt the tide of illegal drugs entering the United States. With the United States currently being the largest single market for illegal drugs in the world, it is clear that we must beef up our drug interdiction and international drug control efforts. I would like to now highlight some of the key provisions of the Foreign Affairs portion of H.R. 5210:

Directs the Administrator of the FAA to ascertain the feasibility of requiring each aircraft entering the continental United States to have installed an operating transponder to facilitate drug interdiction.

Greatly expands funding for the operation and maintenance of the U.S. Customs Service's air interdiction.

Provides moneys for new helicopters, patrol boats, and radar equipment for the Coast Guard.

Adds 500 new full-time Coast Guard positions to help with drug interdiction.

Enhances ability of FBI and DEA to seize violators' assets and conveyance items in drug-related offenses.

Provides new moneys for Immigration and Naturalization Service to be used for interdiction, investigations, detention, and deportation.

Authorizes new moneys for international narcotics control programs which include crop irradication and substitution in foreign countries.

Sanctions against noncooperating narcotics producing countries.

Defensively arms aircraft used in narcotics control eradication or interdiction efforts.

The Secretary of State is made coordinator of, and reporter to Congress on, U.S. Government antinarcotics aid.

Directs the Secretary of State to revoke the passport of any individual convicted of any felony violation of Federal or State law involving controlled substances if the passport was used in the crime.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support this vital piece of legislation.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Brooks] yields back 1 minute.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Arizona [Mr. Udall] and I ask unanimous consent that he be allowed to yield blocks of his time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Vento].

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act which is the result of the comprehensive work of 10 House committees and many Members of Congress. This legislation will provide the country with additional assistance for law enforcement, drug interdiction, and special education and treatment for those individuals who fall into the web of drug abuse.

One of the priorities of this Congress must be to address the growing problems presented by drug abuse in our society. Hard, fast, and effective action is required now, as it is clear that the policy of "just say no," however well intended, has not adequately funded our border patrols, equipped our law enforcement officials, or decreased the demand for drugs in our parks and public lands, in our community streets, and in our Nation's schools. Contrary to the Reagan State of the Union Address, we are not winning the war on drugs.

Mr. Chairman, first I would draw my colleagues attention to a proposal initially offered by myself and Mr. Waxman that has been included in H.R. 5210. As written in this bill, the proposal would authorize funding for demonstration projects to provide prevention, education and treatment services for substance-abusing pregnant women. It also funds research efforts focused on the effects of abuse on women and their infants. Education, counseling, and research have to be a focus of breaking the drug abuse cycle in our society.

I introduced this legislation to address the severe and growing problem of drug and alcohol abuse among pregnant women. A recent report from the National Institute on Drug Abuse estimated that 10½ million women between 18 and 34 years of age used an illicit drug in the last year. In one hospital in my district alone, over 60 babies have been born in the past year to women who were abusing crack or cocaine. Just over the August recess, I visited the Ramsey and Hennepin County Medical Clinics in Minnesota where counseling and treatment is available for substance-abusing mothers. I met with dedicated doctors, nurses, social workers, and others who are increasingly alarmed at the growing number of mothers that abuse drugs during their pregnancies.

On August 29, a comprehensive study completed by the National Association of Perinatal Addiction Research and Education found that at least 11 percent of women in the 36 hospitals surveyed had used illegal drugs during their pregnancies. Further, this study suggests that 375,000 newborn babies from urban and rural communities alike are exposed to health risks each year because of their mothers' substance abuse. These infants are the most innocent victims in the vicious cycle of drug and alcohol abuse in our society and this problem of drug babies—cocaine or "crack" babies—has mushroomed just this past year and could well explode if the challenge is not met.

This study and others have reported that babies born to mothers who abuse drugs suffer not only from lower birthweight, irritability, and developmental problems, they are also often delivered prematurely, increasing the risk of complications and their possible death. Cocaine-exposed babies face a tenfold increase in the risk of crib death. These children deserve our help and support.

Second, this bill contains provisions that would help eradicate the production and trafficking of illegal drugs on the one-third of our Nation's land mass that are in national stewardship and ownership. Some of these national parks, national forests, and public lands are being misused for the cultivation, production, and distribution of illegal substances. This misuse has become a threat to the health and safety of recreationists, polluting the environment and harming the natural resources of our Nation. H.R. 5210 is an important step toward ensuring that our parks, forests, and public lands have healthy environments that are safe places for Americans to visit and enjoy.

H.R. 5210 combats illegal drugs on Federal lands in several significant ways:

First, it authorizes increased annual funding for drug related law enforcement for the major land management agencies. It authorizes $1.5 million for the Bureau of Land Management, $3 million for the National Park Service and $10 million for the Forest Service.

Second, the bill makes it a criminal act with stiff penalties to pollute national forests with poisons and hazardous substances while manufacturing or distributing illegal drugs.

Third, it gives the Forest Service, for the first time, the authority to combat drugs outside the boundaries of the national forests as long as these activities pertain to violations within the national forests. The agency now would be able to pursue drug traffickers who flee across national forest boundaries, to interview witnesses after they have left national forests and to make arrests wherever suspects are apprehended. The National Park Service and Bureau of Land Management already have this authority.

Fourth, the bill gives the Forest Service the authority to deputize law enforcement officials from other agencies to help fight drugs on the national forests. Similar authority already exists for the Park Service and the BLM.

Fifth, the bill strengthens all Forest Service law enforcement activities, not just those related to drugs, by codifying into law the agency's authority to enforce its regulations.

I want to thank Chairman Volkmer of the Subcommittee on Forests and Family Farms and Chairman de la Garza of the full Agriculture Committee for their help in developing these provisions and special credit is due Representative Ron Wyden who introduced specific legislation on this matter. All of their support was instrumental in enabling this bill to strengthen the Forest Service's drug law enforcement efforts.

I also appreciate the cooperation we had from the Judiciary Committee. After working closely with us, Judiciary included in its title of the bill the important provisions that I have mentioned that codify Forest Service law enforcement authorities and that give the agency the authority to deputize and to pursue drug cases beyond national forest boundaries. The Judiciary Committee was willing to compromise with the other committees and sponsors in limiting the scope of the Forest Service's memorandum of understanding with the Justice Department to include just those law enforcement activities related to drugs.

Mr. Chairman, all these provisions that help our land management agencies fight the war on drugs are the result of a consensus. Not only do they have the support of the Interior, Agriculture, and Judiciary Committees, but the agencies and the minority helped in their development as well. I am pleased that so many diverse interests were able to come to an agreement on how we should engage the drug problems on national lands.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to lend their support to this bill on behalf of these proposals and the many others present in the legislation.

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2½ minutes.

Mr. Chairman, title V of the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988 includes provisions within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

These provisions were developed on a bipartisan basis within the committee. They address serious problems of drug abuse on Indian reservations, public lands and in insular areas.

I will limit my remarks to the subtitle on Indian Alcohol and Substance Abuse and Treatment.

Chairman BRUCE VENTO of the Subcommittee on National Parks and Public Lands is speaking to the subtitle on the National Park System, Public Lands, the National Forest System, and the Bureau of Land Management Program.

Chairman RON DE LUGO of the Subcommittee on Insular and International Affairs is addressing the subtitle on the insular areas for which the United States has responsibilities; in particular American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, Palau, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

Subtitle A of title V continues the efforts begun in the 1986 act for Indians and Alaska Natives. Alcoholism and alcohol abuse is the No. 1 health and social problem in Indian reservations. In addition, the use of illegal narcotics and other deleterious substances is growing on the reservations.

The Indian Alcohol and Substance Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act of 1986, included in the 1986 Omnibus Act, establishes a comprehensive program for dealing with this severe problem on the reservations. The act's provisions included community development and organization authorities; education and prevention efforts; law enforcement enhancement; training requirement and programs, and comprehensive treatment efforts.

In general the Indian provisions of title V reauthorize funding for these programs and fine-tune some of the authorities and programs established in the 1986 act. It also creates a new program for the funding of alcohol and drug programs for Indians in the urban areas.

Mr. Chairman, I will insert in the RECORD a section-by-section analysis of subtitle A of title V containing the Indian provisions.

In concluding, Mr. Chairman, I want to recognize the leadership on this legislation of Speaker WRIGHT; the majority and minority leaders, our colleagues TOM FOLEY and BOB MICHEL; and Chairman RANGEL of the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control.

Their initiative—and the hard and thoughtful work of many other Members as well—with all of the committees concerned has made it possible for us to be able to consider the comprehensive approach to the terrible scourge of drug abuse embodied in this bill.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS OF TITLE V OF H.R. 5210, THE OMNIBUS DRUG INITIATIVE ACT OF 1988

TITLE V—COMMITTEE ON INTERIOR AND INSULAR AFFAIRS

Subtitle A—Indian and Substance Abuse Prevention and Treatment

Section 5001

Section 5001 provides that amendments or repeals made by subtitle A shall be considered to be made to the Indian Alcohol and Substance Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act of 1986 (25 U.S.C. 2401 et seq.).

Section 5002. Minimum Performance Standards

Subsection (a) amends subsection (a) of section 4205 of the 1986 Act, which requires that the Memorandum of Agreement between the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Health and Human Services include minimum standards for program responsibilities, by changing the phrase "minimum standards" in subsection (a) to "minimum performance standards". This simply makes clear that it is the level of minimum performance in each such program which must be developed and implemented.

Subsection (b) amends subsection (c)(1) of section 4206, which establishes criteria for Tribal Action Plans developed pursuant to section 4206, by changing the phrase "minimum standards" to "minimum performance standards".

Subsection (c) provides that the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall submit a joint report to Congress with the FY 1988 budget request on the minimum performance standards developed pursuant to section 4205 of the 1986 Act.

Section 5003. Remedial Plan for Complying With Minimum Performance Standards

Subsection (a) amends subsection (c) of section 4206 by adding a new paragraph (3) which requires that any Tribal Action Plan shall include a remedial plan for complying with the minimum performance standards incorporated under paragraph (1) of the subsection.

Subsection (b) amends subsection (b) of section 4207, establishing an Office of Alcohol and Substance Abuse in the Bureau of Indian Affairs, by requiring such office to monitor compliance with minimum performance standards established and to report to Congress on program deficiencies in that respect.

Section 5004. Definitions

Section 5004 amends section 4204 of the 1986 Act, which contains definitions, by adding a new paragraph which provides that the terms "Urban Indian", "Urban Center", and "Urban Indian Organization" are to have the same meaning as provided in section 4 of the Indian Health Care Improvement Act.

Section 5005. Amendment and Revision of Tribal Development Plan

Section 5005 amends section 4206 by providing that Tribal Action Plans established pursuant to that section shall include procedures for the amendment or revision of such plans as determined necessary by the Tribal Coordinating Committee.

Section 5006. Authorization of Appropriations for Grants

Section 5006 amends subsection (d) of section 4206, which authorizes appropriations for technical assistance grants to Indian tribes for the development of Tribal Action Plans, by reauthorizing the appropriation of not to exceed $1,000,000 for fiscal years 1990, 1991, and 1992.

Section 5007. Leasing of Tribal Property

Section 5007 amends section 4209, relating to the use of Federal facilities, property and equipment under Tribal Action Plans, by adding a new subsection (c) authorizing the long-term lease of tribal facilities or property to house programs under the Act where it would be practical or cost efficient to do so. It also provides that, where a program is to serve several tribes, the lease of a tribal facility for such program must be with the consent of all tribes to be served.

Section 5008. Emergency Shelters and Halfway Houses

Subsection (a) amends subsection (a) of section 4213 to make clear that halfway houses funded under the section can be used either for intake or aftercare facilities for youth admitted to long-term treatment. It also authorizes the Bureau of Indian Affairs, the Indian Health Service, or the tribes to use their resources to staff and operate such facilities.

Subsection (b) amends subsection (e) of section 4213 by reauthorizing funding for the design, construction, and renovation of emergency shelters and half-way houses at $3,000,000 for fiscal years 1990, 1991, and 1992. It also amends subsection (e) by authorizing the appropriation of $2,000,000 for fiscal year 1990 for staffing and operation costs for such facilities and by providing that, thereafter, such costs will be included in the base budget for the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Finally, it amends subsection (e) to provide that funds appropriated are to be allocated among the various tribes on the basis of need and that such funds will be subject to tribal contracting under the Indian Self-Determination Act.

Section 5009. Certain Illegal Narcotics Trafficking

Subsection (a) amends subsection (a) of section 4216, providing funding to the Tohono O'odham Tribe of Arizona for the interdiction of illegal narcotic traffic on the tribe's reservation, by providing similar assistance to the St. Regis Mohawk Tribe of New York. In addition, the amendment reauthorizes funding for the Tohono O'odham Tribe at $500,000 for fiscal years 1990, 1991, and 1992 and authorizes funding for the St. Regis Mohawk Tribe at $450,000 for fiscal years 1989 and 1990.

Subsection (b) amends subsection (b) of section 4216, which establishes a program for the eradication of marijuana cultivation on Indian reservations, by reauthorizing funding for such program at $500,000 for fiscal years 1990, 1991, and 1992.

Section 5010. Law Enforcement and Judicial Training.

Section 5010 amends section 4218 of the 1986 Act, which establishes alcohol and substance abuse training for BIA and tribal law enforcement personnel, by reauthorizing appropriations for such training at $1,500,000 for fiscal years 1990, 1991, and 1992.

Section 5011. Treatment of Juvenile Offenders

Section 5011 amends section 4219, which provides for the medical assessment and treatment of Indian juvenile offenders with respect to alcohol and substance abuse, by adding a new subsection (b) which provides that the Indian Health Service must provide interim treatment to Indian juvenile offenders who are referred under the section unless a court has prohibited such treatment or has found the juvenile to be a danger to others.

Section 5012. Juvenile Detention Centers

Section 5012 amends section 4420, which provides for the construction of juvenile detention centers on Indian reservations, by reauthorizing funding for the construction or renovation of such centers at $5,000,000 for fiscal years 1990 and 1991. In addition, it authorizes the appropriation of $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1990 for staffing and operation of such centers and provides that, thereafter, such funding shall be included in the base budget of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Section 5013. Indian Health Service Youth Program

Subsection (a) amends subsection (a) of section 4227, providing for detoxification and rehabilitation services for Indian juvenile abusers, to make clear that it is the Secretary of Health and Human Services who has that responsibility.

Subsection (b) rewrites subsection (b) of section 4227, which provides for the establishment, by construction or renovation, of a youth regional treatment center for each Indian Health Service area, to make clear that the subsection includes authority to appropriately staff and operate such centers. It reauthorizes funding for such construction or renovation at $5,000,000 for the fiscal years 1990 and 1991. In addition, it authorizes the appropriation of $9,000,000 in staffing and operation funds for fiscal year 1990 and provides that, thereafter, such funding shall be included in the base budget of the Indian Health Service.

Section 5014. Training and Community Education

Section 5014 amends section 4228 of the 1986 Act, which provides for the development and funding of certain community education and training programs on Indian reservations, by reauthorizing funding for such programs at $5,000,000 for the fiscal years 1990, 1991, and 1992.

Section 5015. Navajo Alcohol Rehabilitation Program

Section 5015 amends section 4229, which establishes a Navajo alcohol rehabilitation program in Gallup, New Mexico, by reauthorizing funding for such program at $200,000 per fiscal year with the limitation than not more than 10% of such funds can be used for administrative purposes.

Section 5016. Urban Indian Program

Section 5016 amends the 1986 Act by adding a new section 4231 to the Act which establishes a comprehensive program to combat alcohol and substance abuse among Indians in the urban areas. Funding is made available for such purposes to Urban Indian organizations which have a contract with the Indian Health Service under the Indian Health Care Improvement Act. The section establishes goals and criteria for grants and authorizes funding for such grants at $5,000,000 for fiscal years 1990, 1991, and 1992. The section also authorizes the appropriation of $1,000,000 each fiscal year beginning in fiscal year 1990 for research in the area of alcohol and substance abuse among Indians.

Section 5017. Treatment of Funds Appropriated To Carry Out Act

Section 5017 amends section 4207 of the Act to generally provide that funds appropriated pursuant to the Act shall be separately identified by the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Health and Human Service in agency accounts and in agency budget requests.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHEUER].

Mr. SCHEUER. Mr. Chairman, this bill is a good bill and it is a step forward. I would like to congratulate Mr. RANGEL, the chairman of the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, for the outstanding leadership that he has given in working with the other committees and the other leaders of the Congress in moving this bill forward.

I would like to put a footnote on the remarks made by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO]. We are not going to solve this problem by eradication of crops on hills around the world and we are not going to solve this problem by interdiction.

From "zero tolerance" to "just say no" the Reagan-Bush administration has resorted to slogans instead of making the tough decisions needed to control drug abuse.

This administration has greased its biceps on the drug issue but it has accomplished far too little in treating substance abusers and educating our children against the scourge of drugs.

In the area of treatment, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act will improve upon the President's request with programs to reduce the transmission of AIDS and shorten the waiting lists for drug abuse rehabilitation programs. The bill will also add some innovative programs in education and prevention.

I am dismayed, however, that we continue to increase funding for interdiction and law enforcement at the expense of education and treatment.

In fiscal year 1988 we are spending only 1 percent of our education budget on drug education and just over 0.5 percent of our health budget on substance abuse.

In the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986 we authorized $250 million for drug education. Last year the President only requested $100 million of these funds. Finally, in the 1988 election year the President has requested $250 million for drug education.

I am pleased that this bill will add to the President's request in the area of drug education. We must do better.

Only by reducing the demand for drugs can we stop or at least control drug abuse.

Our policies of interdiction and enforcement have barely made a dent in the flow of drugs through our borders. Of the tons of narcotics flooding into the United States, we intercept only 5 to 15 percent.

We could triple the current level of funding for drug law enforcement and still stop no more than 20 to 25 percent of the drugs that make their way into the bodies of our youth.

If we do spend the billions upon billions of taxpayers dollars that it would take to reduce significantly the importation of drugs, the domestic production of more deadly synthetic drugs like PCP will increase.

Education can be successful in the long run. Just witness the turnaround in attitudes and behavior on diet, physical fitness, drunk driving, cigarette smoking, and casual multipartner sex.

Increasingly, law enforcement officers are calling for vastly expanded drug education efforts. Col. Ralph Milstead, director of public safety in Arizona, testified in the Select Committee on Narcotics:

> Let's bring our people back and let's go ahead and work on the problem here and let's work on the demand side rather than keep pouring money on the supply side. I liken it to killing a snake tail first. We ought to start at the head and the head, of course, is the demand.

The Omnibus Drug Initiative Act is a good beginning. We must, however, establish ongoing programs to teach all children why they should stay off drugs and provide treatment for all those who need it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Arizona [Mr. UDALL] has 1½ minutes remaining.

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time for the benefit of the gentleman from the Virgin Islands [Mr. DE LUGO].

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DAVIS].

Mr. DAVIS of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to support this legislation—the product of a lot of hard work, combining the efforts of 10 House committees, including the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee of which I am the ranking member. Clearly the drug epidemic in this country is one of our greatest challenges and one which we are today continuing to address.

I would like to address myself primarily to those parts of this package in which I have had a hand.

First, this bill will provide some very important funding for our U.S. Coast Guard, the agency that has primary responsibility for the maritime interdiction of drugs coming into this country. As we all know, the United States is the largest and most lucrative market for illegal drugs in the world. The Coast Guard has made that market more difficult to get to, but we need to do more. We are authorizing $264 million for Coast Guard equipment, as well as additional funding and personnel for operating that equipment. Although many see the Coast Guard's drug interdiction role as their most important, the Coast Guard has a daily lifesaving mission, as well as other law enforcement missions such as maritime pollution control and fishing treaty enforcement. It is absolutely imperative that we give the Coast Guard the resources necessary to conduct an aggressive Drug Interdiction Program without sacrificing these other missions. This bill does that.

H.R. 5210 also makes changes in our maritime enforcement laws which will allow us to prosecute drug smugglers who are hiding behind foreign flags on the high seas.

As a Member of Congress who represents the Great Lakes region I am also glad to say that this bill contains provisions which will promote the cooperation between the United States and Canada on drug interdiction in the Great Lakes. We are asking the State Department to negotiate an agreement with Canada on information sharing and cooperation in these activities on the Great Lakes. We are also asking the Transportation Department and the Treasury Department to get together on Coast Guard and Customs efforts in this region.

Finally, I would like to take a little time to talk about our "innocent owner" provision, which will protect the innocent citizen from the seizure of boats, vehicles, or aircraft when drug activities are discovered and the owner had no knowledge or gave no consent to the drug offense. This is very important. Earlier this year, when the Coast Guard and Customs adopted what they called a zero tolerance attitude toward drug use, some citizens found that a boat they owned but were not aboard, or a car their son or daughter was driving, was suddenly in the hands of the Federal Government with no appeal available. While I strongly support the maxim that drug users must be accountable for their actions, I have to ask if the seizure of vessels when the owner of the vessel is innocent of any drug use or even the knowledge of any drug use is fair? I also ask whether these highly publicized seizures are really the best use of our strained resources? Finally, I ask whether these actions are not alienating our most important resource against drug use—the law-abiding U.S. citizen?

It is for these reasons that I worked hard to get this innocent owner provision included in this bill. We must make sure that we are not punishing anyone but the drug user, and that we are not unfairly depriving an innocent citizen of his or her property, whether it is used for recreation or for livelihood. This provision does that without giving up the authority to prosecute the drug user—the person who, after all, we're after.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I think this Congress is making it very clear today that we do not tolerate drug pushers or drug users in this country and I urge all my colleagues to support this bill.

I have an amendment that simply adds a provision to establish a vessel identification system similar to the ones we have for cars and planes. It will help identify vessels and their owners in drug cases. We have worked out positive and constructive changes with the administration to improve this measure.

It will be part of an omnibus amendment that will be offered later on and I am sure it will be adopted.

This is an excellent bill, Mr. Chairman. A lot of people have worked hard to put it together.

Mr. Chairman, I urge a strong vote of support when we reach final passage.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from the Virgin Islands [Mr. DE LUGO].

Mr. DE LUGO. Mr. Chairman, not too long ago, drugs were a problem for only a few people in the territories and commonwealths. Today, they are a problem for every island resident.

The need to get money to buy drugs and the big money that can be made selling them has spawned a vicious, new type of crime in the islands. Ruthless and brutal drug crime has victimized family after family.

Violent crime rates in some islands actually range to double the national average or more. Police estimate that three-quarters of these crimes are drug related.

And this is an insular problem that doesn't just affect the people of the islands. It affects their fellow Americans in the States as well.

This is because drug abuse in the islands is often a byproduct of international trafficking. Drugs are shipped to the islands primarily to be transhipped to the States.

The U.S. insular areas are the Nation's insular borders in the Caribbean and the Pacific. They are also the least protected of the Nation's borders.

Drug traffickers know this. In recent years, they have used our islands to smuggle their deadly goods to the large and lucrative U.S. market.

My home islands, the Virgin Islands, are right on the smuggler's route from South America to the United States.

Drug crime is too big a problem for insular governments to handle alone. They lack the resources and capability needed to fight it.

To provide the needed help, our colleagues from the other insular areas and I sponsored the U.S. Insular Areas Drug Abuse Act of 1986. Unfortunately, though, the administration hasn't implemented this law as intended.

The authorized spending for Puerto Rico was appropriated; but the administration made me fight hard to get the $4 million that was authorized for the Virgin Islands. Further, none of the special assistance authorized for the Pacific has been appropriated.

The Customs Service has finally agreed to station an aerostat radar for Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands; but we are still waiting for the Coast Guard to station a patrol vessel in St. Croix.

The administration hasn't given us the first required report on insular drug problems, even though its almost time for the second.

Meanwhile, insular drug problems have gotten worse. New types of drugs, like the killer crack, are coming in.

Over the past 5 years, Palau has developed a staggering heroin problem so serious that it is spilling over to Guam and other United States areas as well. According to the Drug Enforcement Administration and the World Health Organization, hundreds of Palau's 15,000 people may have used heroin.

So, as chairman of the Insular and International Affairs Subcommittee, I sponsored the Insular Areas Drug Amendments of 1988. Our other colleagues from the insular areas, Fofo Sunia, JAIME FUSTER, and BEN BLAZ joined me in sponsoring this bill.

Its intent was to build upon the 1986 law by providing ongoing attention to the Nation's drug problems in the insular areas. A hearing I held on our bill underscored the need for it. Testimony from witnesses such as Governors Alexander Farrelly of the Virgin Islands and Joseph Ada of Guam, Lt. Gov. Eni Hunkin of American Samoa, and senate president Iver Stridiron of the Virgin Islands as well as Reagan administration officials made it clear that the insular drug problem has become serious and has worsened.

The hearing also made it clear that Federal law enforcement agencies are doing little about the problem, shortsightedly not fully recognizing how it fits in to the drug problem faced by the Nation.

With the support of the subcommittee's ranking Republican, Bob Lagomarsino, full committee chairman Mo Udall, as well as the Speaker and the majority and minority leaders, almost all of our bill's provisions have been included the bill we are debating today, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988.

Subtitle C of title V would allocate more money, training, and equipment for insular drug abuse control efforts. It would dedicate these resources on a long-term basis. Assistance would be provided for locally developed—but federally approved—comprehensive drug abuse plans.

The few differences between the omnibus bill and the bill we initially introduced reflect agreements with the minority and the Judiciary Committee.

The bill would provide help for insular drug law enforcement. But it also recognizes that fighting drug crime is just one of the ways we must battle drug abuse.

Education and rehabilitation are just as important as law enforcement because demand has to be reduced. As long as the demand exists, someone will figure out a way to meet it.

Kids have to be taught not to be led into abusing drugs. Those on drugs already have to be gotten off them. Basic values have to be instilled.

It will take a dedication of resources to beat the Nation's drug problem in the insular areas. This bill would provide the resources needed and I urge the House to pass it.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Rodino], the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, and I ask unanimous consent that he be allowed to yield blocks of time out of his allotted time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. RODINO. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. RODINO. Mr. Chairman, the social, economic, and human costs to our Nation of drug trafficking and drug abuse are staggering. Those of us who have been working on this problem for many years know that the solutions are not easy. Our drug enforcement efforts are still fragmented among too many agencies. While some progress has been made, much greater coordination is needed. Drugs also must be made a top priority on our foreign policy agenda. More resources and efforts at all levels of our society must be devoted to education and prevention.

I support H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act which should assist in this effort. This legislation will get desperately needed funds to our communities which are being terrorized every day by drug trafficking and drug abuse.

Considerable resources rightly have been directed recently toward cracking down on those suppliers and distributors of illegal narcotics who are contemptuous of human life. Not enough have been concentrated on the other aspect of this grave problem: education of our young people to save them from becoming slaves to drugs, and treatment to give addicts a chance to become productive members of society. This bill will increase Federal assistance for State and local education and rehabilitation programs and provides a vehicle for expediting delivery of those funds.

H.R. 5210 also will provide more funds to the Drug Enforcement Agency, the Customs Service, the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Forces, and the Coast Guard. It establishes new controls over substances used to produce illegal drugs. It is designed to fight money laundering and it creates new offenses to stop the supply of arms to drug traffickers.

The bill reauthorizes State and local drug law enforcement programs and increases current Federal assistance.

One of the most important provisions of this legislation in fighting crime is the requirement for a 7-day waiting period before a handgun can be sold, to give police time to check an applicant's background for drug trafficking or other criminality, or for drug abuse or insanity.

As you know, Federal law already prohibits the sale of handguns to such persons. But that prohibition is meaningless in most States, because purchasers need only say they are not disqualified and they can get their guns, no further questions asked.

The waiting-period requirement gives our public-safety forces 7 days to tell a gun dealer whether would-be buyers have records that would deny them a handgun under current law. It provides time for dealers to ensure that the sale would not violate existing law. If you are law abiding, if you are mentally competent, you can buy a gun. If records provide that you are not, then you cannot. In life-threatening circumstances the waiting period could be waived.

This legislation is not gun licensing. It is not gun registration. It is not a ban on the manufacture of guns. It in no way impinges on one's legitimate right to own a gun. This legislation will merely accomplish that which we already have deemed desirable: It will make it harder for the criminal and the unbalanced to get guns; it will curb the frightening flow of deadly weapons into the wrong hands. And it is a sensible step that will help make the stress-filled job of our police officers a little less perilous. There is no doubt about the danger of their job. Seventy-two officers were murdered last year. Fifty of those murders involved handguns. Police groups strongly support this legislation.

A waiting period is not a concept foreign to our society. You cannot drive a car without passing a test. You cannot get a loan until your credit is checked. You cannot get a job in many cases without a reference check. No matter your academic credentials, you cannot practice your profession until you have proved your right to do so.

In short, many activities require waiting periods to protect us from those who are reckless or incompetents or who have criminal backgrounds. Several States already have waiting periods for the purchase of handguns. But many do not. Interstate trafficking in handguns, therefore, is notoriously easy. A trip across a State line permits criminals to buy handguns in States with weak laws and resell them in areas with tough laws.

That is why we need a national waiting period: To stem this deadly trafficking, to keep these weapons out of the hands of those who have no right or reason to have them, to help our police to protect themselves and us from those who should be denied guns but can buy them today all too easily.

Opponents of this legislation tell us that a waiting period will not prevent all criminals from getting guns. No one claims otherwise. But as Joe D. Casey, Nashville chief of police and president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, wrote recently, gun laws do work. My own State of New Jersey has required background checks for handgun purchases for many years. New Jersey State Police say that they have caught 10,000 convicted felons trying to buy handguns.

California has a 15-day waiting period. The State stopped 1,515 prohibited persons from buying handguns in 1986, Chief Casey wrote. President Reagan, you recall, said at the Toronto Economic Summit that he supported the California law. The Department of Justice has said it supports the concept of a waiting period.

For daring to voice support for a waiting period, the President was condemned by the gun lobby for having "undercut" tens of millions of his supporters. "Fortunately for him, he will never again have to face those voters * * *," the gun lobby said. And the gun lobby threatened in this letter to Members of Congress: "Other public officials, however, do not necessarily find themselves in the same luxurious situation." This attack is puzzling, because the gun lobby some years back, in what seemed its more reasonable days, actually had words of support for a waiting period.

So let us not be intimidated, and let us not be deceived with the notion that this issue would be best left to the States. Like drug trafficking, gun running is a national problem demanding a national response.

Gun trafficking is directly related to drug trafficking. they go hand in hand. The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms reports that in 1986 and 1987 a Virginia man bought 79 guns in that State. Four were found in New York in drug-related investigations. Three New York residents and a Dallas-area resident were charged with smuggling 131 handguns from Texas to a Brooklyn drug ring this year.

The Judiciary Committee unanimously approved this legislation last June 30, 35 to 0. The police are strongly urging its passage. Hubert Williams, president of the Police Foundation, has said: "There is no way that we can keep firearms out of the hands of criminals, people who are demented, and those bent on violence, people with serious criminal records, unless we have an opportunity to first do a background check and investigation."

And, Chief Casey notes that a reasonable waiting period will simply allow police to find out who is seeking to buy a weapon that could become an instrument of death. How can anyone who supports law enforcement be against that?

The Judiciary Committee voted to call this provision the Brady amendment, in honor of James S. Brady, the White House press secretary who was gravely wounded in the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan, and his wife, Sarah Brady, whose tireless efforts on behalf of a national waiting period were crucial to committee approval of this legislation. In the aftermath of the tragedy that struck her and her husband, Sarah Brady's personal commitment to this proposal has made a profound contribution to the growth of the public's information and support for it.

I urge support of H.R. 5210. It has the strong backing of the leaders of our communities. Drug abuse is a disease that infects the Nation. It breeds crime that infests our communities, regardless of wealth or circumstance. It is a national problem that demands a comprehensive approach.

Drugs are the No. 1 enemy confronting our families and our children today. Although we have made progress in mobilizing our resources to combat this terrible problem, the scope and magnitude of drug abuse in the United States continues to grow. The tragic, drug-related deaths of our youngsters, the drug pushers who populate our schoolyards and neighborhoods, the overwhelming flow of illicit, deadly drugs across our Nation's borders—all of these sap our Nation's strength and productivity. These are urgent problems that demand and deserve nothing less than an urgent, serious response.

We are still a long way from declaring victory in our battle against drugs. H.R. 5210, however, will be another important weapon in this fight.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES], the chairman of the Subcommittee on Crime of the Committee on the Judiciary.

□ 1500

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, the Committee on the Judiciary has general oversight of the Nation's law enforcement effort and all criminal justice proceedings. This includes all aspects of drug enforcement. Like many committees, our work on drug enforcement and drug abuse is ongoing. Therefore many of the measures which we have reported as our contribution to the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act, included in title VI, are matters which we have been considering for some time.

Let me just summarize some of the key provisions of title VI.

CHEMICALS

One of the most significant provisions, and perhaps as a consequence of that fact, one of the last controversial and most broadly supported provisions, is the chemical diversion and trafficking act. This major initiative was requested by the administration to prevent the flow of chemicals, such as ether and acetone, from the United States to countries like Colombia, Peru, and Bolivia because the chemicals are essential to the refining of cocaine. The bill would also substantially strengthen the ability to control the commerce in precursor chemicals—chemicals which are the raw materials for making dangerous drugs such as amphetamines, methamphetamine, and PCP.

FORFEITURE

The title also reflects our long experience and numerous oversight hearings on the forfeiture of the assets and property of drug traffickers. It requires an annual audit of the Department of Justice forfeiture fund by GAO. It provides more flexibility for the U.S. Marshals Service to procure computers for operating the forfeiture fund. It provides an innocent owner defense for owners of conveyances in civil forfeiture proceedings if they were not involved in illegal activity and provides expedited administrative procedures within the Department of Justice for these transactions.

STATE AND LOCAL ASSISTANCE

The title also reauthorizes the State and local drug law enforcement program. It expands the program from an authorized level of $225 to $250 million in fiscal year 1989, and to $500 million in each of the next 3 fiscal years. It encourages expediting the processing of funds to local units of government, which have the bulk of the burden of fighting drug traffic in their neighborhoods, and provides an entitlement concept for grants of more than $25,000 for local governments. The State and local units still will have to provide a 50-50 hard match for the Federal money.

ADDITIONAL RESOURCES

The title provides for additional resources for drug law enforcement. It provides, in the current fiscal year, $4.9 million to relocate DEA's headquarters from Washington, DC, to Pentagon City thereby centralizing staff now scattered in a half-dozen downtown locations, and achieving substantial rent decreases.

For fiscal year 1989 it provides for $115 million for increased DEA programs that the committee has identified as critical for maximizing our antidrug efforts. These include a 25-percent increase in the foreign cooperative investigations program of $15 million, $19 million for DEA's airwing, $9 million for DEA's intelligence program, $23.5 million for DEA's South American initiative against the cocaine traffic, $30 million to enforce the chemical diversion bill, and $10 million to complete DEA's relocation to Pentagon City.

The bill provides for $9 million for the prosecution of cases by the multiagency organized crime drug enforcement task forces for fiscal year 1989.

At the suggestion of RON MAZZOLI, chairman of the Immigration Subcommittee, it includes $82.3 million for enhanced functions of the Immigration and Naturalization Service that support the drug enforcement mission: interdiction, investigations, detention and deportation, training and orientation.

FIREARMS

The title creates two new offenses to stop the supply of firearms to drug traffickers and provides for a 7-day waiting period before a handgun transaction can be completed to permit local police to check if the purchaser has any criminal background. Waiting periods have been proven in many jurisdictions around the country to be effective in preventing criminals and drug traffickers from buying handguns. There is no question that guns are as essential to the drug business as drugs, precursor chemicals or money laundering services. This provision will help us disarm traffickers.

AMENDMENTS

The Judiciary Committee reported two other important provisions which have not been included in H.R. 5210 due to jurisdictional concerns: user accountability and the so-called drug czar.

These provisions will be enforced as amendments. I will be supporting the McCollum amendment on user accountability which was reported by the committee. I will support the Brooks amendment which creates a drug czar in a form modified some from what the committee reported.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI].

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act, which seeks to attack the drug problem from many angles. It will come down hard on drug traffickers and persistent users while encouraging and funding drug education and rehabilitation programs.

During Judiciary Committee consideration of the bill we expanded many of the programs started in the 1986 Omnibus Drug Act—such as special Federal assistance to State and local law enforcement efforts to combat drugs. We revised the 1986 program to assure that local governments—such as Louisville and Jefferson County, KY—receive all the the Federal money they are due from the State and quickly as possible. The bill also provides for cities and counties to apply directly to the Federal Government should any untoward delays occur at the State level in passing through their entitlements.

I am disappointed, however, that language was included revising the Federal-local cost-sharing formula from the current 75-25 Federal-local match to a 50-50 match. I proposed an amendment, which unfortunately the rules committee rejected, which would have restored the current 75-25 formula. I hope this provision will receive further scrutiny as the bill proceeds through the legislative pathway. This increased match places an unreasonable burden on our local governments who wish to participate in the program.

Also during Judiciary Committee consideration of the bill, we included language which would create a correctional officers' training center under the National Institute of Corrections to assist Federal, State, and local prisons in their drug rehabilitation efforts. I understand that my colleague JACK DAVIS of Illinois plans to offer an amendment to strike this language, and I urge my colleagues to vote against such a move. In a recent study conducted in my hometown of Jefferson County, KY, over 50 percent of a group of parolees tested positive for illegal drug use. This is but one example of the growing problem of drug abuse in our Nation's correctional facilities and the corresponding rate of recidivism due to drug-related offenses. Effective drug rehabilitation programs in our Nation's prisons could curb this often-endless cycle of drug abuse and crime—and in the long run help us curb our ever-increasing expenditures for prisons and prison construction. It makes good sense for us to maintain this language in the bill.

Another important provision included by the Judiciary Committee would require a national 7-day waiting period before a handgun can be purchased or transferred. The "Brady amendment"—named after Presidential Press Secretary Jim Brady, who was shot and permanently injured during the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan, and his wife Sarah—makes sense. It is not a step toward confiscation of handguns, but will help to keep handguns out of the hands of the wrong people—including those involved in the dirty illegal drug trade. Earlier this year Sarah Brady visited Louisville to talk about the waiting period bill. She exhibited during her day with us, wit, charm—and real stamina—as she answered friendly and not-so-friendly questions about the bill. It was in large part through the hard work of Mrs. Brady and members of the law enforcement community—including Sgt. Ralph Orms of Louisville, who holds a national office with the Fraternal Order of Police—that we were successful with the waiting period bill. I urge my colleagues to vote against any amendments to strike or weaken this important language.

The Judiciary Committee also included increased resources for the antidrug activities of the FBI, DEA, and for the first time, at my request, the Border Patrol of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. The Border Patrol has seized over 60 percent of all illegal narcotics coming into the United States along the United States-Mexican land border since the beginning of fiscal year 1987 and deserves adequate resources to continue this important work.

Lastly, although the Judiciary Committee did not consider this matter, I would like to bring it to the attention of my colleagues. The U.S. Customs Service operates a little-known facility in Front Royal, VA, which trains drug-detecting dogs and dog handlers for Federal, State, local, and international law enforcement efforts. Because this training is a critical component in our war against drugs, I would urge my colleagues to consider at some point authorizing funding to upgrade and expand the Customs Canine Enforcement Training Center. It is the only such Federal-civilian facility in the Nation and has trained dog and dog handlers from 69 State and local law enforcement agencies since 1974, including several from the Kentucky State Police. There is no money in the bill specifically earmarked for such upgrading and expansion, but I urge my colleagues to give this matter further consideration down the road.

I urge support—strong and bipartisan support—on final passage of H.R. 5210.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Chairman, while we on this side are not debating the bill on the same order the other side is, I want to take this opportunity, being a member of the Committee on the Judiciary, to commend both gentlemen from New Jersey, my subcommittee chairman and the chairman of the committee, for their work and to point out the fact that this bill does already contain provisions that will not be amended on precursor chemicals that are really fantastic new improvements to the DEA law enforcement fighting tools, changes in the State drug-grant program that includes some encouragement for user accountability, prison funding, at the President's request, of $1.38 billion, changes in the Postal and Forest Service authority to apprehend drug dealers and a money-laundering tax predicate offense, which I think are every good solid, new proposals out of the Committee on the Judiciary in this legislation that will not otherwise be debated, and I think the public needs to be aware of it. It is a very major effort.

I also want to commend the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] for his efforts in helping with the user accountability provisions that will be before us for amendment probably tomorrow to further strengthen the area that is really remiss right now on the demand side to make users pay a price to help deter their areas.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair wishes to announce that the gentleman from Florida [Mr. McCOLLUM] has 41 minutes remaining and the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL] has 33 minutes remaining.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DAVIS].

Mr. LENT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to support H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988, and, in particular, title X of the bill which was crafted in the Energy and Commerce Committee on which I serve. I congratulate you and my colleagues for packaging a wide range of innovative legislative proposals to address the manufacture, distribution, and use of illegal drugs.

I have a particular interest in this legislation since the New York State Office of Substance Abuse estimates that 260,000 IV drug abusers reside in New York and that perhaps as many as 3 million persons in New York used drugs for nonmedical purposes during 1987. These figures clearly demonstrate how far we have to go in meeting our Nation's drug problem.

Title X of the bill makes some major changes in Federal drug, alcohol abuse, and mental health programs to strengthen drug and alcohol prevention and demand reduction programs and to improve and expand drug and alcohol treatment and mental health services. What was formerly a single State block grant for $487 million will be reauthorized as two separate State block grants; one for $475 million for alcohol and drug abuse, and one for $350 million for mental health services. Separating these authorities will allow funds to be more effectively targeted.

Title X also establishes a new block grant for IV drug abuse treatment and outreach for drug abusers at risk of transmitting the AIDS virus. This $250 million program requires a dollar-for-dollar match by the States. Another important provision, the result of a Republican amendment, is the special one-time grant program for $100 million to expand drug abuse treatment programs in order to reduce the waiting time for persons needing treatment.

I am also pleased that these provisions set aside funds to support demonstration projects for alcohol and drug abuse prevention and treatment programs for pregnant women. Clearly, innovation in this critical area is needed.

These changes along with other health programs reauthorized in title X should provide for a strong combination of programs to launch this important initiative against drug abuse.

Finally, I must voice my concern over a provision included in title X that was not part of the version reported out of the Energy and Commerce Committee. These provisions establish Federal standards for the certification of all drug testing laboratories. While I certainly support the need for high standards for such laboratories, these provisions are so stringent that few laboratories will be able to pass certification, and drug testing programs will, in effect, be eliminated. Regardless where one stands on the sensitive issue of drug testing, I believe that reasonable and workable standards for laboratories are needed. I intend to support the amendment to be offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Bliley], that will delete these provisions and substitute reasonable standards that will improve the quality of both drug testing programs and the drug testing laboratories. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting the Bliley amendment.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, today I am pleased that we are here debating the merits of this omnibus drug bill because it illustrates to America that we in Congress believe it is time to set in motion a comprehensive policy and program to deal with the drug problem in this country.

In 1986, 1987, and again in 1988, I proposed the four-legged program know as PIER—punishment, interdiction, education, and rehabilitation.

I think that the bill that we are considering today is very strong in the areas of education and rehabilitation. Unfortunately, it is not so strong on punishment, and it is completely lacking at this point in interdiction. I will be offering two amendments which go hand in hand to add strength and efficiency in this punishment area. One of the amendments strikes a provision which spends $22 million on a center to train prison officials to conduct a drug rehabilitation program, and the other adds the $22 million, plus $8 million, back to the Department of Justice for offices of U.S. attorneys in areas where the moneys are desperately needed for prosecutions.

The Department of Justice already has a Federal law enforcement training center in two locations in America and is building a third, plus they have a 5-year training plan currently under way and do not support a facility which duplicates the purposes of their Federal law enforcement training centers and the Bureau of Prisons.

As I said before, we need to deal comprehensively with the drug problem, and I should add that we need to do that efficiently and effectively. My constituents are willing to help pay for the war on drugs, but they expect us to do it in a manner which does not waste tax dollars on unnecessary facilities.

On the other side of the coin, Congress has consistently cut the President's request for new U.S. attorneys while giving more money to investigators, and that is causing a terrible backlog in the system. We have to make an effort to free the logjam at the courts and get our judicial system back into balance.

My amendments are small but significant steps toward that end, and the need we have in this country for Federal prosecutors is no secret. I am sure every Member could check back with his own U.S. attorney's offices in his State and hear first hand the problems and frustrations they face. In fact, in my home State of Illinois I know of two pending cases in which one of the U.S. attorney's offices could indict 100 or more criminal felons on drug charges if they had prosecutors to put them through the justice system. The best studies show that in order to have a more effective drug law enforcement, the Federal prosecutor ratio should be 4½ to 1. That ratio is currently 19 to 1, and that does not take into account the fact that most investigators are the product of a coordinated Federal, State, and local effort.

Mr. Chairman, I ask the Members to please support the Davis amendments when they come to the floor during the next 2 days.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. Craig].

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. Chairman, at the outset let me, first of all, congratulate the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary and the appropriate subcommittees, along with the ranking minority members of those subcommittees, for a piece of legislation that I think has long been needed in this country. I am, of course, talking about the omnibus drug control bill. It will go a long way in beginning to build some controls on the streets and education with our young people that is so critically necessary to fight this national plague.

Let me address myself, though, specifically to title VI, subsection 6503. This is an important issue and an important area, and I have to believe that the Subcommittee on Crime in large part added a portion to this legislation that is, if not needed, at least unworkable. I am talking about a 7-day waiting period on handguns.

This morning I was privileged to introduce 115 rank-and-file cops on the beat, you could call them, from over 27 States in this Nation. They came here to lobby. They came here to lobby us Members of Congress on this legislation, not in opposition to the omnibus crime control bill but certainly in opposition to this section, because, as they said so clearly this morning, it will not deter the criminal; it will be the honest law-abiding citizen that might be without a gun or that will be limited in his or her right to acquire a gun while the criminal, the drug dealer on the street, will still be buying his gun from behind the bar for an exorbitant amount of money because he has it or out of the back of a car that moves into a community to sell handguns to young kids on the street that are pushing crack.

That is really the issue. I hope as we debate this bill and as we move toward amendments, that we will look at some reasonable alternatives that are valuable to us. As we move to amend this important legislation, I hope when we arrive at this section, we will look most clearly at the McCollum alternative or the McCollum substitute that will devise a mechanism by which we will be able to track and identify those individuals who are criminals attempting to acquire a gun. That really is the issue here, to take guns away from criminals and not take guns away from law-abiding citizens or in some way to restrict the right of the individual law-abiding citizen to do so.

We have provided positive alternatives for the law-enforcement community, alternatives that 115 rank-and-file cops on the street supported and endorsed today as they came to lobby us here. Let us make the appropriate amendments, pass this most important legislation for our country, and hopefully improve the climate on the streets for the young people and for the law-abiding citizen.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Rowland].

Mr. ROWLAND of Connecticut. Mr. Chairman, first let me congratulate and thank the many Members who have worked on this legislation and the various committees and also the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL], chairman of the committee, and the ranking minority member, the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. Chairman, I have spent a lot of time over the last 4 years talking with young people across my State and across my district, and, quite frankly, the conclusion I have come to is really that the way to resolve this issue is to rely on our next generation, to rely on those young people, and hopefully what we are doing today and through this week is to give them the tools, the support, and the encouragement to get the job done. If our first graders and our eighth graders and our high school kids out there are not willing to participate, if they are not willing to shut down the drug dealers across this country, we are not going to be successful.

So I hope that as we debate these amendments, some 36 amendments, during the next several days, that we keep this in mind. This is political, there are party differences, but when all is said and done, I hope this is the type of vehicle everyone can use to resolve the problem.

I would like to highlight a few key provisions I see in the legislation. First of all, it is comprehensive. We ask for supply and demand. On the demand side, we want more money for drug rehab programs, no legalization of drugs, youth programs, educational programs, recognition of problems with gangs in our urban areas, alcohol abuse problems, and yes, we will debate the death penalty and other provisions which may be very, very helpful.

On the supply side, we want more money for the Coast Guard, law enforcement, more money for DEA regional cooperation, and cooperation with other countries. We are going to go after drug trafficking, and we want money for the FAA and DOT, and we want money-laundering provisions.

□ 1515

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. HUTTO], and I ask unanimous consent that he be allowed to yield blocks of time out of his allotted time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. HUTTO. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I want to commend the leadership on its tremendous effort in assembling the legislation before us today. This was no small task and I believe H.R. 5210 is basically a sound bill that deserves our strong support.

The distinguished chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. JONES], is unable to be here this afternoon. However, I ask that his statement fully outlining the provisions of our committee's title in H.R. 5210 be inserted in the RECORD.

Mr. Chairman, I won't take a lot of time to describe the provisions of title VII. I will simply highlight the main provisions.

Several sections of our title clarify a number of legal questions relating to Coast Guard drug law enforcement activities, and should help the Coast Guard to do its job more effectively.

Section 7002 would extend the same liability protection Coast Guard commanders now have under the law to Navy commanders of ships on which Coast Guard personnel are assigned for drug enforcement missions.

Section 7003 closes loopholes in existing law whereby smugglers who sink their boats in an effort to prevent detection may be prosecuted if they are American citizens or resident aliens and there is sufficient evidence to indicate possession with intent to distribute, and would allow Americans and resident aliens arrested by a foreign nation on the high seas for drug charges to be prosecuted by the United States if the arresting nation does not do so.

Section 7003 also requires persons on ships of unknown status to make foreign registry claims at the time of boarding, rather than making the claim later in court to escape prosecution.

Section 7004 would provide indemnification of Coast Guard employees from personal liability for claims arising from performance of their duties during law enforcement activities.

Section 7005 would amend the Suits in Admiralty Act and the Public Vessels Act to ensure that Coast Guard law enforcement personnel are afforded the same protection under the law at sea that other Federal law enforcement officers enjoy on land under the Federal Tort Claims Act.

Section 7006 clarifies existing law to state that the Coast Guard has law enforcement authority over, as well as on and under, waters subject to the jurisdiction of the United States and the high seas.

Section 7007 addresses the most effective use of interdiction efforts on the Great Lakes.

Section 7008 would amend title 49 of the United States Code with relation to forfeiture of conveyances in drug-related offenses.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, section 7009 will provide a total of $346 million to the Coast Guard to fund 500 new full-time positions, to enhance existing equipment, and to purchase additional vessels, aircraft, and surveillance radar for drug enforcement activities. Most of the new equipment will be additional 110-foot patrol boats and HH-60 helicopters, which are not only critical to our drug effort but can also be used by the Coast Guard for its other missions should we ever truly turn the corner in this increasingly violent battle.

Mr. Chairman, the Coast Guard is on the front line in our drug interdiction efforts. It has done a tremendous job in the past. However, it wants to do a better job and it will do a better job with the additional equipment and personnel provided by this bill.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 5210 and would like to commend you and our distinguished majority leader for your leadership in formulating and coordinating the development of this essential legislation. Plenty has been said as to the need for this legislation, legislation which should permit us to "round the bend" in this war to eradicate drug abuse in this great country. Instead, I rise to explain the provisions of title VII, the portion of the anti-drug bill developed by the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries in a true bipartisan fashion.

In developing our title, the committee sought to provide for more effective Coast Guard enforcement of laws relating to drug trafficking. This goal is addressed through two avenues. First, this legislation clarifies several legal questions which have arisen since the enactment of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986. Second, the legislation authorizes additional appropriations for Coast Guard operations and the purchase of equipment for fiscal years 1989 through 1992.

Allow me to briefly explain the provisions contained in our title and our reasoning behind their inclusion. Since the passage of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986, several legal questions have arisen which had the potential to adversely impact the Coast Guard's drug interdiction efforts. These include: First, personal liability exposure of naval commanding officers involved in drug interdiction activities; second, enforcement problems related to difficulties in determining the flag status of vessels; and third, liability exposure of the Coast Guard and its employees.

The Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986 authorized Coast Guard law enforcement detachments [LEDETS] to engage in drug interdiction activities from Navy vessels. Liability problems may occur when naval vessels have to fire into a vessel suspected of drug smuggling which refuses to stop. If personnel on the suspect vessel are injured and a search of the vessel turns up no drugs, the naval commanding officer may be subject to a law suit. Under section 637 of title 14, United States Code, commanding officers of Coast Guard vessels, and persons acting under their orders, are indemnified from penalties or damages when a Coast Guard vessel fires at or into another vessel that does not stop following an order to do so.

On two occasions Navy ships with Coast Guard LEDETS aboard have had to fire into suspect vessels that refused to stop. On both occasions the vessels contained large amounts of drugs. In one instance, one person was injured; fortunately, no one was killed. Given the continued escalation of drug smuggling and the associated violence, the frequency of these types of events will likely increase, thereby exposing naval personnel to increased opportunities for personal liability claims. Section 7002 of our title serves to correct this problem by extending indemnification protection to naval commanding officers and personnel acting under their orders aboard Navy vessels on which Coast Guard law enforcement detachments are assigned pursuant to section 379 of title 14 United States Code.

The Coast Guard has encountered two types of cases where it has had difficulty in enforcing the Maritime Drug Law Enforcement Act of 1980 because of problems related to determination of the flag status of a vessel. The first case occurs when drug smugglers sink their vessel to avoid detection during the boarding. A related situation occurs when the occupants of a vessel, the registry of which cannot be determined at the time of the boarding, later raise a valid foreign registry as a defense in court. The second case occurs when the vessel's flag state retains jurisdiction, but shows little interest in prosecuting U.S. citizens or resident aliens. Current law does not allow the Coast Guard to proceed against U.S. citizens or resident aliens in either of these cases.

Under section 3(a) of the Maritime Drug Enforcement Act (46 U.S.C. App. 1903(a)), it is unlawful to "knowingly or intentionally manufacture or distribute, or to possess with intent to manufacture or distribute, a controlled substance" on any vessel subject to the jurisdiction of the United States. Section 7003 of our title extends the application of section 3(a) of the act to include U.S. citizens and resident aliens aboard a vessel of any nation. This would allow the United States to try a U.S. citizen or resident alien for a violation of the Maritime Drug Enforcement Act if the flag state of the foreign vessel fails to try the individual for the offense under the law of that country. This section is not intended to limit the authority of the flag state to take custody of and proceed against the individual. It would also not change the existing requirement for consent of the flag state before the Coast Guard boards a foreign vessel on the high seas or in the territorial waters of another nation. Nor would it change international procedures and arrangements for obtaining custody of U.S. citizens through extradition proceedings.

Subsection (b) of section 7003 amends section 3(b)(2) of the Maritime Drug Enforcement Act to require that claims of vessel nationality or registry be raised at the time of boarding by the Coast Guard. This addresses the situation in which a vessel appears to be a U.S. vessel at the time of the boarding, but individuals charged with a violation of the act later raise the vessel's foreign registry as a defense to prosecution. Requiring that a claim of foreign registry be raised at the time of boarding would allow an inquiry into the vessel's registry and appropriate requests to the state of registry for a waiver of jurisdiction.

The Coast Guard's increased emphasis on drug interdiction has also led to increased exposure of Coast Guard employees and the Coast Guard itself to law suits. Currently, Coast Guard employees are liable for actions undertaken in the performance of their duties. This exposure has resulted in 32 suits being filed against Coast Guard personnel. The Coast Guard itself is also subject to suits for all of its maritime activities, under the authority of the suits in Admiralty Act. On land, however, it is protected from common law torts by the Federal Tort Claims Act [FTCA]. This has the anomalous effect of exposing the Coast Guard to a variety of suits for actions taken at sea which would be protected by FTCA if they were carried out on land. We have sought to alleviate this problem through the legislation incorporated as sections 7004 and 7005. Section 7004 authorizes the Commandant of the Coast Guard to indemnify any Coast Guard member or employee against personal liability for actions taken within the scope of their official law enforcement duties. It is patterned after the authority of the Federal Aviation Administrator to indemnify Federal Aviation Administration employees for damages for actions taken within the scope of their employment.

Section 7005 incorporates certain of the exceptions to suits against the United States presently contained in the Federal Tort Claims Act (28 U.S.C. 2671-2680) and is intended to clarify maritime law relating to the liability of the United States.

Prior to 1960, admiralty suits against the United States, other than those arising from the operation of certain vessels, were brought under the Federal Tort Claims Act. In 1960, Congress amended the suits in Admiralty Act (46 U.S.C. App. 741-752) to encompass all admiralty actions, in order to remove uncertainty over the proper forum for certain claims against the United States.

On land, the U.S. Government and its employees are protected from common law torts by the Federal Tort Claims Act. The Federal Tort Claims Act does not apply on the navigable waters of the United States or on the high seas. On those waters the suits in Admiralty Act applies. The suits in Admiralty Act does not contain several of the exceptions to suit contained in the Federal Tort Claims Act. Section 7005 would amend the suits in Admiralty Act to include several exceptions currently provided under the Federal Tort Claims Act.

Specifically, the exceptions for discretionary function and customs detention are particularly important with respect to Coast Guard law enforcement efforts. For example, claims frequently arise with respect to seizure of vessels during maritime law enforcement efforts. In some cases, vessels containing large quantities of illicit narcotics have been seized but have sunk before they could be returned to a U.S. port, and claims have been filed against the United States for loss of the vessel. Because the vessel is destroyed, no property is available to effect a forfeiture. Therefore, the ability of the United States to use the defense that the vessel was subject to forfeiture, and that title vested in the United States at the time of commission of the act, notwithstanding the lack of a declaration of forfeiture, is unclear. Inclusion of the Federal Tort Claims Act customs detention exception from suit within the suits in Admiralty Act provision would insure that the United States is not liable for damage to detained property on navigable waters of the United States or the high seas under the same circumstances as is presently the case for damage to detained property that occurs ashore.

Section 7006 amends section 2 of title 14, United States Code, to specifically authorize the Coast Guard to enforce and assist in the enforcement of all U.S. laws over, as well as on and under, waters subject to the jurisdiction of the United States and the high seas. The section also adds maritime air surveillance or interdiction to the Coast Guard's primary law enforcement duties. The committee does not intend that this section interfere with or override the provisions of the memorandum of understanding between the U.S. Coast Guard and the U.S. Customs Service signed May 11, 1987, and approved by the National Drug Policy Board.

Section 7007 requires the Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of the Treasury to sign an agreement reflecting the most effective use of U.S. Coast Guard and U.S. Customs Service resources to interdict illegal drugs on the Great Lakes. The section also encourages the Secretary of State to begin negotiations with officials of the Canadian Government on an agreement to increase cooperation between and coordination of our respective Governments' efforts to interdict drugs on the Great Lakes.

The agreement and negotiations under this section will not only increase the effectiveness of drug interdiction on the Great Lakes, but will also have a deterrent effect against any increase of drug activity on the Great Lakes.

Section 7008 has as its basis the belief that the owner of a conveyance and those who rely on the continued operation of that conveyance in order to earn a livelihood should not be punished for the actions of another which are beyond the knowledge and without the consent of the owner. This concern arose as a result of the implementation of the administration's zero tolerance policy. Seemingly overnight, we are apprised of numerous inequitable instances when, for example, a fishing vessel would be seized and be subject to being forfeited because some small amount, perhaps even just a trace of illegal substances, were found in the personal belongings of one of the crew members. This placed an economic hardship upon the innocent, when in fact it was the guilty individual who should bear the burden of the punishment.

Section 7008 of our title provides that no vessel, vehicle, or aircraft shall be forfeited to the extent of an interest of an owner for a drug-related offense established by that owner to have been committed or omitted without the knowledge or consent of the owner.

Finally, a perennial Coast Guard problem is the lack of adequate funding. These problems are evidenced by the fact that over the past 5 years, in constant dollar terms, the Coast Guard has been level funded. By way of comparison, the Department of Defense has seen its budget increase by over 15 percent during the same period. In an effort to help alleviate Coast Guard's funding problems, the Department of Defense has periodically provided the Coast Guard with additional funds for the purchase of new equipment, but has provided very little additional funds for operations. The Coast Guard's operating expenses problems reached the breaking point in fiscal year 1988 when it suffered a $103 million funding shortfall. This forced it to close a number of units, to reduce law enforcement efforts by 55 percent, and to cease performing discretionary search and rescue patrols.

Section 7009 authorizes appropriations for the Coast Guard, to remain available until expended, of $264 million for acquisition, construction and improvements, $82 million for operating expenses for fiscal year 1989, and $30 million per year for operating expenses for fiscal years 1990, 1991, and 1992. This money shall be used to provide 500 additional full-time positions, and to procure, enhance, relocate, operate, and maintain additional equipment and facilities for drug interdiction activities of the Coast Guard. Amounts and personnel authorized by this section are in addition to any other amounts or personnel strengths authorized.

To guard against the siphoning off of Coast Guard resources from its more traditional missions such as the protection of life and property at sea, this section contains a proviso that nothing in this omnibus drug bill shall require the Coast Guard to engage in new drug enforcement missions, except to the extent that additional funds are appropriated or transferred to the Secretary of Transportation for those drug interdiction purposes. I feel that this section is particularly important because of recent actions taken by the Coast Guard. As I am sure many of you know, the Coast Guard closed numerous search and rescue, and marine safety units this past year. At the same time, however, it was expanding its drug interdiction operations in the Bahamas. While I certainly don't oppose expansion of the Coast Guard's drug interdiction efforts, I strongly oppose doing so at the expense of other Coast Guard missions. In plain English, this section requires the Coast Guard to ask Congress for additional appropriations if it wants to expand drug interdiction efforts.

I urge all Members to support this important legislation in order to avoid any additional delay which can only serve to exacerbate this already grievous problem which this great Nation faces.

Mr. HUTTO. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. TAUZIN].

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask my distinguished colleague from Florida to clarify a section of this legislation that is critical to our interdiction of illegal narcotics traffickers. Title VII of the omnibus drug bill authorizes appropriations of $264 million for the Coast Guard for acquisition, construction, and improvement of assets. Additional funds are authorized for operation and maintenance purposes. I would first like to commend the gentleman for deferring to the Coast Guard's expertise in what is needed out there by not trying to mandate specific types of equipment. There is, however, an urgent need to address gaps in radar surveillance in the gulf coast region. This is of obvious concern because many of those gaps occur over my district and the gentleman's district as well. Would a viable drug interdiction option be the purchase of aerostate radar systems by the Coast Guard, then basing those systems on private vessels chartered for that purpose and modified by private industry in the most economical means possible?

Mr. HUTTO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAUZIN. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. HUTTO. Mr. Chairman, hearings before the House Armed Services Committee confirmed that the gulf coast region is extremely vulnerable to narcotics traffickers due to gaps in radar coverage. Additionally, the statement of managers to the Department of Defense authorization bill identified aerostats as a cost-effective way to fill the gaps in our border detection network. The agencies charged with drug surveillance and interdiction must determine the most effective and efficient mix of drug surveillance and interdiction assets to meet this threat. Among such assets are aerostate radar systems which can provide 24-hour surveillance of possible narcotics traffickers. Such systems are extremely cost effective, operating at lower acquisition and life-cycle costs than fixed-wing radar aircraft. Given that aerostat systems are able to provide effective deterrence and interdiction of drug smugglers, they should continue to be a critical element of our national war on drugs.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Florida [Mr. HUTTO] for his response, and I also want to commend him for the excellent job he is doing on behalf of the Coast Guard and its efforts at interdiction for this country.

Mr. HUTTO. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA].

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the omnibus antidrug bill and ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks. This is a good bill which understands the vital partnership necessary to fight the war on drugs both on the supply and demand side of the problem.

Mr. Chairman, 2 years ago Congress passed an omnibus antidrug bill that was supposed to help the Nation fight its battle against illegal drugs. The legislation was a compilation of proposals primarily aimed at attacking the supply side the drug equation through drug interdiction and enforcement.

In the intervening 2 years, it has become apparent that this approach alone simply is not working. Drugs are more prevalent than ever. Treatment centers are overburdened. Prisons are filled to capacity. Clearly, it is time to develop a new approach that focuses on on the other side of the equation; that is, reducing the demand for drugs.

How do we go about reducing demand? We do it by creating a "no drug culture," a culture in which it isn't fashionable to use drugs, a culture that doesn't accept the idea of "recreational drug use."

For a long time, we have tolerated the idea of the casual user. That has to stop. We need to impress upon people that in using drugs there is a cost, not only to the individual, but to the community: that buying and using drugs enriches criminals in this country and abroad. We need a society that rejects that cost because the ultimate price is lost productivity, lost revenue, and lost lives here at home.

Later there will be an amendment offered which will help create this "no drug culture" by making drug users accountable. The amendment would limit access to certain government privileges and benefits, like grants and licenses. The American taxpayer should not provide privileges and special assistance to drug criminals.

As the ranking minority member of the Housing Subcommittee, I also want to emphasize that this amendment would prohibit Federal housing assistance to individuals twice convicted of drug felonies. At a time when we have long waiting lists of law-abiding citizens who hope to receive housing assistance, it makes no sense to allow even a single unit of assisted housing to be occupied by a criminal who preys on others in housing projects and their neighborhoods. It's a tough approach, but one which sends a clear message that "There is a cost to using drugs."

I also want to point out to the membership that our colleague from New York, Mr. DIOGUARDI, may offer an amendment to establish a drug abuse clearinghouse within the Office of Public Housing of HUD and to establish a regional training program to help housing officials deal with drug crime. The gentleman from New York has been a leader in our subcommittee on this issue, and I commend him for it.

H.R. 5210 will create new offenses for supplying firearms to drug dealers, new sentences for possesion of crack, and expansion of drug testing within the criminal justice system. Again, these are penalties to be imposed upon those who support and contribute to the drug culture.

To help those who want to eliminate the drug culture through education, prevention and treatment, we have provided in this bill a major increase in Federal funding. Specifically, we have authorized $85 million in funding for programs which target juvenile delinquents, youth gangs, homeless youth, and women enrolled in the WIC Program.

We have provided new money for local drug prevention programs and targeted that assistance to those centers that have long waiting lists. Furthermore, we allow States to use the Adult Education Act to fund drug abuse prevention and rehabilitation programs for prisoners.

Though H.R. 5210 focuses on the demand side of the drug equation, we have not overlooked the importance of reducing the supply of drugs.

The bill includes a number of provisions designed to combat money laundering by drug traffickers. For example, the bill prohibits banks from selling bank checks, cashier's checks, travelers checks, or money orders over $3,000 to those without proper identification, and requires institutions to maintain records of all such transactions. Second, H.R. 5210 would allow law enforcement to access certain financial records when they are relevant to an investigation. Finally, the bill establishes severe penalties for violation of these recordkeeping rules.

H.R. 5210 provides over $700 million in increased funding for Federal agencies involved in drug interdiction and enforcement; $1.75 billion in matching grants over 4 years to boost State and local drug enforcement efforts; and $449 million for the Federal prison system. This is an unprecedented commitment of money by Congress to combat drugs, and I think, it shows a willingness on the part of Congress to "put its money where its mouth is."

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I am pleased with the drug bill before us today. I think the legislation properly focuses on demand for drugs and does not simply throw money at the problem.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to our distinguished minority leader, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL].

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Chairman, there are many words that might be used to describe drug abuse.

I think the best one is waste.

Waste of promise. Waste of money. Waste of lives. And waste of the American future.

Think of all the human potential that has been devoured by this monster of waste.

We have to stop this disaster in two ways: in cutting off supply and in holding users accountable.

That is what this drug bill is all about.

As this debate continues you will hear about the supply problem. Let me for a moment talk about the demand problem.

How do we reduce drug demand? We all agree that education and treatment are necessary.

Yet these critical elements are not enough. Many casual drug users are already educated on the dangers and illegality of drug use and choose to get high anyway.

More education won't make any difference to the already educated.

The new and necessary element to reduce demand is user accountability.

Three Republican amendments to this bill establish Federal user accountability provisions for the first time.

At the very heart of our civilization is the belief in individual responsibility. But a belief in individual responsibility without individual accountability is a belief without substance in the real world.

We often use the metaphor of war when we talk about our fight against illegal drugs.

I am reminded that during World War II, those in conquered nations who aided the Nazis were known as collaborators. They were scorned by their neighbors. And after liberation, they were punished.

Well, those who use illegal drugs are collaborators with those who sell them.

And collaborators have to know they will be held accountable for their collaboration.

We say to those who use drugs—if you use you lose.

That's part of the message we want to send in this legislation to users.

Our message to traffickers is the same tough drug enforcement response we have advocated for years. Once again we have the opportunity to provide the death penalty and exclusionary rule to show how serious we are about stopping drug trafficking.

For the first time we will allow military training and assistance against international drug trafficking. Dramatic action is required.

So I urge the adoption of the amendments dealing with accountability, along with the other good provisions of this bill.

May I take this moment in conclusion quickly to thank the kind cooperation we have had from the majority side. The Speaker initially determined that it would be a bipartisan effort and had the distinguished majority leader get in touch with us so that we might work together, as we have now with 11 or more of our committees involved, but we are back here with the package that will get support from both sides of the aisle on admittedly some controversial issues that we have got to discuss by way of the amendments that have been made in order. But I certainly want to applaud the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL] too, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN], who I see here, who serve as our chairman and ranking member on the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control. What they have done to help push and motivate this whole piece of legislation we are grateful to the two of them for and all those who played such a vital role in what we have to work with today.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. GALLEGLY].

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased that we have before us today legislation to address one of the most serious threats to our Nation's well-being, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act. Unfortunately, we have evidenced the personal destruction that results from drug abuse, and the violent and illegal methods that are used to promote such activities. Without necessary resources and truly effective enforcement measures, we will be unable to successfully deter this enemy. For this reason, I specifically draw your attention to an amendment to be offered by my colleague from Pennsylvania, Mr. GEKAS, that I believe will prove effective in fighting the spread of drug abuse and ending the free reign that drug dealers have enjoyed as a result of lax punishment for the crime of murder.

I will rise in strong support of the Gekas amendment to the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988. Let me take this opportunity to compliment my colleague for his persistence in this matter. As my colleagues in the House have already demonstrated during a 1986 vote on a similar amendment, a vote in favor of the death penalty for drug dealers who kill in the course of a criminal activity is desperately needed and, most importantly, wanted by the majority of Congress and the American public.

The need for the Federal death penalty is made abundantly clear by a shocking situation I was recently exposed to. In the course of a life-threatening undercover drug operation, a drug enforcement agent from my district was fatally wounded by two suspected heroin dealers. As one of the suspects later testified, the incident had originally been planned "as a ripoff from the beginning."

The ultimate rip-off, however, was the death of a respected Federal agent and the subsequent grief suffered by his family and friends. And a just punishment may not be served because of a glaring deficiency in Federal law: The lack of a death penalty for any offense other than murder during a hijacking.

In fact, Federal prosecutors felt obligated to turn this case of heinous violence over to State authorities since the State of California does have a death penalty on the books. My concern over this issue, and my longstanding support for the reinstatement of the Federal death penalty, led me to introduce a bill that would provide the death penalty for anyone convicted of the killing of a Federal law enforcement officer. I am pleased to inform my colleagues that already there are 48 cosponsors of my proposal.

How many more times will we allow this sort of senseless drug massacre to occur without a fitting punishment? Must we continue to read the bold headline—"Drug Related Murder"—and be reminded that hardened and calculating criminals may only face weak and uncertain penalties under Federal law?

I believe that the drug enemy must not be permitted to continue to recklessly ruin the lives of our youth and take the lives of our Federal agents without the fear of serious punishment.

These agents are people who place their lives on the line everyday in order to protect each and every citizen of this country. If we expect to protect the rights of victims and send a resounding message to the drug abusers and dealers, then we should once again vote in favor of the death penalty.

Now that the Senate has approved a death penalty measure, the House must not pass up this opportunity to demonstrate to the American public that our fight against the drug war is real. The need is apparent, and the time to take decisive action is now.

I urge you to vote in favor of the Gekas amendment.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. ANDERSON], and I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman be allowed to yield blocks of time out of his allotted time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from New York for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988, and in particular title VIII of the bill.

That title, reported by the Committee on Public Works and Transportation, marks the culmination of an extensive, bipartisan investigation into the role and responsibilities of the Federal Aviation Administration in carrying out the 1984 and 1986 Aviation Drug Laws and in providing assistance to Federal, State, and local agencies involved in the enforcement of the Nation's drug laws.

In 1987, the drug trafficking industry in the United States expanded to an estimated $180 billion a year business. The drug lords have created an underground empire of crime, violence, and corruption.

Drug abuse, which has been a serious health problem in the United States for two decades, is now a major national public health threat that continues to grow.

It was estimated for 1987 that there were 600,000 active heroin addicts in the United States. The number of addicts has been increasing steadily because there is more heroin available on the streets.

Whether one looks at overall trends or annual statistics, the picture is bleak. These figures are only the tip of the iceberg. The actual extent of the problem is even greater and may become even worse in the future because the sad fact is that drugs continue to infiltrate our borders.

The smuggling of narcotics through the use of general aviation aircraft—from South America, the islands, or wherever—is a major contribution to the current drug epidemic.

The amount of cocaine and marijuana seized from general aviation aircraft as a percent of the total volume of illegal drugs seized was 69 percent in 1984, 60 percent in 1985, 53 percent in 1986 and 64 percent in 1987. In the last year alone, some 40,000 pounds of cocaine and almost 13 billion dollars worth in street value, were confiscated.

The Office of Technology Assessment estimates 1,300 to 3,500 general aviation aircraft drug smuggling flights per year or about 3.5 to 10 per day. These are the ones we've tracked—there are undoubtedly countless others about which we are unaware.

Moreover, this method of drug smuggling, once generally limited to the gulf and southern borders, is appearing increasingly at all our border areas. For example, less than a year ago, in New York, 610 pounds of cocaine were seized from a twin-engined Cessna. The flight originated in Colombia.

Drug-trafficking has become a national crisis—one that is eating at the fabric of American society. The law enforcement community, which is in the front line in this battle, experiences one frustration after another. They are faced with limited personnel, facilities, equipment and funding, and confronted by a sophisticated and ruthless enemy. The frustration that law enforcement agencies have expressed with respect to the FAA's system for registering aircraft, certificating airmen, and filing major forms was the focus of the committee's investigation, and is the basis for title VIII of H.R. 5210.

Basically, title VIII focuses on three issues:

First. Should the current FAA system of registering aircraft, certificating pilots and processing major repair and alternation forms be improved, especially as it relates to assisting law enforcement agencies in the enforcement of the Nation's drug laws?

Second. Should current FAA drug aviation information activities be improved to assist in drug interdiction and enforcement?

Third. Are the 1984 and 1986 aviation drug statutes being enforced and are they adequate to support effective drug enforcement and prosecution?

In so doing, title VIII attempts to address complaints voiced by law enforcement officials that the FAA's "system" for registering aircraft, certificating airmen and filing major repair and alteration forms is too lax and is, therefore, subject to abuse by drug smugglers; and the FAA does not enforce what rules it does have in these areas.

To meet these concerns, title VIII directs FAA to assist law enforcement agencies in drug-trafficking efforts, consistent with aviation safety, and to issue rules within 10 months to correct failures in aircraft registration, pilot certification and repair and alteration of airplanes. These changes would aid the identification, tracing and prosecution of aircraft and pilots engaged in drug smuggling.

It also increases the civil penalties for violation of registration requirements from $1,000 to $10,000 and grants FAA the authority to impose them administratively; sets new criminal penalties of up to $15,000 in fines and 3 years in prison for violation of registration and related requirements; and gives law enforcement agencies the authority to seize aircraft when there are violations of the new criminal provisions whether controlled substances are involved or not.

For a more detailed explanation of these and overall legislative intent, I refer you to the report accompanying H.R. 4844 which was filed today.

I believe title VIII is quality legislation. It reflects a thorough effort; it addresses an area of vital concern to our Nation's law enforcement community; and it will make a difference in the war on drugs.

I urge your support for H.R. 5210 and in particular title VIII.

Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the chairman of the Aviation Subcommittee, the gentleman from California [Mr. MINETA].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. MINETA] is recognized for 1½ minutes.

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 5210 and to speak particularly about title VIII which was developed by the Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

Title VIII of the omnibus drug legislation addresses problems associated with the interdiction of drugs smuggled by air. Title VIII is identical to H.R. 4844, which was reported by the committee on June 21.

Over the past year, the Committee on Public Works and Transportation has conducted an indepth investigation into what the Federal Aviation Administration could do to better assist the drug interdiction and enforcement efforts of local, State, and Federal authorities.

What this investigation revealed was that the FAA's system of registering aircraft and certificating pilots should be changed in order to make the false registration of aircraft more difficult. It is also clear that there is a need to improve the FAA's information on pilots and aircraft ownership to facilitate investigations of and legal actions against drug smugglers.

When drug enforcement authorities learn that a particular aircraft is being used in drug smuggling activities, it is sometimes difficult or impossible to discover the identity of the true owners. The difficulty is caused by the ease with which the FAA's aircraft registration and pilot certification requirements can be circumvented by smugglers. In addition, there are some significant holes in the FAA's system of registering aircraft and pilots even when a pilot or owner is acting in good faith.

The FAA's registration system is adequate to its purposes of recording liens on aircraft; however, it is not well suited to assisting in drug interdiction and enforcement. Title VIII of the bill directs the FAA to initiate a rulemaking to reform the registration of aircraft and pilots so that the records on pilots and aircraft ownership will be as accurate and reliable as possible and will serve as a valuable law enforcement tool.

The title also provides new criminal penalties for the forging of airman certificates, false marking of aircraft, and other registration and aircraft alteration violations.

Testimony before the committee by law enforcement officials indicated strong for changes in the FAA's system of registration. The law enforcement community believes that the FAA and its records can become a vital tool in the Nation's efforts to interdict drugs and punish smugglers. This title, when enacted, will enable this to happen.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT].

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of title VIII of H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988.

It is all too clear that illegal drugs are a growing threat to our society and that we need to strengthen our efforts to stem the tide of these drugs flowing across our borders.

Certainly our awareness of the problem has been heightened by the tough initiatives undertaken by the drug task force headed by Vice President GEORGE BUSH, along with the ongoing hard work and commitment of our law enforcement officers who must deal on a daily basis with the problem.

With this legislation, and especially with title VIII, we expect to build on those efforts that have already been made. The Vice President, in all of his public and private statements, continues to view the drug battle as one of his highest priorities.

We have learned from our experiences in dealing with the relentless and ruthless drug lords that there are loopholes in the system and that these people are more than savvy enough to take full advantage of the situation.

Title VIII, drafted by the Public Works and Transportation Committee, specifically addresses the growing problem of using aviation in illicit drug transportation. This title reflects conclusions reached following many months of intensive investigation by our committee into this issue. From start to finish, it was conducted on a strong bipartisan basis and in a very thorough manner.

At the conclusion of the investigation, our committee held a most enlightening hearing on our findings, during which we learned just how effective drug smugglers have been in transporting their illegal cargo by air.

I might add that title VIII is identical to H.R. 4844, reported by the Public Works and Transportation Committee, and for a complete legislative history, my colleagues can consult the report filed by our committee with that bill.

Essentially, title VIII will tighten the Federal Aviation Administration's aircraft registration, pilot certification, and major repair and alteration procedures.

It is essential that we do this if we are to put an end to a variety of abuses, including the registration of aircraft to fictitious persons, the use of phony addresses, and the use of illegal tail numbers on aircraft.

The title also adds criminal penalties, increases civil penalties, and authorizes the Secretary of Transportation to impose very reasonable user charges to finance the cost of the proposed changes in the system.

What we are not doing in this title is succumbing to the temptation to micromanage the program. Perhaps the greatest strength of this title is the important balance it strikes between solving this very serious aviation drug trafficking problem while giving the executive branch enough discretion to come up with specific solutions to the problems we have targeted.

Finally, I think it is important to note that what is being proposed in no way minimizes the primary safety role of the FAA.

We should also recognize that the approach we are taking to improve the aircraft registration system will not only help law enforcement but also all users of the system.

I, therefore, urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. DEWINE].

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this bill. I think we have to be realistic, though, with the American people. It is a good bill. It is a solid bill. It is going to help, but it certainly is not going to work miracles.

I think as we analyze the bill, we have to tell the American people what we are trying to accomplish. I think one of the things we are trying to accomplish is to drive up the price of drugs. There is, in fact, a relationship between use and price. Clearly, there is that relationship. It is simply a matter of economics, an inverse relationship actually between the price and use.

It is an interesting thing as I look back 10 or 11 years ago when I was a county prosecuting attorney in Green County, OH, when I compare the price of cocaine on the street at that time versus the price of cocaine today. It is about one-third today what it was 10 or 11 years ago. What that means is that it is more readily available to people. The consumption goes up as the price does, in fact, go down and get cheaper.

On the streets of America today, the streets of our major cities or smaller cities, you can buy crack for $15 or $20 a hit. You see 14- or 15-year-old boys who are involved in very sophisticated methods, part of a very sophisticated marketing system. They are the runners who carry beepers around. There is a very sophisticated marketing system to get these drug into the hands of people.

What is needed I think is a full court press, and I think this bill helps in this direction. If we are going to drive the price of drugs up, we have to keep pressure on. We have to make the cost of doing business very, very high for all concerned, not just in the production stage, but in consumption as well.

□ 1545

We have to go to the source, and this bill deals with that. We have to make it more difficult for the production of the drugs to occur in Central America and South America. We have to make it more difficult to get the drugs into the United States, make it more costly for the drug dealers to accomplish this.

Then on the streets of America where the local law enforcement takes over, we have to keep in mind that 98 to 99 percent of all drug enforcement is done at the local level. We have to give them the assistance to make it tougher on the drug pushers and then, yes, it has been talked about, we have to make it tougher as far as those who consume the drugs. We have to make user accountability, and that will be one of the amendments which will be offered. This is one way, I think, we deal with the problem.

There is another part of this bill that I would like to briefly mention, Mr. Chairman, and that has to do with an amendment that I offered in our committee that is passed, and is now part of this bill. It plugs a loophole that is in current law. I received a letter some time ago from Michael Merz, who is a U.S. magistrate in Dayton, OH. He pointed out to me a loophole in current legislation, in current law, which provides that if one is drunk and gets in their car and drives onto a Federal enclave that while that Federal judge or that Federal magistrate can put that person in jail, confine them, he or she cannot take the individual's license away. What this bill does as currently written is to plug up that loophole and allows that Federal judge to apply the local State law as far as a license suspension.

This provision is supported by the Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, and it is supported by law enforcement. It is a good measure, and I think it is an added addition to this bill.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the chairman of the awesome and powerful Committee on Ways and Means and one of the most distinguished leaders that we have in this Congress, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rostenkowski], and I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Illinois may yield blocks of time from his time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 5210, the omnibus antidrug bill. The drug problem facing our Nation today poses a major threat to virtually all aspects of our society. It is a bipartisan issue which follows no regional, racial, or religious boundaries. We all agree that our best efforts must be directed toward the elimination of this insidious problem.

The Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986 contained a number of provisions reported by the Committee on Ways and Means which significantly strengthened Customs' enforcement capability in fighting the war on drugs. In particular, these provisions revised many of our outdated Customs laws to close loopholes that had made it easier for drug traffickers to smuggle drugs into our country; increased the penalties for violations of Customs drug laws; provided funding for drug interdiction programs through the Customs forfeiture fund; significantly increased Customs' manpower and equipment for waging a more effective campaign against drugs and created a tool for the President to use by requiring denial of preferential trade status to nations which are the source of illegal drugs if they refuse to cooperate in arresting illegal drug traffic. All of these provisions have been helpful in fighting the war on drugs but yet the problem continues to worsen.

The Ways and Means title of H.R. 5210 therefore contains additional provisions to further strengthen the enforcement capability of the U.S. Customs Service. Title IX, which was approved unanimously by the Committee on Ways and Means would authorize appropriations for the U.S. Customs Service providing an increase over that requested by the administration of $73 million for the addition of 500 Customs officers, $55 million devoted exclusively to the enhancement of Customs' Air Interdiction Program, and $15 million for the construction of an x-ray imagery vapor sensitive scanning device.

Further, title IX provides for a fivefold increase in the penalty for failure to declare a controlled substance—from 200 to 1,000 percent of the value of the article—and an amendment which would allow the Secretary of the Treasury to transfer forfeited property to State, local, or foreign governments "that cooperate with the U.S. Customs Service in joint law enforcement operations."

These provisions should complement the strong Customs enforcement provisions the committee included in the omnibus drug bill enacted in the 99th Congress to provide for effective Customs interdiction of narcotics at our borders.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this important piece of legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. Kennelly].

Mrs. KENNELLY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from New York [Mr. Rangel] for his work on this bill, and the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rostenkowski], the gentleman from California [Mr. Anderson], and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Dingell] and the other chairman who worked so expediently to bring this bill to the floor at this time.

Mr. Chairman, 2 years ago we were all in this same Hall calling for a war on drugs. Our rhetoric was full-blown. We almost acted like a football team at a rally before the celebrated Thanksgiving game.

Listening to this debate, we see a little difference. We see more practicality. We see that we are much more serious about what we are about. We know the war cannot be fought from Washington, but it has to be fought in our communities, in our schools, our hospitals, our prisons.

We know that the Customs Service has its work cut out for it and that the Coast Guard can only do so much, that we have to back our local police forces, because they know who is doing what in our cities and towns.

We hear today as much about demand as we do about supply. We know that those who use the drugs have to be held responsible. I commend the chairmen and the committees who worked so hard to bring this bill to us today. I commend the people who have spoken so far because we are not being nonpartisan about this problem, and, yes, we have a war in our cities and towns. We read about it every day in the newspapers. It sounds like random killing, and it is not just killing concerning drug actions.

I am in support of this bill, and I know we are going to pass a good bill, because we cannot become the country we are if we continue to be diminished until we solve this problem.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rostenkowski] has 3 minutes remaining.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Guarini].

Mr. GUARINI. Mr. Chairman, today our national treasures are under siege from a slow and deadly poison: drugs.

This crisis represents a fatal attraction eating away at our children, our cities and our way of life.

Just weeks ago, our own Secretary of State, George Shultz, was attacked in Bolivia.

We are reminded, again, of the powers that are promoting drugs.

We are reminded, again, that we are dealing with multinational merchants of death.

Judges are murdered, police are bribed, mayors are bought, communities are terrorized.

Democratic institutions are corrupted, controlled, disrupted, and devastated by a shadow government of fear that profits from the misery of drugs.

Panamanian dictators, Honduran generals, Mexican politicians, Haitian soldiers, Asian godfathers, Bolivian terrorists—the list is endless and growing.

From Bogota to Panama City, from Los Angeles to New York City, drugs are flown in, shipped in, trucked in, and smuggled in.

Make no mistake: By targeting the Secretary of State, in Bolovia the drug lords are sending us a message.

And by passing the bill before this House, we are sending a message back.

At home there is some good news. In towns and cities across this country, people are ready to march.

They are angry, determined, and ready to fight back.

They want to win this war, and they are waiting for a call to action.

This legislation makes the money available to fight this war.

It supports Federal, State, and local law enforcement programs.

To find, capture, convict, and imprison those who profit by dealing in drugs.

It improves education, treatment, and rehabilitation programs.

To teach our children to say no, and to help them when they make the mistake of saying yes.

It makes drug users accountable for their actions in the workplace.

To ensure the safety of our work force and to strengthen our national economy.

Mr. Chairman, when we talk about drug use, we talk about people.

Not simply numbers, not merely programs, but people.

Ultimately, the war against drugs will not be won at our borders. It will be won in our hearts, in our souls, in our national conscience.

It will be won by giving our kids something to believe in, something to work for, something to fight for.

It will be won by renewing that sense of purpose, that spirit of idealism, that American notion of decency and compassion.

It will be won when children are born with hope, not hunger; when they live by dreams, not despair.

It will be won by healing wounds, uniting families, and bringing our people together.

It will be won by regaining respect for law, and defining law as promoting justice.

It will be won with books and learning and the power of knowledge.

It can be won when every boy and every girl can grow up to be president, when every man and every women has a right to a decent job.

It will be won when the richest child, and the poorest child, wake up and say: "I can use my talents. * * * I can accomplish great things. * * * I have equal opportunity. * * * I can be somebody, * * * and nothing can stop me. * * *"

Yes, we need police, and prosecutors, and courts, and money, and military, and foreign policy.

But even more, perhaps, we need hope, we need opportunity, we need inspiration and leadership.

This bill balances these priorities and gives us the wings that will lift our people above the need for drugs.

And by doing so, we can lift our country to new heights of achievement, excellence and justice for all.

This bill deserves our strongest support.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I yield back my remaining time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Florida [Mr. McCollum] has 18 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. Rangel] has 11½ minutes remaining.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. Lowry].

Mr. LOWRY of Washington. Mr. Chairman, too many people in our Nation face a crisis caused by too little economic opportunity and diminished hope of living a rewarding life. And one of the worst symptoms of this crisis is the drug problem that affects every community in our Nation. Jumping on the antidrug bandwagon every election year will not solve the problem of drug abuse. We need a sustained effort and a willingness to invest in our young people so that they will make the right choices and say no to drugs and yes to a quality education, a quality job, and a fair and just community.

With common sense, we can rise above the drug problem in our country. We shouldn't panic. We should rely on the basic principles that have guided this country for hundreds of years.

This week the House is considering another anti-drug abuse bill and the bill, as crafted by our committees, deserves support. This bill has a balanced approach. It is my hope that we can reject misguided amendments that may grab headlines. Those misguided amendments won't solve the drug problem, but they will jeopardize individual liberties and rights under our Constitution.

We need education and rehabilitation and we need to support responsible local law enforcement. We need to set up this spending so that the money gets to local providers and isn't hung up in the bureaucracy—$3 billion included in the 1986 bill became entangled in bureaucratic delays and a year later the U.S. Conference of Mayors found that only one city had received money earmarked for local law enforcement and less than a third of the drug education money had found its way to local drug education programs.

This is a tragedy because of all the people who voluntarily apply to drug treatment and rehabilitation centers, 90 percent are turned away and put on waiting lists for 6 to 18 months. From 1980 to 1986, Federal support for drug abuse service declined by about 40 percent. We can turn that around.

We need to support drug interdiction as part of our drug control efforts. That's why I've supported increased funding for the Coast Guard. And that's why I fought to keep Coast Guard cutters from going to the Persian Gulf. Coast Guard ships should be used in antidrug patrols in our own waters where they have a much more important mission. We've got to use the Coast Guard properly and we also have to make sure that both the Coast Guard and local police have the resources they need to do the job. Importantly, let us remember the reasons we keep law enforcement under civilian control. I appreciate what both Secretary Weinberger and Secretary Carlucci have said about the need to separate military and law enforcement missions. I agree with them.

Drug use in our country is a tremendous problem. Our people need better choices than drugs. I believe this year's omnibus drug bill is a step in the right direction. Among its best provisions are:

Drug-free workplaces for Federal contractors;

Drug enforcement funding;

Chemical Division and Trafficking Act to prevent the flow of solvents used to refine cocaine;

Combating money laundering;

A handgun waiting period;

Coast Guard drug enforcement funds;

Customs Service funding;

Youth drug abuse prevention;

AIDS and drug abuse prevention;

Reduced waiting for drug abuse treatment;

Alcohol, drug abuse and mental health grants and research.

There's a lot in this bill to support. Let's keep it that way. Let's not tie it up with amendments of dubious constitutionality and dubious effectiveness. We can battle the drug problem in our country with hope and leadership. We can battle the pain with education, treatment and with interdiction. With courageous leadership and common sense, we can move toward overcoming drug use in this country.

Mr. EDWARDS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, debating an antidrug bill is like debating motherhood, but the consensus breaks down when we begin to discuss how we go about fighting drugs.

Who should we hold accountable for the drug problem? Not just traffickers, not just smugglers, not just illegal drug manufacturers, but the drug user, too, the man or woman whose money keeps the whole operation flowing day after day.

Mr. Chairman, it almost seems sometimes that the interests of the users have become more important than the interests of society. Yet, poll after poll shows that Americans rank drug abuse as one of the greatest problems facing the country. Americans care about the crime caused by the drug trade. Americans care about a generation of urban youth carrying beepers to elementary school so they will be available for an unexpected drug run. Americans care about public housing being taken over by crack houses and drug gang warfare, and they recognize that country-club cocaine users are financing the drug trade. They recognize that backyard marijuana smokers are directly linked to smuggling operations in the Florida Keys, drug drops in Texas and gang deaths over turf battles in Los Angeles.

Drug users are not to be pitied. Drug users choose to use illegal drugs. They choose to expose themselves to addiction. They choose to violate Federal and State laws. They choose to risk the consequences of their selfish acts, and it is not unreasonable to attach consequences to those acts.

Clearly the American people want the Congress and the President to do whatever it takes to stop the drug problem, but for too many years we have not been willing to do what it takes to discourage drug use among the millions of recreational users who make up the backbone of the drug trade industry. For too many years we have intentionally ignored the role that the casual user plays in our national tragedy.

I urge my colleagues to support amendments that will fill this gap by providing reasonable penalties to deter drug use and balance our attack in this war against illegal drugs.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH].

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased that H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative of 1988, in being considered today and the next 2 days. Clearly, the war against drugs is one of our highest national priorities. I also am grateful for the many bipartisan efforts which have preceded consideration of this measure. Initiatives involving international narcotics control, eradication and interdiction, and initiatives addressing the demand side, education and treatment are included in H.R. 5210. Without a question, Mr. Chairman, we must continue these efforts. Interdiction, as difficult a task as it is, must be a high priority. Widely available treatment must be available. I congratulate the chairmen and ranking minority members of the several committees involved. To a large extent issues have been worked out.

On my Judiciary Committee the chairman and ranking minority member of the Crime Subcommittee deserve great credit.

Our 1986 authorizations to combat drugs have not been realized. To a large extent we are going over the same ground as in 1986. The exception and an important one is the greater emphasis on the demand side. We cannot hope to reduce the amount of narcotics in our land without addressing its demand.

The strategy to reduce demand has several components. Of course, prevention and education attempt to keep nonusers from ever starting, while encouraging those minimally involved to stop. But it is also important to go big on education and try to identify users. Children in school and those in the workplace can be helped if symptoms are recognized.

User accountability is a necessary element in the reduction of demand. It is not a penalty but a help in prevention. The goal is to get users off drugs.

The addicted needs treatment. The user who is not addicted but who continues to use has been generally neglected. By not paying attention to this group, this use has in effort been legalized. User accountability will help while sending a message to others.

Three amendments will be offered addressing the need for user accountability. The gentleman from Florida, Mr. McCOLLUM, will offer an amendment to remove eligibility for certain Federal benefits from individuals convicted of a drug-related offense.

This amendment sends the right signal to drug users—the American public does not want tax dollars spent for those who refuse to act responsibly. The other McCollum amendment concerns the highway trust funds. It requires States to enact laws which revokes or suspends drivers' licenses of those convicted of drug offenses. States which refuse to enact such measure will lose a percentage of their highway funds. This amendment should prove to be a deterrent to young people who are often unaffected by other criminal penalties. Finally, Mr. EDWARDS from Oklahoma will offer an amendment which adds the option of imposing civil penalties on those who possess small personal use amounts of a controlled substance. This will provide an additional tool to the Attorney General to penalize drug users. I urge support of these amendments and the bill.

☐ 1600

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. COUGHLIN].

Mr. COUGHLIN. Mr. Chairman, as a long-time member of the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, I want to join in congratulating the distinguished gentleman from New York, Mr. CHARLIE RANGEL, the chairman of the committee, and the gentleman from New York, Mr. BEN GILMAN, my friend and the ranking minority member, for the work they have done on this bill. It contains many, many good sound provisions.

But it also contains a danger. It contains a danger because there is a tendency to shower the problem with money to try to stop the supply of drugs coming from other countries. There is a danger because there is a tendency to blame those nasty foreigners. They are without a doubt an easy target.

Sure, we have to stop the supply. Sure, we have to interdict the drugs. But we also have to be willing to be tough enough to combat the demand here at home. We have to be willing to say no to drugs. We have to be willing to have zero tolerance for drugs in our schools and in our workplaces. We have to be willing to penalize the purchasers as well as the pushers.

Mr. Chairman, in my city of Philadelphia, as in many cities around this country, some of those who sell drugs are juveniles, literally children on the streets selling, pushing if you will. Adults with lots of money drive up in big cars and buy drugs from these kids. These adults should be subject to prosecution. They should be forced to forfeit their cars and their drivers' licenses. We need to penalize the purchasers as well as the pushers.

Mr. Chairman, we have to be tough enough to have a random drug testing policy for those who are responsible for the safety of others. It is hard to believe that we can have a drug bill before us today that does not contain provisions for random testing for those who are responsible for the safety of others. So while I commend the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, as well as the others responsible for this bill, I hope that we will adopt many of the amendments that will be offered in the course of its consideration.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], the chairman of the Committee on Energy and Commerce, and I ask unanimous consent that he be allowed to yield blocks of his time to other Members.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I thank my beloved friend, the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL] for this among many other courtesies which he has so graciously shown me during our long and close friendship and service here today.

Mr. Chairman, the bill before the House today represents a continued response from the Congress to the escalating costs to our society caused by illegal drugs. Nowhere are those costs more obvious than in the human lives that are damaged and destroyed by drug use.

The provisions of this bill as reported by the Committee on Energy and Commerce respond to the increased needs for drug abuse prevention, for treatment, for rehabilitation, and for education. Within title X, the committee has reauthorized the substance abuse programs within its jurisdiction at significantly increased levels, including $100 million to help eliminate the waiting lists at clinics for rehabilitation. The committee has implemented the recommendations of the President's AIDS Commission, and has established a bloc grant program to the States and to localities for the treatment and prevention of AIDS through IV drug use.

The committee has also included legislative language to ensure that laboratories which conduct workplace drug testing are held to the highest standards of accuracy. Our committee has gone into this question in considerable detail in connection with hearings held before the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigation. There, Mr. Chairman, we have found that through careless, slovenly and disinterested work by laboratories that honorable and decent citizens are destroyed. Their earning capacity is reduced, their possibility of reemployment or employment or gainful work are virtually eliminated, and the ability to correct the wrong done through careless and slovenly testing or through false reporting of results is not only impossible to correct, but is crushing in terms of its impact upon those who submit to these testing programs.

Surely no drug testing program can have merit unless it assures that the test is fair and reliable and that wrongdoers, if such they be, are identified, but that innocent men and women are protected against the hideous consequences of improper and inadequate testing. This Congress must then recognize that lives can and will be damaged unless the Congress requires that the highest possible care be used in connection with falsely positive random drug testing.

I would urge my colleagues to support the bill. I would urge them to support the provisions of title X.

Mr. Chairman, I commend my colleagues, the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL], distinguished chairman of the committee, and I am pleased that we have been able to work so fruitfully with him.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] has consumed 3 minutes.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. KOLBE].

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 5210. Never before has a more complete piece of legislation to fight drugs been introduced.

We, as a nation, are facing what may well be the greatest threat we've encountered in 200 years of nationhood. We are seeing the fabric of our society ripped and torn by drug abusers and drug traffickers. Many have termed our fight against drug abuse and the drug trade the war on drugs. I think this is a legitimate term to be used—in our neighborhoods, in our schools, indeed even in our homes, the fight against drugs truly is a war.

In this war, we need to craft a four-pronged attack. First, we must work with Mexico and our other Latin American neighbors to stem the flow of drugs being produced and shipped into our country. On this front we must not only strengthen the patrols of our borders, but we must help provide economic assistance to promote development. With alternative industries available for people to earn an honest living, the drug industry becomes less attractive.

Next we must turn our attention to stemming the supply internally. Tougher enforcement measures for existing laws must be put into place. Drug pushers and kingpins must understand the seriousness whith which their menace is viewed. Penalties must be sure, strict, and swift, and our law enforcement community must be given the resources they need to implement these measures.

Third, we need better education for children and families to warn against the dangers of drugs. We need to give our children the weapons they will need in this war—an understanding that drug use is wrong, as well as a prospect of a brighter and promising future, a future where drugs are not involved.

Finally, we need better and more programs to help the casualties of this war, the individuals who have become prisoners to the addiction of drugs and their families and friends. We need to provide the help needed to break these addictions, to turn a broken home into a family, and an individual dependent on society into a contributing member of the community. We must provide this help, and then enlist the aid of these individuals to help in the efforts to educate others against the dangers of drugs.

H.R. 5210 has provisions to address each of these areas. This bill would establish a multilateral strike force that will enable the United States to join with other nations to wage war on the drug problem. As the Representative of a border State, I believe that combining our antidrug forces with Mexico and other nations offers a constructive way to meet this common threat. We will be able to eliminate illicit crops, prevent the laundering of drug money, and launch assaults on drug-trafficking bases and staging areas. Such a multilateral drug strike force is also essential if we are to capture drug runners who move back and forth across international borders virtually at will. A multilateral strike force, with joint air surveillance and apprehension operations between Mexico and the United States, staffed by crew members from both countries, would facilitate pursuit of traffickers who retreat across the border, and ease concerns about territorial sovereignty.

H.R. 5210 also reaffirms our support for the highly successful Assets Forfeiture Program, a program vital to boosting our enforcement efforts. This program provides financial incentives for State and local law enforcement to get more involved. A percentage of the property seized in a drug bust will go to State and local law enforcement agencies. They in turn can dispose of them to raise money to support antidrug efforts.

I'm pleased by the assistance this bill provides for the Tohono O'odham Tribe of Arizona. With their tribal lands along the Mexican border, the Tohono O'odham Tribe needs the assistance this bill provides for investigating the controlling drug trafficking. Specifically, this bill earmarks $500,000 for drug enforcement on the Tohono O'odham Reservation.

In addition, H.R. 5210 greatly expands our programs available to educate our youth and families in risk against the threat of drugs. Grants made to public and nonprofit private agencies will help in the development of efforts to prevent and reduce gang involvement, programs to provide counseling and rehabilitation for drug and alcohol abuse, and other programs to provide support and assistance programs. Ultimately, it will be these educational efforts, and the involvement of private citizens that will result in our victory in this war.

H.R. 5210 is the result of many hours of work, by many individuals, and a commitment to achieve a common goal. All who have been involved in crafting this bill are to be commended. With some final amendments and refinement to be completed during these next few days, H.R. 5210 will be an outstanding bill, the legal cornerstone of our war against drugs. I urge my colleagues to support the legislation. Let's make America drug free.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. LEWIS].

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, nothing is more important than our war on drugs, and this new bill is a big, big step in meeting the problems that we have with both the users as well as those producers.

Drugs are causing a severe, terrible decay in our society, and we must stop this decay. It is destroying our youth, corrupting our law enforcement, separating and destroying families.

This bill will go a long way in preventing some of those things from happening. But we must have the courage, each and every one of us, to do what we can to stop the recreational use of drugs in this country. We must cut off the supply and certainly we must cut off the demand. This bill will help us do that.

But this legislation is absolutely worthless unless we, the Congress, keep our commitments to those to whom we said we would do something for those to whom we have been committed. We, the Congress, made commitments in 1986, just about this time, just shortly before the election with an antidrug abuse bill. It was a very fine bill. But we reneged on those commitments, and we reneged on those promises. We cannot do that again.

Those that we reneged on the most were our first line of defense against the drugs in our streets, the local law enforcement officers. We told them we would help them, we would supply them with the funds, and we told them we would give them certain amounts of money to do their job, and we did the first year. The second year we cut most of it out, and this year we are only giving them about $70 million of the $230 million that they were promised.

These people need the help from this Congress and must have the commitment to do it. We can blame everybody else, we can blame administrations, this one, previous administrations, we can blame the churches, we can blame the families, but this Congress still has a commitment to keep the promises that it makes, and it has not done that as far as this Congressman is concerned to our local law enforcement officers.

Within the past 10 days I have had two local policemen gunned down in the streets by drug dealers, one shot right through the heart. He just received a meritorious award a month prior for his outstanding work fighting crack in the streets. Another one was shot dead and left two children and a pregnant wife.

I say to my colleagues in this Congress are we going to continue to allow this to happen? I do not think we can. We all have a responsibility, both the Congress and the American people, and if the American people want to stop the scourge on our society, they are going to have to take the solemn pledge that they want to do something about it, that we cannot tolerate recreational drugs, we cannot have the use of drugs in our families.

Most of the people that come in contact with us will tell us that certainly they do not want drugs in our society. They know many families, all of us do, that have been touched by this terrible thing.

I will tell my colleagues this day as we are going to pass this legislation that it will do what we want it to do if we will make it work and the American people will make it work.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ALEXANDER].

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from New York for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to support the bill that he and his committee have brought to the Congress. Like all Members, I learned about the severity of the drug problem in my district during my first term when I observed drugs being available freely in the colleges. Twenty years later, the same drugs are now available in high schools and in the elementary schools.

□ 1615

This bill is welcome. It provides tough laws and money for enforcement and education. I am grateful for the leadership of the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL], the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MCCOLLUM] and all the Members of the committee who have contributed to this effort.

They bring us a comprehensive bill that provides hope to attack the drug problem in America.

Mr. Chairman, I have one amendment that I think would improve this bill, No. 32, which would promote cooperation among the various agencies of the executive branch. Perhaps some of you observed about 6 weeks ago that the head of the DEA wrote letters to General Manuel Noriega congratulating him on the cooperation that he provided us in our war on drugs when in fact Noriega was about to be indicted for complicity and for drug running himself.

Federal agencies need to cooperate with one another. My amendment would establish a process, a procedure for sharing information together with safeguards that are necessary for national security, counterintelligence and for investigations of drug activities.

I would invite the Members to review my amendment and I hope that they will support it when it is presented. At the appropriate time I will ask for consent to include extraneous material.

Also, I discussed my amendment in detail and inserted various documents relevant to this subject in the August 11, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

In 1972, I was deeply concerned about the problem of drug abuse that was just beginning to trouble my State of Arkansas. I organized a forum on the subject of drug abuse, and experts from all over the country attended the event. The forum was held at Arkansas State University in October 1972. I would ask that a transcript of a discussion session of that forum be included at this point in the RECORD.

DRUG FORUM AT ARKANSAS STATE UNIVERSITY, OCTOBER 1972

Speaker 1. Forrest Baker, Pharmacist from Clinton, discussion leader: I'm the reporter for group one and we really didn't get anything definite decided except maybe that the penalty for drug possession was too high. We went into deeper things like sex, double standards and things like that. We really got involved in a lot of things. But one point we thought was pretty good that was brought out was that it wasn't really the drug that was so bad, it was the person that was using it. That his standards in his mind and the defects of his mind, you might say, were wrong. But like I said, we didn't really get anything decided and we went into a lot of different fields.

Narrator (H.T. Moore, congressional aide): Okay group two. Incidentally, the discussion group leader in group one was Forrest Baker a pharmacist from Clinton and I do want again to thank all the people who did lead the discussion groups for us, many of them came long distances. I don't know if any of you know where Clinton is, but as they say there is no way to get there from here, but Forrest did come over and others did also and at their own expense and everything. We're greatly appreciative. Group two was led by Sergeant Roven Andrews of the Forrest City Police Department. Donna Ford is going to report for them.

Speaker 2. (Donna Ford): I'm Donna Ford and I'm from Paragould. In our group we did all agree that there is a problem and we discussed that if alcohol is legal then why shouldn't marijuana. But most of them decided that there should be stricter laws on drug abuse. That's not necessarily my feelings, but the majority of the people in our groups' feelings. We think that drugs affect everybody in different ways. Well mostly, everybody thought that there should be stricter laws on drug abuse. We came to the conclusion that one of the solutions to drug abuse should be more education for the parents. One person in our group stated that you can't teach an old dog new tricks but I think he later decided that everybody should be taught about drugs. They start with younger children like in grade school and they should be taught by their parents. In order for their parents to teach them this they should have better education. Some agreed that parents should be literally made to go to a class on drugs and they should be taught about it so they can relate to their children about it and set their children in what they think is the right direction. Whether the children do that or not it's their own opinion, I mean their own . . . well their own . . . they can do what they want but yet the parents should be taught I think, myself, all about drugs so they can better understand it so they can teach their children and set their children on the right paths that they think is right for them. Whether they go down the path or not is their own decision and well basically the conclusion we reached is that there should be better education for everybody on drug abuse. Stricter laws, not like death penalties for one marijuana cigarette if you're caught with it. I myself think that if alcohol is going to be legal, why shouldn't marijuana because alcohol basically has the same effect on you as marijuana and if you're not going to drink alcohol you're going to smoke marijuana and if you're not going to smoke marijuana you're going to drink alcohol. We discussed to about prohibition time whenever there were bootleggers and everything, people couldn't buy alcohol but they could get it from the bootlegger. Well if marijuana isn't going to be legalized it's still going to be around because the people that want it, are going to get it, whether it's going to be legal or not and it's going to be there. Well this way should almost stop it, I mean you know you can get the ring leaders of it and everything and have real strict laws. Some people are going to have it whether they want you to or not and I feel that it's going to be there, and if it's there it's going to be used, it's going to be abused and I see no way that it can be completely stopped. I think it should be legalized if alcohol is going to be legal too. If marijuana is not going to be legal, I think alcohol should be ruled out too. But then there you have there is going to be bootleggers, there are going to be people selling marijuana secretly. Well that's my opinion but that's not our group's opinion, our group thinks that there should be stricter laws because if there are stricter laws that people will not want to get caught and go to prison ten or twenty years for being caught with a little marijuana, and they think it's going to make people not want to use it because of these penalties but still it's going to be around and then, like I said, our solution to the problem is better education. Thank you.

Speaker 3. Fred Rogers, Arkansas College, Batesville: Our group came to the conclusion that everyone was from a rural area, well just about everyone, and no one knew enough about drugs to really talk about it and so we decided that there were a lot of myths about drugs that people believe and the way to get rid of these myths and get people to know what the drugs were is through education. That was the initial thing and then we went and we talked about crime's with no victim, which in most cases deals with marijuana and the smoking of marijuana. We decided that you should be allowed to have marijuana to smoke, there should be no penalty, I mean no laws against marijuana. But we said for the selling of marijuana, there should be laws and there should be licensed pushers. We also started a dicussion about heroin and methadone program we decided the methodone program was more or less like a crutch and the user just kept going and going and going. We said that there should be more personal relationship and that's the only way you're really going to help a junky is through a personal relationship with them, an intimate relationship, not so much a sexual relationship but an intimate relationship. We decided it wasn't working and we were trying to come up with ways how we could more or less give ourselves to get help for the junky and we decided that it wasn't working if he just came up to you and asked you for help because a lot of people are afraid of the stigma of someone who's a junky coming up to you and you being associated with them. We said there should be centers, which there are not enough of them and the only people who you're going to be able to help are the people who want to be helped. You can't help anyone who doesn't want to be helped and we decided that is no need to try and help anyone on marijuana because that's ridiculous. They don't need the help. I mean there is no help to be given. Heroin addicts, we said that they can be cured, if they want to be cured, but you can't force them.

Narrator: Next is group four, Diane Stevens. Group four was led by Mr. Robert Turniman.

Speaker 4. Diane Stevens: Our group was lead by Mr. Robert Turniman and I am Diane Stevens from Imboden and we talked about the extent that drugs are being used and we all came to agree that nobody really knows what extent in each area that drugs are being used, and that three times as many people are being killed by drinking and driving than there are in the wars. On the penalties for drug use, we decided that they weren't harsh enough, that they should be stricter and all. The drug stores and drug pushers and people who use drugs are the ones that, well that's where we get drugs from and we thought the penalty should be stricter on these. In the general public, we don't think they know enough about drugs and we think everybody should know more about drugs and should learn about them and tell their children about them so that they will know about drugs and pass it on to their children and so that there will be less drug users today.

Narrator: Group number five is led by Butch Bradley from Jonesboro. Scott Melton will report for that group.

Speaker 5. Scott Melton: I'm also a staff member at Harbored House in Paragould and our group covered quite a bit of ground and we came out with I'd say maybe, three or four basic ideas which we feel need work on them. One is to stop the classifying of the casual user of drugs as an addict. Now this is a thing, I think, which the general population is definitely guilty of. You say I smoke one marijuana joint and automatically someone will come up to you and say alright you're a junky. Then you go on the general education of the population and I think the community fails to realize that the problem is there, and exactly what type of education it will take, I don't know but it definitely is needed. Also that most people use drugs on a recreational basis, I would say about 95% of them do and they still function in society. They have a job, take care of their children and everything else, and yet they are still classified as drug users. Also on the drug laws there needs to be more of the appropriate law for the appropriate drug. They can coincide more, like with the marijuana laws especially. The laws are very harsh often in many states and somewhat less in Arkansas but still harsh and I think they need to be, concerning this particular drug when it is not, the way you feel in general, that bad. One person in our group brought out a real fine thing, I thought, on statistics. There is too much classifying people as statistics. Like you'll say 20% does this, 5% does this and go on through that. It's going to have to be taken on a more individual type basis to really get anything done towards helping the people, especially when you get into your hard drugs if you want to help them. There was one lady in our group, a school teacher and I think I just heard her giggle over there, ah she (can't understand tape) which she is entitled to and brought out some very good points during the talk and more or less bounced us off quite a bit and we enjoyed having her, ah that'll be it.

Narrator: Group number six was led by Wayne Jarvis of Rector. Huth Ward will report.

Speaker 6. Thank you. I'm also from the Harbored House in Paragould and although group six talked about a lot of things including sex but that was trivial. But ah to mention what we did talk about and I'm a realist, I don't believe in statistics or other things that labels or what ever you want to call it. Communication between parent and child or parent and son and daughter, what ever age is lacking in this area of Arkansas. I mean the parents are so hung up on all their little hard headed ways and their mixed up ways you know be proud that they won't give in a little bit. Children are also not giving in. They can't sit down and talk to their parents either, so the communication between parent and son and daughter and ah these meetings aren't very frequent and they're lacking, they really are. If it happened where something like this could happen every three months, if everybody could agree on it and get it out in the open, I mean face to face with it, get down to the nitty-gritty of it and instead of just talking about it, going about it or what ever and I feel that group six alone did not really get anything other than the communication, and everything else was just bad statistics, ah, lack of knowledge and that's about it. Thank you.

Narrator: Group seven was led by Ruth Hutchison of Paragould and Tina Tinker from Imboden will give the report. Excuse me, it's Dena.

Speaker 7. My names Dena Tinker and I'm from Imboden and our group seemed to think that the drugs were a universal problem and in some places it was decreasing and some places it was increasing and ah, marijuana was the most widely used drug. There was also reports of LSD, cocaine and THC and ah, the opinion was that the penalty for drugs was slightly harsh and that they should be sort of lightened a little. There seemed to be some sentiment that legalization of marijuana should be, and the general public, they think that well drugs is just some place else, it's not here.

You know it couldn't happen to us but it can and it does and then ah some schools have had drug programs most of them have and they seem to be ineffective or just very little effective at all and ah, that there is only a few service places available for the addicts that's Hunnington House in Jonesboro, Harbored House in Paragould. We thought that materials on drug abuse could be improved by making them more realistic instead of just being completely down and telling them oh, it's horrible, it's horrible then they go and talk to somebody that's not on drugs and they say well it's really neat you know, you ought to try it. Well you should tell them the whole facts about it, and that's what we come to the conclusion of.

Narrator: Group number eight was led by Harry Mains of Little Rock. Keith Inman will report.

Speaker 8. (Keith Inman): Our group didn't have much time to talk about the abuse problem really. We talked about some of the other things but about drugs, some of us said that marijuana should be legalized. It would possibly make the drug pure and less dangerous. But then somebody else said there should be education before it's legalized and then let them make up their own mind whether they should use it or not and let the government stay out of it, other than making it more pure. As for legalization, I think marijuana should be legalized and not, or at least not such a harsh penalty and I believe that's about it. I think if you'd had more students in the class, in our discussion group we could have gotten more done.

Narrator: Group nine was led by Carrie Rogers of Paragould and he received also the dubious honor of giving his own report so.

Speaker 9. (Carrie Rogers): I want to know why I was the only group leader who got stuck with making his own report? Our group talked about what drugs are being used in this area first. We all agreed that there is widespread use of marijuana, but this is not the problem, the problem is with harder drugs such as amphetamines, barbiturates, LSD, and there is not much use of hard narcotics such as heroin and morphine in this part of the country yet. Ah, we also felt that there is too much emphasis put on the use by the teenage group and not enough by adults, not legal drug abuse. Where adults go to their doctors and get barbiturates and amphetamines and abuse them. We don't think there is enough emphasis put on this problem because it's not as widely seen by the public. We also discussed the legalization of marijuana. Some of the pro's for legalization were that it would take kids out of the drug culture and not put them in contract so much with harder drugs and also the quality of the drug would be controlled. Some of the con's against it were that there is not enough known yet about marijuana and that it would just be another problem, like we have so many alcoholics now, we would just have a lot of potheads running around. We also agree that the system as it is doesn't work. That putting people in jail is not the answer to the problem and that there is a need for some kind of counseling service after people are arrested or even before, and some kind of professional help for them if they need it. We also decided that a lot of communities fail to realize their problem or if they do realize it they push it under the rug and don't want to deal with it because they are afraid it might be their kid. We also decided that when they do face up to the problem, maybe find out that their kids are using drugs they deal with it irrationally without enough education. We decided that one of the problems is lack of communication between various people. There needs to be more communication between parents and children. More realistic communication. Also that between the facilities that are trying to help drug users such as Huntington House and Harbor House, more communication between them and the community people that help and law enforcement agencies. We decided that ex-users are a great help in dealing with the problem because they do know what they are doing and kids can handle their own problems, if their trusted and their given the chance. We also felt that there is just not enough services available yet and that more community action towards drug abuse is needed.

Narrator: Group ten was led by Bob Franks of Arkansas College at Batesville.

Speaker 10. Our group mostly talked about drugs and that was really our main subject, we didn't get on sex or anything. Our group has several, several recommendations. Five people felt that marijuana should be legalized, that there should be no more penalties for first offenders but recommended counseling. Penalties should be harsher though for the pusher. Three felt that all drugs should be legalized but declared contraband if found on the person on the street and recommended he get counseling so that there would be no criminal record for the rest of his life. Our group felt all drug commercials even anticommercials should be banned and we feel drug education is what we need right now, so the parents and the young people would understand more of why, some people think drugs should be legalized. Some people need to be excused for something because sometimes life is a rat race so we need something to sort of bring us down off of it now and then. So we felt drugs should be legalized but first before there are all these commercials, I have to be careful or I'll get sued, but some commercials opposing drugs or anti drugs like why they have to call it dope and stuff like that, should be abandoned and put stuff on there that is down right to comprehend everything just so a magazine can be published and everything. We need things to help the people understand more about drugs which will be legalized.

Narrator: Our 5th panelist has now joined us. He is Doctor H.W. Smith from Memphis, he's the research director for the Memphis Drug Abuse Commission and he's also an advisor to the Crowley's Ridge Development Council Program on narcotics and drug abuse. This is your chance now, I'm going to get away from the microphone and I think everybody else is besides you. If you have questions that you would like to ask of any of the panelists, so everyone can hear you, know what your question is, will you please just come to the mic' there's one on each side so you can kind of sneak up on it and you can ask your questions directly, again let me go over the names of the people on the panel in case you want to ask them directly. Starting first Mr. Gene Raft, Prosecuting Attorney, C.L. Stinette, Administrator of the State Drug Abuse Program, Bernie Red with the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, Doctor Buckman and Doctor Smith. Let's see who can ask the first question. Let me ask you to do one more thing. Please speak directly into the mic', that way everyone can hear you.

Question 1. Ah, Mr. Raft, I believe you're on the end. You're the Attorney General.

Answer: No, I'm not the Attorney General.

Question 1. Prosecuting Attorney. Do you believe that the rap for the marijuana drug law is too strict or could be stricter, or do you think there is a possible way it could change in the future, near future?

Answer: Let me answer that in this way. I don't know how many of you are aware of this, probably most of you are. The law with respect to the state of Arkansas was changed the last time the legislature was in session. As a lot of you know, there are some very strict laws in this country dealing with simple possession of marijuana. For example in the state of Texas, for simple possession of marijuana, unless they have changed it recently, you could receive life in prison. I think that we all probably pretty well would agree that that is certainly too strict a law dealing with simple possession. I think the Arkansas legislature realized that and where it was a felony prior to the last session it is now a misdemeanor and for simple possession of marijuana, the penalty for that is up to one year in the county jail and a fine not to exceed $250. Well I think at first blush when we're thinking in terms of those maximums that I've just said, we'd say not perhaps that's a little to strict too, and I think in most cases it would be but let me say to you and I'm fairly familiar with what I think most prosecutors do within the state of Arkansas. Very few people who are picked up for simple possession ever receive anything near the maximum sentence. As a matter of fact in the first judicial district which I represent, the bottom five counties which would be the First Congressional District. Normally a person for simple possession of marijuana received a fine of $100 and cost and they do not receive any jail time whatsoever and do not go behind the jail for any period of time. I think as far as the leniency of the law is concerned with respect to marijuana that's probably about as lenient as you're going to get as long as it does in fact remain illegal and as long as there is some penalty placed upon it. I think at the present time, in light of the research that's been done, the inconclusive nature as it rests in my judgment at least at this time with respect to what harmful effects if any that marijuana has, that Arkansas has as well as in light of the law dealing with the possession of marijuana as any state in the union. At this time I think it's a proper law. Does that answer your question? I presume it does.

Narrator: Who's next with a question? I know you people have lots of questions to ask and this is the time to do it.

Question 2. I'd like to address just anybody on the panel that can answer it. Do you know how many people we have in Arkansas prisons today for narcotic violations? Can any of you answer that question?

Answer 2. (speaker unidentified): If I may gentleman, I don't think anyone on this panel, unless I'm sadly mistaken, would be in a position to answer that question because some of the penalties as you well know are felonies and they would be incarcerated in the Arkansas Department of Corrections. Other penalties are misdemeanors and they could be incarcerated in any jail in any county in the state of Arkansas, which there are quite a few, I don't think any of us would have that answer for you, sir.

Question 2. (continued): OK, none of you know that answer. This rebuttal for presumption law that was passed through everybody here, which becomes part of Act 590. If you have within this quantity, it's considered a misdemeanor. Is that correct?

Answer 2. (continued): If you have over that quantity it's considered a felony and the presumption is created that you intended to deliver or sell, however that presumption is rebuttable.

Question 2. (continued): Now when we get to this hard drug hearing Ed, give you 100 milligrams. Is that correct? And I'd like you all to rise to have 100 milligrams of heroin and still be under the misdeameanor law.

Answer 2. (continued): You're talking about heroin?

Answer 2. (continued): And you say you're authorized to have that? No sir, you're not authorized to have less than that. We're talking about the difference between a misdemeanor and a felony.

Heroin has no legal purpose that is recognized in Arkansas what so ever at this time, if you have any heroin on you it's in violation of the law, with respect to what law it violates would be the amount that you have on you and that's the amount that if you have more than that then you would be charged with a felony. Any amount of heroin would be in violation of this state.

Question 2. (continued): If you had 100 milligrams or less it would be a misdemeanor is that correct?

Answer 2. (continued): That's correct as I interpret it.

Question 2. (continued): 100 milligrams as I see it here would be approximately 33 doses at 5%, as it's broken down in street value of approximately $330. An this opium 3 grams of opium, that's approximately 50 doses. With the morphine, incidently I have this all broken down by druggist and doctors and so forth that tells just the quantities that it gives you. For instance on Cocaine, you're authorized 2 grams or less and still be a misdemeanor. That 2 grams has the street value of $400 and 40 doses. Now I have no fault with the marijuana and I don't believe that a user with 4 or 5 cigarettes and is picked up should be sent to any prison. I don't think he should be given a year in jail, which they can give you know, for the possession of it, but then I think some of these things are ridiculous. The quantities that is considered under the presumption law, because it gives a license, as I see it, to the pusher. What's to keep the pusher if he's pushing this particular item here, let's say cocaine, to stay within $400 street value. Go to his catch or his stach or whatever you want to call it, take that amount or that quantity with him and unless you actually catch him making a transaction or sell all you have him for is a misdemeanor. To a law enforcement, that's far too much and I'd like to know the panels feelings on that and the peoples feeling here. Know I'm not for taking a user and putting him in jail at all but the pusher I have no sympathy for him and I feel he is the person we have to get to.

Narrator: If we could have a comment from any of the panelist, I think that's what we're after here. Mr. Redd is head of the BMDD.

Answer 2. This is naturally state law and not the federal law that I would be involved with, but well, we do get involved with state law quite often. I think there are some discrepancies in the way the rebuttable presumption law was written, I think some amounts were set if they are going to have a rebuttable presumption section which I'm not in full agreement with in the first place, but if they do I think they should be more equal in the amount. Some of the amounts are like Chief Hanley stated, approximately $400 worth of drugs, others are $2 worth of drugs and I don't think that's a fair equation. That's about the only thing I have to comment on.

Second spokesman for same question: Let me say to you to broaden that chief, if I may, the state legislature now in their committees are discussing that problem that you have just raised and that's with respect to the disproportion amounts involved with respect to the various drugs. Their viewing the rebuttable presumption in two lights. Their viewing it in the street sale light which you mentioned but their also viewing that with respect to how dangerous that particular drug is. There is some thought in Arkansas advanced by some groups and some legislators that when you are dealing with hard drugs such as heroin that that should be classified as a felony, because it has no known medical use and the addictiveness of heroin is beyond question.

Narrator: It might be helpful if maybe Doctor Smith could comment on the use of smaller dose and larger doses.

Doctor Smith: Well I don't know that I could add much to what has been said that except that when they made this up that probably some people weren't to familiar with how these dosages go and so it just seemed reasonable like most laws, so I would say the discrepancy certainly exist but is probably very innocently, someone making up the law that didn't know the difference between heroin and marijuana too much. It probably will be cleared up and I think the next legislature will probably close that gap a little bit.

Narrator: Thank you Doctor Smith.

Question 3. In attendence to one of the discussion groups, I was pleased to be a spectator. One of the groups indepth aspects of that particular group was the motivation behind the participant in drug abuse. Though the expert of that particular group felt like that it was not such a thing as peer group pressures. Many in the group expressed that it was. Such a thing as what I and my late terminology would call this rebellion against authority in many instances prompted this kind of thing. I would like to ask Doctor Buckman on the basis of his expertise and life background if he would comment on that, how he views this as it effects drug abuse.

Answer 3. That honestly is yes and no. There are numerous motivations for drug abuse and for any one person there may be at least one dozen reasons why he or she will abuse drugs. Each one of those reasons is valid. You can be more dogmatic about why a certain person may be finished up on a certain drug because he seeks a special type of relief of oblivion or psychedelic experiences. The general question of drug abuse, many motivations, certainly peer group pressure, certainly the need to rebel and they need to be caught, to be punished, to be an escape goat, to be a martyr, to provoke. Those are the more valid reasons maybe to explore to understand, I don't think I can really answer it any other way. Many motivations for every abuser. Some are socially determined, also people conform to our sterotypes quite often and I'd like to back track if I may to the last question. I think the difficulties we were discussing just now, same as with motivation. The motivation in those who want to use and abuse and the motivation in those who want to stop it and the difficulty here, is trying to legislate for public and private morality. It's a question of opinions and a constantly changing situation. I think I would be interested if legislators were asked to write opinion when they change the law and say why they decreased the penalty. In the same right the judges have to write opinions. It would be very enlightening I think.

Speaker for same question: Let me add something to that too, you know it seems to us in Memphis, we have been sort of studying these problems for about two years there. We've gone through two different phases and I certainly agree that there are many causes. At first we start out with a lot of abusers with something we call a counter culture. There were very visibly dressed in different ways if were talking about dropping out and so on and so forth. So the first about two years or two and a half years ago in Memphis, most of the drug use was confined to this group of people. Today that's not true anymore, it's moved into the suburbs in the middle class. Probably you've noticed in or on most college campuses, you don't quite have the disagreement with college policies we had before but I would say that talking across time the problem shifts. It used to be everybody says the drug abusers are somebody else but our experiences have been that it is now shifting from a rather vocal anti-establishment group to now, the thing is sort of like hoola-hoops. We find probably this shift is certainly something you must consider when you're trying to understand what motives are and how to deal with it. We studied one group that one of crises intervention center and also all the people that came in on bad trips in were sitting in the Memphis hospital and we selected at random about forty people and we found for example they were really addicted and quite often more than 50% of them were psychotic so they were something else, there was a great history before this one instance came along. So it is a very complex situation but I would suggest as far as Memphis and I would think even it seems that other cities you'll find a little change in your population of users as it goes along.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. LUNGREN.]

Mr. LUNGREN. Mr. Chairman, it is comforting to see there is much bipartisan support for us to do something, anything, in the war on drugs. The American people will be watching to see whether what we do is actually effective.

This is a massive comprehensive bill attempting a comprehensive approach to the problem, but I would like to underscore what I have said before, a comment that we have heard from some of the outside who have been taking the brunt of some of our criticism, some in other countries who basically said they will work with us to try to interdict illegal drugs coming into this country but they would expect us, as the consumer nation, to do something with respect to the consumers.

We cannot actually point to the traffickers as the total problem. We have to recognize that a good portion of the problem remains within our borders, not only with the traffickers within our own borders but with the users.

Until we accept the responsibility that individuals make individual decisions and that individuals should accept the consequences of those decisions and that our laws will make them accept the consequences of those decisions, we will not truly be serious about what we are embarking upon here today, which is to eradicate the problem of drugs in our country.

Frankly we need a cultural change, we need to have a change all the way from the entertainment community to the floor of the House of Representatives. We must say to our young people that both by our words and our deed, illegal drug use is unacceptable.

A number of amendments will go in that direction.

I will say with respect to the last amendment mentioned by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ALEXANDER] sometimes issues are more complex than they appear and sometimes presenting a bill which suggests that you should share more broadly the information, even raw intelligence information about possible illegal drug use, does not help the problem; it hinders the solution to the problem.

Many people know that our intelligence community, involved as it is around the world with a whole host of requirements, receives information that must be first reviewed and must be seen as to its credibility and that somehow send it up the channel immediately portends political problems across the board.

Someone would have to be blind not to realize that we do not have problems with leaks both on this side of Pennsylvania Avenue and the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue.

Think, if you will, if we had more possibilities for leaks of raw intelligence information with respect to initial investigations about drug dealings around the world whether that will help or that will hinder our efforts to do something seriously about the problem.

One of the major problems we have is there is the temptation toward the political rather than the substantive and I hope in this debate we will know the difference and we will act on that difference.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Florida [Mr. McCollum] has 3 minutes remaining and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Dingell] has 5 minutes remaining.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. Shaw].

Mr. SHAW. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to congratulate the gentleman from Florida [Mr. McCollum] as well as the gentleman from New York [Mr. Rangel] as well as all of the others in this House who have worked together to speed a most important bill, and the bill that is going to be the most important bill coming out of the 100th Congress.

I would also like to congratulate the 140 cosponsors of H.R. 4446 which I filed some 6 months ago because of the provisions that had been lifted from that bill as that bill in fact lifted from other bills to put together a very concise and valuable bill.

This bill includes such things that are included in H.R. 4446 such as the sense-of-the-Congress against legalization of drugs; the drug treatment of pregnant women which had been beyond their grasp until now. Moneys that are appropriated by the Federal Government to the States will be available to women who are expecting babies and who are in fact addicted to drugs. It sets up an international narcotics task force which is most important if we are going to attack the drug problem at the source, and that is in the source country.

It provides for the suppression of international narcotics trade as one of the highest and important foreign policy objectives of this country. It provides for eradication of coca plants and it goes on and on and on. There are going to be a number of amendments that are most important and I hope the Members will listen very carefully.

Unfortunately the procedure that has been followed by the House has not allowed for hearings. However, this bill has been out, it has been studied by the Members and their staffs and a lot of very important amendments are going to be offered.

So I would encourage all of the Members to listen very carefully when these amendments come to the floor, listen to the debate, stick either on the floor or to your television sets so that you know exactly what is going on and we can intelligently vote.

One of the things we have to be very careful about is we do not use this bill as a vehicle to weaken existing law. And to that many of the amendments will be directed.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the 5 minutes which I had remaining.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, what is the time situation?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Rangel] has 5 minutes remaining and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. McCollum] has 1 minute remaining.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Garcia].

Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Chairman I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act, to be considered here today and tomorrow. Drug abuse has become a national problem of crisis proportions. During the last 25 years there has been a significant increase in drug abuse in the United States. During this same time, Congress has responded with increased levels of spending to help combat the drug problem. Spending has risen from $82 million in 1969 to approximately $3.9 billion and $3.5 billion in 1987 and 1988 respectively.

I want to commend Congressman Charlie Rangel, chairman of the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, for his valuable and outspoken leadership in our war on drugs and in the formulation of this legislation today. I also commend the different House committees of jurisdiction and their members for their hard work in putting together this legislation.

We can all be proud of the measure being considered here today. It represents a strong step forward in our war on drugs and a renewed commitment to eliminate drugs from our streets and classrooms. I am particularly proud of their provisions designed to reduce drug abuse among our young people and to make more readily available drug treatment facilities to all those in need. In my district in the South Bronx, the incidence of youth participation in drug use and trafficking is alarming. I therefore support the provisions in this bill that attempt to prevent drug abuse among our young people and attempt to reach out to members of youth gangs and juvenile delinquents to bring them into a more productive and meaningful life.

After World War II, there was a sharp increase in the use of heroin in our inner cities, and more recently, there has been an alarming increase in the use of cocaine, and cocaine derivatives, such as "crack" and "rock." In New York City alone, there are an estimated 250,000 to 300,000 heroin addicts. Deaths due to cocaine abuse in the city have risen from 7 in 1983 to 92 in 1984, 196 in 1985, and 287 in 1986. Deaths due to AIDS among IV drug users has risen from 88 in 1983 to 293 in 1984, 488 in 1985, and 1,000 in 1986. Drug arrests in New York City are equally telling, rising from 60,000 in 1985 and 69,500 in 1986 to over 80,000 in 1987.

Equally alarming is the fact that the increased use of drugs, and especially the use of "crack," has involved population groups previously not associated with the problem. This of course includes the tragic use of drugs and involvement in drug running by school-age youth and adolescents. Today, the problem has reached such crisis proportions that it comes as no surprise when we hear of youngsters in grammer school involved in drugs, or when we hear of youth gang violence and law enforcement fatalities. This simply cannot be allowed to continue. We must make the full commitment necessary to eliminate drugs from our society.

The Federal strategy in the war against drugs is multifaceted. It includes initiatives to reduce the supply of drugs through drug and narcotics regulations, and international control of drug production and trafficking. It also includes initiatives to reduce the demand for drugs through education, prevention, treatment and rehab programs, as well as programs funding research into drug dependency, treatment and prevention.

The first major drug initiative, the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986, increased spending by $1.7 billion for fiscal year 1987. This included new authorizations for State and local law enforcement and Federal drug enforcement activities. It also authorized new international narcotics control and drug interdiction activities, as well as domestic drug abuse education, treatment and research programs. Today and tomorrow Congress will consider an omnibus drug bill which authorizes a total of $6.1 billion for new and existing programs. This figure represents a $2.1-billion increase over amounts presently provided in fiscal year 1989 appropriation measures.

This new bill provides much needed funding for antidrug abuse education, treatment and prevention programs. It authorizes $30 million for drug abuse prevention targeting youth gangs and $15 million targeting runaway and homeless youth. The legislation also authorizes $15 million for a National Youth Sports Program and $10 million for drug abuse education in WIC programs.

The drug bill will also provide funding for increased law enforcement and drug interdiction activities. It authorizes $2.5 billion for a variety of enforcement and correctional programs in the Department of Justice, and provides $346 million to the Coast Guard and $1.2 billion to the Customs Service for interdiction efforts. It is essential that we do all that we can to stop the flow of drugs into our country and to address the problems associated with drug abuse and narcotics trafficking.

As chairman of the Subcommittee on International Finance, Trade and Monetary Policy, I have carved out a role for the Eximbank to make loans to democratic governments to reduce the production of drugs within their borders and the shipment of drugs into this country. I also recommended the inclusion of a discretionary grant program for the expansion of existing drug treatment facilities and a special research and treatment program to address the growing problem of infant addiction.

This war against drugs is ongoing. We are not nearly done and therefore we must not let up our effort. We must work toward positively influencing young people in their attitudes toward illegal drugs and providing them with alternatives that will lead them into productive lives. No level of funding or amount of commitment is too great in this war on drugs—this fight for our youth and our future. It requires a participation by all of us. Today as we begin the debate on the Omnibus Drug Initiatives Act of 1988 we move forward in our war against drugs. I urge all of my colleagues to join in.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from California [Ms. PELOSI].

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, today we are considering a comprehensive drug initiative in an attempt to find a solution to the crippling effects of the drug abuse epidemic. This legislation would create new opportunities for drug prevention and treatment programs while increasing Federal assistance for law-enforcement efforts. Congress must recognize that the time has come to find new creative approaches, because the old ones have not worked in combating our drug problems.

My own district of San Francisco has experienced an unprecedented rise in drug related crime. Over the last 5 years, we have experienced a 439-percent increase in dangerous drug offenses, and a 245-percent rise in drug related emergency room treatments. Since 1980, the bay area has witnessed an increase of over 400 percent in cocaine overdose deaths. Despite our efforts, these figures continue to rise.

We must work to develop innovative programs to stop drug abuse. One such project in my district which has been very successful is the Delancey Street project. Delancey Street participants rid themselves of drug dependency while acquiring useful job skills. The participants are currently financing and providing 80 percent of the labor in the construction of their new home, the Embarcadero Triangle. This kind of innovative project should be encouraged.

The city of San Francisco has developed a plan for drug prevention, treatment, and counseling intended to respond to the critical drug problem in low-income housing areas. I believe that this plan is just the type of innovative program this bill seeks to promote.

The program is designed as a series of centers to be located in public housing sites throughout the city, to provide multiple drug treatment, intervention, and prevention services. The plan is intended to bring to the individual housing site all the necessary resources to organize community drug treatment efforts, to provide treatment, to prevent juvenile drug use, and to intervene in serious drug crises affecting housing projects. Prevention strategies and interventions would be targeted specifically at housing projects and other low-income housing to reduce the risk of drug addiction in those populations.

This proposal requires multiple sites throughout the city because experience shows that success in one single neighborhood can simply shift the problem to other neighborhoods. Citywide coordination will help to reduce drug supply and demand within the whole city. Programs that prove to be effective should be identified, encouraged, and where possible, replicated. Should this program prove effective, as expected, similar programs could be planned for other major metropolitan areas.

I commend my colleagues for their work on this comprehensive drug initiative. By combining forces on the Federal, State, and local levels, coordinating our efforts, and rewarding innovative programming we can expect to make gains against the rising illegal narcotic trade in this country.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. HUNTER] to close debate.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, I want to commend the many authors of this particular bill which is coming up. Particularly, I want to commend the gentleman from Florida [Mr. McCOLLUM] and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] for their work on the meth lab legislation that they have commenced work on earlier this year and particularly the precursor ephedrine which is a substance used in many legitimate enterprises, being used right now as a centerpiece of the meth-lab making of chemicals that has rendered San Diego, where I come from, the meth-lab capital of the world. It is a very dangerous drug. It kills people in its use, it also kills people in its manufacture.

I want to give particular commendation to Peter Nunez, our U.S. attorney for holding a meeting earlier this year that resulted in certain language being given to the committee, particularly the language that requires that a certificate of lawful use be required of people who buy ephedrine from chemical companies. Right now you have chemical companies that are selling large amounts of ephedrine for illegitimate use.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL] has 2 minutes remaining.

Mrs. COLLINS. Mr. Chairman, when our youth disfigure their futures by wielding the chain saw called "drugs," we cannot be an absent parent. When drugs cause our workers to produce a work output that is mediocre in both quantity and quality, we cannot be the friendly foreman. When walking our boulevards becomes a hazardous activity due to a proliferation of drug-related violence, we cannot be the social theoretician, asking citizens to live in fear and defend themselves while the problem is being studied.

Drugs have created myriad social and socioeconomic disasters in recent years. Although some problems conveniently disappear over time drug abuse has proven itself to not be one of them. On a regular basis, in virtually every major newspaper, one reads of teenagers killed over drug deals, school test scores falling while dropout rates rise due to drug abuse, and chronic unemployment, again with a direct link to narcotics abuse.

The time to extract this parasite from the body of our culture is now. The need for a comprehensive, effective attack on all fronts of the drug war is manifest. Drug abuse is not an isolated phenomenon devoid of impact. To the contrary, drug misuse and abuse today assures us of problems tomorrow. A child, adolescent, or adult who uses drugs—and the numbers who do are staggering—is impaired in ways which are irreversible. Spirit is dampened; attitude becomes dour; enthusiasm succumbs to apathy; the nervous system becomes distorted; interests are diverted. This later translates to social problems, economic problems, psychological problems, family problems, personal problems, and possibly even physiological problems, such as the incapacity to produce a healthy child. Not only are these circumstances unacceptable on an individual level, they spell bad news for society and for the country as a whole. In a period where the word "competitiveness" is on everyone's lips, how can our country expect to be fully competitive if any of those participating in our economic growth are dulled by drugs.

Without question, drug trafficking and abuse has led to a massive increase in crime. It has become so bad that senior citizens often hesitate to leave their homes for fear of being caught helpless amidst such an atmosphere. When our cities become unlivable for many of their denizens, remedial action is long overdue.

With problems as extreme as these, one might think that the American Government would be leading the fight against this evil. Instead, Nancy Reagan tells us to "say no" to drugs while President Reagan says no to developing an effective policy which will lead to the rapid eradication of this blight on America. Substance abuse is deeply rooted and cannot be solved by a mere slogan. Drug use has almost become a custom institutionalized in numerous sectors of our society and customs cannot be shattered with lipservice.

Thus, it has become the responsibility of Congress—this Congress—to begin to try to combat this evil by passing the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act. Some of the causes are too comprehensive to rectify in the short term. For example, in the Reagan years, where people with material means were helped to increase it while the people without sufficient means were forgotten, the division between rich and poor has grown. Unfortunately, many such people see drug trafficking as a ticket to big money and their road to glory. But once again, this is far too deep a problem to be solved today.

Today, we must turn our attention to more feasible solutions such as community-sponsored afterschool activities, drug abuse education, addiction cure centers, mass media efforts, family bond enhancement, and afterschool jobs. These are important measures which can decrease the demand for drugs among the young. The Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988 initiates a laudable well-directed effort at steering the American community toward a more healthy course.

Now no antidrug effort can be complete without addressing the supply side of the drug equation. This bill makes a solid, serious attempt to reinforce law enforcement efforts to eradicate the production of illegal substances and interdict any shipment of them aimed at the United States. In so doing, H.R. 5210 intelligently provides avenues for tackling this massive problem.

One such avenue, which many of you mistakenly believe will assist in our efforts, is the imposition of the death penalty in cases where drugs lead to murder. This may seem, at first glance, like a good idea, but when one considers the details of when it would be used and for whom it should be used, serious misgivings begin to take place. A death penalty provision—should any be deemed the least bit appropriate—must be very narrowly conscribed and specifically tailored so as not to be indiscriminately applied, nor applied discriminatorily.

Mr. Chairman, on the whole, this bill is a very solid, comprehensive attack on drugs. It embraces the future rather than write it off. America needs it badly. Therefore, I believe it is not just our right, but our duty, to enthusiastically support this legislation.

Mr. FEIGHAN. Mr. Chairman, today, we are considering an extremely crucial piece of legislation, the omnibus drug bill. This bill intensifies and improves our efforts in the war on drugs. We have learned that this battle must be fought on several fronts. The omnibus drug bill reaffirms this commitment.

Perhaps the most important component of this bill is the fact that support and necessary funding will go to people who are truly fighting to rid America of the drug scourge. These people are in our States and small towns. They are the men and women of the Customs Service and the Coast Guard. For too long now, they have tirelessly performed their duties with inadequate resources provided by the Federal Government. Today, we send a message to them, "we will help you." Today, we also send a message to the drug traffickers, dealers and pushers, "we will fight you at every border, street corner, alley, and playground."

H.R. 5210 increases drug enforcement grants to State and local agencies. State and local forces bear the primary burden of waging the war on drugs. These funds represent the very least we should do to help. The Custom Service and Coast Guard will receive the additional moneys needed to protect our borders and police our coasts.

However, there is a whole other area, separate from the battle cries and war analogies; the area of education and prevention. As we strive to cut off the supply side, we also have to work to lessen the demand for illicit drugs. Here, the omnibus drug bill also provides the much-needed impetus. We must warn America's young people about the dangers of drug use and addiction. Community alcohol and drug abuse education programs will finally receive the Federal backing they deserve. Those who have already suffered, need to be helped. Specific programs will treat and rehabilitate runaways, homeless youths, gang members, and juvenile delinquents.

I am pleased to see that Congress has realized the great threat posed by intravenous drug abusers who transmit the horrible AIDS virus. Increased funding will provide both training for new drug abuse counselors and outreach activities encouraging IV drug abusers to seek treatment. These programs are wisely targeted for the areas that need it most.

I would also like to take this time to express my support for a couple of the amendments offered to this bill. While we have heard a lot of antidrug tough talk from this administration, we have yet to see a clearly defined or effective national drug policy. Representative HUGHES' drug-czar amendment would change this. Currently, there are 11 Cabinet departments, 32 Federal agencies, and 5 independent agencies charged in some way with fighting the war on drugs. With a Cabinet-level drug administrator, such diffusion of responsibility would be avoided. An effective and comprehensive national agenda could be implemented.

I would also like to thank all of my colleagues who have supported the 7-day waiting period amendment. In the past few months, I have urged my colleagues to recognize the drug-gun connection. We cannot win the drug war unless we can disarm the dealers. The omnibus drug bill should include a 7-day waiting period on handgun sales, so that police may conduct a background check to ensure that handguns stay out of reach of drug dealers.

In closing, I would just like to thank all of the members and respective committees, who put together a responsible and sensible drug bill. We cannot lose faith in our resolve to correct societal ills. This is not only a battle we can win, but a battle we must win.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Chairman, the war on drugs, in which we are now engaged, is the most serious challenge to the fabric of our society that I have seen in my 30 years in Congress. Drugs are overpowering our children, plaguing our economy, and killing innocent citizens who get caught in the crossfire of the drug traffickers' wars.

I have advocated and I support a strong Federal role in combating drugs, and I applaud the approach and the goals of the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act. It attacks the drug problem from both the supply side and the demand side. My good friends BOB MICHEL, the minority leader, and TOM FOLEY, the majority leader, deserve credit for putting together a good, comprehensive bill.

On the demand side it increases our commitment to drug prevention through education, care, and treatment, through greater penalties for drug users, and by creating alternatives to involvement in drugs for youths.

One such alternative program, which I have long advocated, is the National Youth Sports Program for disadvantaged youths, which would be expanded from a summer program to a year-round program. While the program is not specifically focused on drugs, and perhaps should have been separately authorized, it is worthwhile and deserves our support.

The Drug Act tackles the supply side of drugs by expanding our commitment to drug enforcement and interdiction. It provides additional tools to get to the big dealers, the powerful drug lords who hide behind their laundered money. It permits greater international efforts to reduce drug production and smuggling.

It is, to outside appearances, a serious attempt at handling the Nation's drug problem. But a glaring oversight threatens to make it little more than rhetoric. The war against drugs cannot be fought where there is no money. To be responsible, the commitment we make through the Drug Act must be backed up with dollars, and right now we are backed up against the $146 billion spending ceiling for fiscal year 1989. Any additional spending will trigger an automatic sequester of a minimum $10 billion across the board, cutting into the very antidrug programs that we are supplementing in the Drug Act.

I am disappointed that the Rules Committee did not make in order the two amendments I proposed to the Drug Act which would have handled the funding problems. The first would have answered positively the question of paying for the act, and the second would have raised $100 million for the Coast Guard which would have helped offset a fraction of the Drug Act's $4 billion cost.

My first amendment would have provided that authorizations for additional spending not take effect unless equivalent offsetting reductions in spending for other programs are made, or equivalent additional revenue is provided. This offsetting amendment is necessary to avoid a sequester and to demonstrate that we are really serious, that we are really going to war on drugs.

The House should have had an opportunity to vote this issue up or down. We did once before, on April 20, when we voted unanimously, 412 to 0, to comply with the bipartisan budget agreement spending caps when fighting the war on drugs. Why not implement that decision now? The American people deserve a real war on drugs, and I, for one, am saddened that by not ensuring funding, we are responding to this terrible scourge with rhetoric.

My second amendment rejected by Rules was a $20 annual user fee on recreational boaters who use U.S. waterways. The user fee would raise about $100 million annually for the Coast Guard. Since the Coast Guard spent $266 million in fiscal year 1987 in support of recreational boaters, a user fee is already justified. In view of the expanded role of the Coast Guard in drug enforcement under this Drug Act, I think a user fee is even more necessary to provide boaters with the services they have received in the past while keeping the Coast Guard in the war on drugs.

We don't have to sacrifice our war on the deficit in order to fight our war on drugs, but the Drug Act, unfortunately, doesn't give us a choice in its present configuration. Without offsets, a $4 billion appropriation herein authorized is going to trigger a sequester and break the agreements we worked so hard to reach last year. I support the Drug Act, and will work to prevent a sequester, but I am disappointed that we have taken an approach that does not responsibly address the real and immediate funding pressures with which we are faced.

I have some additional comments I would now like to insert for the RECORD. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

ADAMHA REAUTHORIZATION

In many ways this bill goes beyond the assigned topic of drugs and branches into many different areas. One of them, on which I would like to comment, is the reauthorization of many of the programs of the Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration.

NIDA RESEARCH

One provision, about which I have grave reservations, involves the proposal to set aside 15 percent of research monies at the National Institute on Drug Abuse for service demonstration programs. There are multiple reasons why this is not a good idea.

First of all, it has the potential to reduce research funding at precisely the time when it is needed. It is most important to provide services and experiment with better services to substance abusers. But it is important to recognize that any real answers to the problems of addiction depend on research. At the present time, getting abusers into treatment is not a guarantee of recovery. In fact, with some exceptions, there is a very good chance that addicts who go into treatment will relapse. The reason is because we are just beginning to support the research that is necessary to come to an understanding of the nature of the addictive process and how it can be effectively treated.

It would be wrong to reduce our effort to understand drug dependence and treat it more effectively through research, in order to fund short term demonstration programs that are important but not a substitute for new knowledge. It is ironic that on a problem like AIDS we are willing to invest billions of dollars in research, but on a problem like drug dependence, we are talking about diverting the few dollars that are spent on research into service projects.

This is even more critical, because it is not clear against what funding base the set aside would be applied. NIDA research is currently funded under two different provisions of the Public Health Service Act, section 301 and section 517. The provision in this bill, Section 10013, would authorize the 15% set aside against funding provided under section 517 (renumbered as section 518). It is unclear how much funding is considered provided under section 517 and how much funding is considered provided under section 301. It is possible to consider at least 3 different figures as being provided under section 517, the NIDA research line in the FY 1989 appropriations bill, which provides $115 million, the NIDA research line in the FY 1989 bill plus the NIDA AIDS funds provided under the ADAMHA AIDS line, which amounts to something like, estimating $238 million, or the NIDA research line in the FY 1989 bill plus the NIDA AIDS research (and not prevention or service) funds only, which would fall somewhere in between.

It there were a set-aside, I would hope it would be taken against the larger figure, since it is likely to match up more closely with the Institute's current activities. If it were applied against the smaller figure, it would be a clear diversion of funds from research and disruptive in the extreme of the research program at NIDA.

But I want to indicate my strong opposition to the set-aside and my strong desire to see this provision changed as this bill moves along. If service demonstrations need to be funded, let them be authorized separately.

EFFECT OF REAUTHORIZATION ON APPROPRIATIONS

Furthermore, if this bill does go through, there will be the situation of having an FY 1989 appropriation based on the existing panoply of ADAMHA programs, with a subsequent revamping of those programs due to this reauthorization. As the Ranking Minority Member of both the Appropriations Committee and the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services and Education, it is my opinion that before the agency could spend any funds in accordance with the new authorization, there would have to be a reprogramming sent up to the Committee for its approval of the agency's proposed plans to spend the appropriated funds in accord with the new authorization.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. Chairman, I rise to express my strong support for H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act. This legislation adds important new weapons to our fight against the scourge of drug smuggling and abuse. It is the product of months of work by several committees of the House. With the American people citing the drug epidemic as the Nation's greatest domestic problem, this bill must be our top priority for action.

H.R. 5210 builds on the legislation we passed in 1986. It addresses all aspects of the drug abuse problem, combining tougher controls at our Nation's borders on smuggling; stronger penalties for the manufacture, distribution and use of narcotics; and improved measures to prevent drug dependence.

I am proud to have contributed to this bill, through both my Banking and Foreign Affairs Committee assignments. In June, we on the Banking Committee approved important new powers for our law enforcement agencies in tracking the flow of drug-related money, which is the lifeblood of the drug trade. The Treasury Department will have broader authority to require reporting of large transactions in localities where drug smuggling is rampant. This will help us locate the smugglers and shut them down, as they try to move their funds through the Nation's financial network.

In the Foreign Affairs Committee, we approved new programs to fight the international drug cartels. A new multinational antinarcotics force will be set up in Latin America, combining our resources with those of the Organization of American States and other member governments. We will provide new armaments to protect drug control agents from the already well-armed smugglers. We will step up our research on effective herbicides for use against the basic narcotic-producing crops. And we will tighten passport and visa controls to stop smugglers from entering our country.

Although this bill is a big step forward in our fight against drugs, by no means is this the end of our work. I will vote for amendments to make this bill even stronger, and I urge my colleagues to do the same.

Yet, in acting on this bill, we must recognize that winning the war against drugs will require far more than new laws and law enforcement. Every American must enlist in this struggle, because drug abuse is a problem that permeates all parts of our Nation, from big cities to our small towns.

Every family, every teacher, every community leader must do their part. We are in a battle to preserve the fabric of our society, and we must do what is necessary to win.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Chairman, today we in the House have the opportunity to take action against the greatest threat to the health and safety of our Nation today, the scourge of drug. I have had to deal with the pain and suffering of this blight first hand. I have lost two nephews to drugs and I have seen how this parasite preys on our young people, the extent that it steals the very life from our greatest national treasure, our young people.

This bill gives us the opportunity to fight back against this scourge and to make it clear to those who would profit from the poisoning of this Nation that we are not going to take it anymore. Mr. GEKAS will give us the opportunity to make it clear to those who would kill our young people that their lives will be in jeopardy if they persist in such activity. The bill also makes many necessary reforms which will assist our law enforcement efforts. This is a worthwhile and essential goal, but we must not in our zeal to improve drug enforcement trample the rights of innocents.

Subtitle B of title VI and title VII would protect the rights of innocent conveyance owners from forfeiture. These sections also provide numerous procedural safeguards to innocent owners who have had their conveyances seized. Unfortunately these sections do not apply to the customs laws. This leads to the untenable situation where the lead agency involved in vessel, aircraft, and auto seizures are not compelled to respect the basic rights of our citizens. Mr. STUDDS will be offering an amendment to ensure that the basic rights of innocent owners are respected by all Federal agencies.

I am also proud of the title V sections which would reauthorize the Indian alcohol and substance abuse sections of the 1986 drug bill. These sections were the result of 3 years of hearings by the Interior Committee and constitute a strong effort to stop drug use by Native Americans at an early age. Subtitle A would amend the 1986 act to reach a greater number of Indians and Native Alaskans in urban areas.

This is important legislation and while I feel that it could be improved by amendments in some areas, I would still urge its expeditious passage.

Mr. MANTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 5210.

No action the 100th Congress has taken or will take in the remaining months is as important for our Nation than the passage of the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act. This is a much needed initiative to shore up our actions of 2 years ago in the passage of the Omnibus Anti-Drug Abuse Act.

Mr. Chairman, we must stop the flow of drugs into our Nation. Illegal drugs are killing our Nation's youth and having a devastating impact on every segment of our society. There is no greater menace to our children and our neighborhoods.

To illustrate just now serious this problem is, Mr. Chairman, I would like to recount a recent telephone call to my office. My constituent did not believe the Congress was doing enough to eradicate the drug plague. She did not understand why Congress could not declare war on drugs. She was not talking about the rhetorical war we all often speak of, but rather, a real declaration of war; involving all that a state of war would involve—a draft, full use of the military, and even the suspension of certain rights which might result from such a state of emergency. This was not a facetious request, Mr. Chairman, and it clearly demonstrates how far the average citizen wants the Congress to go in eliminating the flow of drugs into our society.

The amount of drugs pouring across our borders is both mindboggling and heartbreaking. I know we have all heard the gruesome statistics about drugs in America; however, I believe they bear repeating. In 1986 an estimated 150 tons of cocaine, 12 tons of heroin, up to 60,000 tons of marijuana, and 200 tons of hashish flooded into the United States. This is in addition to the estimated 4,000 tons of marijuana illegally cultivated in the United States, and more than 10 tons of psychotropic drugs which were manufactured domestically.

Mr. Chairman, these statistics are all the evidence we need to conclude we have a raging drug epidemic that must be shut off with strong, decisive congressional action.

These statistics are even more telling when put in human perspective. These are not just numbers, they show the toll taken on human health and well-being.

There are more than 600,000 heroin addicts in the United States and their numbers have been growing steady every year since the late seventies. More than 1 million Americans are estimated to be addicted to cocaine and in need of professional help. In New York alone there were some 600 drug-related deaths in 1986. The rate of drug-related emergency room admissions and deaths continues to grow across our Nation.

According to the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, the total social and economic cost of this drug epidemic was $100 billion in 1986. These costs include drug prevention programs, treatment, related crime, violence, death, property destruction, lost productivity, and drug enforcement.

The figures speak for themselves. We have a deadly disease which has permeated every facet of our society. We presently are losing—not winning—the war on drugs.

One of the major reasons we are losing this war has been the lack of support and leadership from the administration. With the passage of the 1986 Anti-Drug Abuse Act Congress sought to make drug abuse education an essential element of our national antidrug strategy. Yet, every year since then the President has requested funding will below that authorized for this and other valuable programs to fight drugs. In some instances they even asked for zero appropriations. However, this is not a new approach for this administration. From 1980 to 1986, Federal support for drug abuse services declined by approximately 40 percent, severely straining our States' public treatment programs. This administration may call this a war on drugs but I call it a surrender.

Also, this administration has pursued the irrational policy of zero tolerance while allowing major international drug dealers to go about their business unfettered. We have a policy of confiscating private boats for having on board infinitesimal quantities of marijuana while allowing drug kingpins such as General Noreiga to remain in power.

General Noreiga has been indicted by two U.S. grand juries on drug trafficking and racketeering charges. He has been charged with conspiring to import tons of illicit drugs into the United States and using Panamanian banks to launder the proceeds of these illegal activities. This administration was for many months unwilling to recognize this source of drugs threatening our country, and for many months now has been incapable of removing this threat. This is an outrage and an insult to our ability to remain a world power.

Mr. Chairman, this legislation will supplement our previous anti-drug efforts by strengthening existing law and providing new resources in our fight against drugs. With the passage of this legislation we will finally place controls on many of those chemicals commonly available which are used in the manufacturing and processing of illegal narcotics; greatly improve our ability to control the laundering of drug money; increase our assistance to State and local drug enforcement by increasing their overall authorization and providing direct grants to municipalities; broaden the jurisdiction of several branches of the Federal Government to play a wider role in drug enforcement; and, establish additional mandatory penalties for certain drug offenses.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, I want to add my voice in strong support of the amendment to provide the death penalty for drug kingpins. I believe such an amendment is necessary to enhance the enforcement of our Nation's antidrug laws. I have introduced similar legislation to provide this long-overdue weapon in our arsenal to fight the illicit drug trade, which is carried out by vicious killers who are destroying our neighborhoods and our country.

Mr. Chairman, my support for the death penalty for certain drug-related crimes is a product of my years as a New York police officer and my years representing Jackson Heights which has long been one of the major cocaine trafficking centers in New York. The drug trade has bred more crime and more violence every year. Last year, this plague culminated in the cold blooded murder of officer Edward Byrne who was gunned down execution style while guarding the Queens home of a witness in a major drug investigation.

Mr. Chairman, we are losing our war on drugs and we will not start winning this war until we take decisive action. The drug dealers responsible for the killing of Eddie Byrne sent our society a message. They told us they do not care about human life. They only care about obtaining money and power at any cost. We have the opportunity with the adoption of this death penalty amendment to send our own equally clear message that we as a society will not hesitate to impose the ultimate penalty on those who are killing our youth, our neighborhoods, and our law enforcement officers.

We, as a nation, simply must have the resolve to take this step if we are to defeat these drug czars who are destroying our society.

Mr. Chairman, the legislation we will be considering in the days ahead provides the needed ammunition for our fight. I urge approval of the bill and of the death penalty amendment.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 5210, the Omnibus Drug Initiative Act of 1988. As a former director of a countywide drug program and as a former county sheriff, I know the grave threat drugs pose to our Nation. In 1986, I coauthored the omnibus antidrug bill that marked an important step forward in addressing America's serious drug problem.

However, since that the time the drug problem has remained a serious and tragic problem. From professional athletes to train operators to junior high school students the problem has pervaded every sector of our society. A comprehensive approach is the only answer and I am gratified that Congress is building upon the foundation that was laid in 1986. H.R. 5210 is a comprehensive measure—one that will address the drug problem on all fronts: enforcement, treatment, education, eradication, interdiction and counseling. As a member of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, I am pleased that the legislation before us today addresses many of the problems the Select Committee has reviewed and also adopts several recommendations the Select Committee has made.

I would like to single out and express my strong support for several key provisions in this bill I feel are particularly important. H.R. 5210 permits eligible localities to apply directly for Federal drug law enforcement funds if States fail to make timely applications for grants—this provision will ensure that local governments have streamlined access to desperately needed Federal drug fighting moneys.

For fiscal year 1989, the bill authorizes $1.38 billion for the Federal Prison System. Expansion of the prison system is the only way to ensure that those convicted of serious drug offenses serve hard time and are not put on probation or released early because of prison overcrowding. I also support the amendment being offered of Mr. ORTIZ of Texas which would make 50 percent of asset forfeiture funds secured by local law enforcement agencies under equitable sharing available to their corresponding State and local governments for prison construction, expansion, maintenance and operations. This amendment would be of little or no cost to the U.S. taxpayer and would provide State and local governments with urgently needed funds to ease the prison overcrowding problem.

I strongly support provisions in the bill calling on Federal contractors to establish and announce antidrug policies, education programs and to deal with drug violations in the workplace. The time has come for the Federal Government to provide clear and unambiguous leadership in getting those who deal with the Federal Government to adopt tough and clearly defined antidrug programs and policies. While it is important to identify when a worker is using drugs—it is equally important for employers to inform and educate employees that help and treatment is available. All employees should be encouraged to seek help and treatment if they have a drug problem—without the fear of being fired.

I strongly support the provision in the bill expressing the sense of Congress that proposals to legalize illicit drugs should be rejected. Although it is to get discouraged when examining the enormous scope of the Nation's drug problem, legalization is not the answer. Any discusison of legalization hinders our drug fighting efforts and diminishes the very real threat posed by drugs—especially to our young people. Drugs kill and drugs ruin people's lives. They should never be legalized. We must continue to wage an all-out, comprehensive war on drugs—the future of our Nation is at stake. Legalization is a nonsolution.

One other important provision of the bill I feel is important to single out is the authorization of funding for grants to drug treatment programs to expand their capacity in order to reduce waiting periods for those seeking treatment. One of the tragedies of the drug problem is that those addicted to drugs who want help many times have to wait several months to get into a treatment program. This overload has caused countless addicts undue pain and suffering. Hopefully this program can be expanded upon so that in the future drug treatment programs have the resources they need to provide assistance to all who seek treatment.

I would like to also express my strong support for the death penalty amendment to be offered by Mr. GEKAS of Pennsylvania or myself. I have supported a Federal death penalty for drug traffickers who kill for quite some time—it is time for Congress to enact this much needed provision. Today many of my colleagues will argue that the cost of prosecuting a capital punishment case is too great and that it will hinder efforts to extradite kingpin drug dealers. Let me remind Members that the death penalty amendment under consideration today only allows the death penalty for those of convicted of intentionally killing a person during the course of committing or in the furtherance of a drug felony or to avoid apprehension for or service of a prison sentence for a drug felony. It does not require the death penalty and provides as an alternative a life sentence or at least 20 years in prison.
